Revolt in the Desert

By Frederick H. Kuh
United Press Staff Writer

London (Wednesday), May 7. Fears of a German-engineered coup d'etat in French Syria, similar to the one which touched off the "war of oil" in Iraq, developed early today after disclosure that Syrian Moslem Nationalists have virtually wrecked the British consulate in Damascus.

Hostilities in Iraq were reported spreading—after a breakdown of neutral peace feelers—with British bombers blasting destructively at Iraqi military positions and weakening the five-day siege of Habbaniyah air base, 65 miles west of Bagdad.

British quarters took a grave view of the reports from Syria, where Germany's seizure of airdromes might prove the blow to drive the British out of Iraq and might yield to Adolf Hitler's fuel-hungry war machine the oil of Iraq.

Revolt Among Arabs Feared

The wrecking of the British consulate in Damascus, presumably on Sunday, was taken by some British quarters to indicate that Germany is attempting to stir up a revolt throughout the Arab world.

Germany, it was added, may not even find it necessary to instigate an anti-British coup in Syria if pressure now being brought on the Vichy government gives Germany the foothold Hitler is reported here to be demanding in the French colonies.

The shelling of Habbaniyah air base by Iraqi artillery was said officially to have slackened off considerably as result of the new R. A. F. attacks.

Oil Stores Blown Up

Axis reports said that 3,000 British troops within the besieged base on the Euphrates, including Australians, were completely encircled, but that the Iraqi forces were unable to storm Habbaniyah because it is surrounded by barricades of high tension wires.

Iraqi artillery, these reports said, is constantly shelling the base in an effort to destroy its powerhouse providing electricity for the wire barricades.

[A Reuters dispatch from Vichy, according to the Associated Press, said that Iraq troops attacked British forces yesterday at Basra and that a "very violent battle" ensued. The dispatch quoted a communique it said was issued yesterday by the Iraq general staff official news agency.]

It was admitted by the German radio tonight, in a Bagdad dispatch, that British engineers had succeeded in blowing up a number of oil

Beaten on a Dark Street

Refugee Editor Murdered Here; Cab Driver Found Him in Daze

Robbery Motive Seen As Police Hunt Purse; Victim Fled From Nazis

DR. HEINRICH SIMON.

Dr. Heinrich Simon, 61, a refugee from Nazi Germany, who in pre-Hitler days was editor of the liberal Frankfurter Zeitung, died in Garfield Hospital yesterday morning—victim of a murder on "some little dark street."

Inspector Bernard W. Thompson, chief of detectives, said last night that he had an open mind on the case.

The investigators leaned toward the theory of robbery. They pointed out that Dr. Simon had been stripped of everything in his pockets except a streetcar transfer.

However, they didn't entirely rule out the possibility of some kind of international intrigue, even though friends of Dr. Simon said he had broken completely with his past in Germany.

Police were trying to learn where Dr. Simon—a Ph. D.—was from 9 o'clock Monday night to between 2 and 3 Tuesday morning, when he returned, mortally wounded, to his apartment.

The street car transfer, found in his pocket, was counted on as a possible clew. This was issued some time after midnight on the Cabin John line, which extends far out into suburban Maryland.

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, said Capital Transit Co. officials told detectives that the transfer was issued to a passenger traveling east-bound, indicating that Dr. Simon might have sought an evening of amusement at Glen Echo.

The motorman and conductor of the car will be interviewed this morning to determine whether they remembered seeing Dr. Simon, and, if so, whether they saw him with any companions.

The last man to see Dr. Simon before he entered his apartment was James Proudfoot, 25, of 1136 Abbey Place Northeast, driver of

Nazis Hammer At Liverpool For 6th Night

R. A. F. Bombs Cities On the Middle Rhine And Invasion Coast

By the Associated Press

London (Wednesday), May 7.—German bombers blasted at the Merseyside area about Liverpool a sixth successive time last night and early today but the raid was described as less severe than previous ones.

Raiders operating singly in many places fanned out from the southwest coast to northern Ireland and Scotland, but the attack slowed down after a brief intensity over Scotland.

Reports indicated few casualties and only slight damage.

Eight German planes were reported downed during the night by British fighters.

(The German radio heard in New York reported "the first success reports have already come in" on Nazi air attacks against England. The radio told of "numerous fires and destruction in industrial and harbor installations of the British sphere reaching up to Scotland.")

The British announced yesterday that the R. A. F. had made a great foray Monday night and Tuesday morning on the industrial middle Rhine and the continental coast from St. Nazaire to Norway. They said that nine German raiders were destroyed during the previous

Gains Range to $2 In Stock Upsurge

By the Associated Press

New York, May 6.—Bullish spirit abounded in Wall Street markets today, bearing sharp gains in stocks, bonds and a long list of speculative commodities.

In the Stock Exchange the turnover was 907,940 shares, second largest in 1941. Steel, oil, rail and specialty issues led the upturn with advances running to as much as $2 a share.

Some of the speculative commodities soared to highest figures in two to four years.

English Need Oil Worse Than They, Nazis Say

Berlin Jubilantly Calls Iraq Stoppage A Body Blow to Fleet

By the Associated Press

Berlin, May 6.—Axis occupation of eight Aegean islands dominating the sea approaches to Turkey and the Dardanelles was announced today as Germans boasted the Reich now is better off than Britain in the vital problem of petroleum—thanks to Iraq's throttling of the oil pipeline to Haifa.

Two of the islands seized were Lesbos (Mytilene) and Chios (Khios), both within sight of the Turkish coast. It was announced that units of the German army occupied them yesterday, but it was not explained whether the troops were flown there or transported by ship.

The other six—Amorgos, Anaphe, Ios, Thera, Naxos and Paros, of the Kykladon (Cyclades) group which sprawls across the Aegean north of Crete—were announced by the Fascist high command to have been taken under Italian occupation. With the Dodecanese already in Italian hands, the Axis thus regards the Aegean as closed to British traffic.

The cutting of the pipeline carrying Iraq's oil to Britain's Mediterranean fleet was emphasized by Nazi spokesmen as a body blow to British naval supremacy in the Middle East.

Whereas Britain began the war much better off than Germany on the oil front, Germans said, the situation now is reversed. Germany now has the advantage, for four reasons:

(1) Her large production of synthetic gasoline, (2) Rumanian oil supplies, (3) "Rich Russian oil supplies," and (4) Germany's inland oil transportation facilities, which are not as vulnerable to attack as Britain's high seas tanker fleet.

Britain, a spokesman said, now is paying the penalty for failure to develop synthetic fuel, for concentrating her oil refineries and stores in coastal regions within bomber range, and for her dependence on tankers.

Dictator Finds a Job

Molotoff Resigns as Premier And Stalin Takes Over Office

By Henry Shapiro
United Press Staff Writer

Moscow, May 6.—Josef V. Stalin tonight became premier of Russia, his first government office although he has been the Soviet strong man for 17 years, after the resignation of Viacheslaff M. Molotoff, who had served as both premier and foreign commissar.

Molotoff becomes vice premier under Stalin as well as retaining his direction of foreign policy, the announcement said.

By assuming the premiership, or chairmanship of the council of people's commissars, the 62-year-old Stalin achieved the same leadership and power held by Nicolai Lenin before the latter's death in 1924.

The Supreme Soviet has accepted the resignation of the 51-year-old Molotoff as premier—a position he held for 10 years as the titular head of Russia—and "appointed" Stalin to the office, it was said.

The official announcement, blared over all Russian radio stations late tonight, said that Molotoff had been "over-burdened" in his dual role and had "repeatedly asked"

Stimson Declares for Naval Protection of Arms Shipments; Pepper Urges Seizure of Bases

Florida Senator Asks Occupation Of Dakar, Azores And Singapore

By Robert C. Albright

In a warlike speech that transcended the question of convoys, Senator Pepper (Democrat), of Florida, yesterday demanded that the United States occupy points of vantage in both oceans and "take the initiative away from these braggarts."

He urged the Administration to "get tough" with the dictators. America, he said, could "hunt them down as the hounds would" on the sea and "seek them out like we did the Barbary pirates, for they are in the same class."

Noninterventionist Senators tried vainly to break through the speech with questions. Pepper would not yield. Later Senators Clark, of Missouri; Bone, of Washington, and McCarran, of Nevada (Democrats), joined in a round-robin reply. They accused Pepper of war intentions and Hitler methods.

Would Level Tokyo

The Florida Democrat, who first forecast the present aid-to-Britain course, said Americans were "willing to spill their blood" to insure survival of freedom and "a few lives lost now" would avert wholesale blood spilling later on.

He proposed that the United States occupy Greenland, Iceland, the Azores, the Cape Verde and the Canary Islands, Dakar and Singapore, "guarding the exits of the Old World from which Hitler expects ultimately to launch an attack upon us."

He urged that enough American bombers be lent to China, and enough American aviators volunteer "to make a shambles of Tokyo." Japan, he said, should be given a taste of its own war in China, before, as Italy did to France, "she stabs us in the back."

Time to Make Up Minds

To insure delivery of British supplies, he said America could build a bridge in effect from Greenland and Iceland to England, or construct a lane of ships directly to England, protected by planes overhead and destroyers, cruisers and battleships on the sea.

"How much longer do we wait to take the initiative?" he asked. "When do we see enough to rouse us from our lethargy?"

He said America should "here and now tell the world we are going to get goods to England."

"The time has come when the American people have got to make up their minds. They expect leadership from their Government. For a month we have been paralyzed. The people are waiting for leadership."

As a first step, he said, there should be a declaration by the

Billions More To Be Sought By Treasury For Defense

By Alfred Friendly

President Roosevelt has ordered a tremendous upward revision of America's $40,000,000,000 defense and war aid program, of which his request for more heavy bombers is only a first installment, it was learned yesterday.

His aides are preparing new appropriation estimates, for early transmission to Congress, that will involve billions more in arms expenditures and—unavoidably—billions more in taxes.

The studies are not yet far enough along to have jelled into any specific sum of dollars that will be asked, but officials said that present budget estimates of $19,000,000,000 spending in the coming fiscal year will be far exceeded.

The $7,000,000,000 recently appropriated by Congress for lend-lease aid to Great Britain and other friendly nations is already an out-of-date figure, it was said. Outlays under the lend-lease program are already expected to go above this total, perhaps even doubling it.

Quotes President

Officials pointed out as one evidence of the huge new program the President's own statement in his weekend tax letter to Chairman Robert L. Doughton of the Ways and Means Committee.

"The President informed Doughton that the $3,500,000,000 in new taxes being asked by the Administration 'represents the minimum of our revenue requirements.'

"The revised spending estimates, it was said, will call for speedier production of munitions of every type, for vast plant expansion, for quicker construction of cargo ships and the two-ocean Navy.

Continuing spread of the war abroad is given as the chief reason for the huge increase in the defense program. War dangers, officials believe, are even closer than they were late last year when the present budget was planned.

Sparing No Expense

Extension of the war to Africa and Asia and threats that it may extend even further have increased American responsibilities, it was said. As America's stake in a British victory has increased, spending estimates have gone up.

Decision to let the spending totals "go through the roof" is a sign that the President has adopted the view that the country must engage in an all-out aid effort.

As the billions of dollars start pouring out of the Treasury, it was expected that this all-out spending program would be translated into sweeping expansion of industrial plant, into broadened Government control over industry, into an even

'Time Is Short,' Laborite Says

By the United Press

London, May 6.—The Churchill government, staking its life on a vote of confidence in Parliament, appealed to the United States today for fuller and faster aid to defeat the Axis war machines on the battle fronts of Europe, Africa and Asia.

Appeals were raised from the Laborite benches by Hastings Bertrand Lees-Smith for "complete cooperation of the British and United States navies" to permit the dispatch of British warships to the Mediterranean to "transform the whole war" there.

Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, opening the full-dress debate expected to last two days or more, said that faster and "more certain" aid from the United States would shorten the war and give Britain victory in both the Battles of the Atlantic and the Mediterranean.

In the House of Lords, Government Leader Lord Moyne declared that Britain's losses in weapons in the evacuation from Greece already have been made up by new equipment reaching Egypt and that "with ever-increasing help from the United States we are hoping to send more and more support."

The House of Lords voted unanimous approval of the Churchill government's conduct of the war, both in the Balkans and the Near East, on a motion introduced by Lord Moyne.

The motion is the same as that being debated in Commons stating: "That this House approves the policy of His Majesty's government in sending help to Greece and declares its confidence that our operations in the Middle East and other theaters of war will be pursued by the government with utmost vigor."

Eden struck the keynote of the

Lend-Lease Action to Date Is Insufficient, Secretary Says

By John G. Norris

Secretary of War Stimson last night urged use of the United States Navy to "make secure the seas for deliveries of our munitions to Great Britain."

"Unless," he cautioned, "we on our side are ready to sacrifice and, if need be, die for the conviction that the freedom of America must be saved, it will not be saved."

Declaring that "we have taken our place definitely behind the warring democracies and against the aggressors in defense of our freedom," Stimson said that what has been done to date under the defense and lend-lease programs "is not sufficient."

"While we hold in our hands the instrument ready and able to make all these steps effective, shall we now flinch and permit these munitions to be sunk in the Atlantic Ocean?" he asked, and then added: "Our entire history shows no precedent to make such a supposition credible."

His speech, over the N. B. C. and Mutual radio networks, was made with President Roosevelt's tacit approval. White House Secretary Stephen Early told reporters: "You may assume that he talked to the President about it."

Stimson recalled that it was "the violation of law and humanity involved in unrestricted submarine warfare" which caused the United States to go to war in 1917, and added:

"Today Germany by these same illegal means is not only seeking to frighten our commerce and our vessels from the Atlantic; she has extended even into the Western Hemisphere a zone into which she has forbidden us to enter. Hitler has not only torn up all the rules of international law but he is expanding his lawless activities into our hemisphere."

The War Secretary did not use the word "convoys"—an expression that has stirred heated debate in Congress—but there was no question that he was advocating direct action by the American Navy however needed to get war supplies to Britain.

The address was regarded as the strongest yet made in such direction by a ranking Government official. Less than two weeks ago, Secretary of State Hull declared that aid to England "must reach its destination" and Secretary of the Navy Knox likewise declared the United States must see that the munitions reach England.

Blow That Smashed Piraeus

Single Bomb Hits T.N.T. Ship, Wrecks Port, Sinks 16 Vessels

On April 27, when German troops triumphantly entered Athens, J. Wes Gallagher flashed the first word of the occupation to the outside world. Thereafter Gallagher was unheard from until yesterday when, via courier to Berlin, came the following detailed story of the German bombings of Piraeus, a story written on the day the Germans entered Athens and—apparently—closed down communications until the flow of Balkan news could be diverted through Berlin.

By J. Wes Gallagher

Athens, via Berlin, April 27 (Delayed).—A single German bomb, dropped by a low-diving Stuka on Piraeus Harbor April 6, the first night of the Nazi attack on Greece, caused a munitions explosion which destroyed 17 steamships and wrecked $10,000,000 worth of harbor works.

Piraeus never recovered from the awesome devastation of that one blow.

That was the first swift omen of defeat. Spreading destruction from the Vardar Valley to Crete, the German Luftwaffe virtually alone broke the British-Greek resistance in three short weeks.

This is the unanimous conclusion of neutral observers who watched the Greeks fight the Italians for six months only to go down so quickly before the Germans.

The Piraeus attack, in bright moonlight on Sunday night, April 6, was probably the most successful single raid on any harbor since the European war started.

The disaster was partly due to official negligence.

A munitions ship loaded with T. N. T. had arrived in Piraeus Saturday. In the six-hour Sunday night raid, a dive-bomber dropped low over the harbor and set fire to a lighter near the munitions ship, which itself soon caught fire.

A few berths away was the British cruiser Calcutta. Most of her crew were in Athens celebrating the victory of Cape Matapan.

While the skeleton crew remaining struggled to get the cruiser out to sea, the fire ate deeper into the

Maj. Gen. Arnold Reports to Roosevelt On Trip to Britain

By George Bookman

President Roosevelt yesterday took action, featured by a 90-minute meeting with his "War Cabinet," to prepare Government machinery further for any test.

The long conference heard a full report from Maj. Gen. H. H. Arnold, chief of the Army Air Corps, who has just returned from London. The White House said one topic under discussion was means to speed the President's request for more heavy bombers, believed to be a result of Arnold's observations abroad.

Meanwhile, the following other defense steps were made public:

1. A veteran Army officer, Maj. Gen. James H. Burns, executive officer to Assistant War Secretary Patterson, became "right-hand man" to Harry L. Hopkins, lease-lend supervisor. The President created a Division of Defense Aid Reports in the Office of Emergency Management and made Burns its executive officer.

2. The White House indicated that the old seven-man National Defense Advisory Commission, first instrument for running the emergency defense effort, is being liquidated in favor of Office of Production Management and Office of Emergency Management. Functions of its Agriculture Division, headed by Chester C. Davis, were transferred yesterday to the office of Agriculture Secretary Wickard, and it was intimated that the transportation division, headed by Ralph Budd, the last remaining NDAC office, would be abolished soon.

3. In line with this, the President accepted the resignation of Davis from the NDAC. Davis is now president of the Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis.

The top-flight advisers who heard Gen. Arnold report to the President were Secretary of State Hull, Secretary of the Treasury Mor-

House Favors Giving Britain Axis Ships

Kills All Moves to Bar Transfer; Easy Passage Of Bland Bill Forecast

By Hedley Donovan

The House yesterday voted down all moves to prevent transfer to Britain of Axis shipping in American waters and prepared to give final approval today to the Bland bill.

Isolationist protests that such a transfer would be "a warlike act" were overridden in a wild session punctuated by booing, catcalls, rebel yells and standing ovations.

Representative Bland (Democrat), of Virginia, chairman of the Merchant Marine Committee, predicted passage of his bill today by at least 100 votes.

The bill gives the President power to take over for the use of this country or Britain some 450,000 tons of foreign shipping now idle in American ports, including 26 Italian and two German vessels already under "protective custody."

An amendment offered by Representative Culkin (Republican), of New York, providing that no vessels of one belligerent nation could be turned over to another, was defeated by 161 to 131 in a teller vote.

Administration forces on voice votes overwhelmed two more

Building Laborers Dispute Settled

A two-month wage dispute which threatened to tie up defense and housing projects in this area was settled last night.

Agreement on a two-year contract between the A. F. of L. Building Laborers Council and four builders' associations was announced by Federal Conciliator Frank J. Sheehan.

A strike of 7,000 construction laborers, scheduled for yesterday, had been postponed until tomorrow at Sheehan's behest. Last night's conference ended the disagreement.

The contract provides for an increase in pay.

Roosevelt Suffers Stomach Upset

President Roosevelt was ill with an upset stomach last night, but his physician said it was "nothing serious."

The Chief Executive canceled all appointments, including his scheduled press conference, after his doctor, Rear Admiral Ross T. McIntire, found he had 1½ degrees of fever.

Mr. Roosevelt complained of feeling poorly after a meeting with his "War Cabinet" yesterday morning.

12 Americans Missing at Sea In Sinking of British Ship

By International News Service

Ottawa, May 6.—Twelve Americans engaged in active war aid to England, including Kenneth B. Collings, correspondent and Marine Corps flier, have been lost at sea from a ship which was sunk "by enemy action," the government announced today. The ship was bound for England from Canada.

Collings, who flew with the Marines in 1918, later piloted ocean planes for Pan American Airways and in 1935 covered the Italo-Ethiopian conflict as a war correspondent, was one of 11 American warplane ferry pilots lost from the unnamed ship. The other American lost was a member of the Canadian army.

The government announcement described the American airmen as having been engaged to fly American-made bombers across the Atlantic to Britain, but Collings at least, it was learned, had done no transocean ferrying but was under contract to fly planes between factories and aviation centers in England.

The government statement said the Americans, along with 110 Canadian and British soldiers, sailors, aviators and civilians, including at

Text of Stimson's Address Advocating Greater Use of Navy in Aiding Britain

Control of Oceans Must Be Retained, War Secretary Says

The text of the address last night by Secretary of War Stimson follows:

You will excuse a word of preface as to the personal position from which I speak. Today I am being called a warmonger by some of those who oppose our present efforts at national defense. As a matter of fact, for many years after the Great War, both as a private citizen and as Secretary of State, I labored with my full strength for the establishment of a reign of law among the nations under which their controversies should be settled by judicial methods instead of force.

There was a time when such a movement seemed full of hope. Today that time has passed—temporarily, we trust—and our hopes of peace have been dashed by international aggression. The world is facing so great a crisis that all our efforts must be turned toward the defense of our Nation's safety. For that reason tonight I am speaking of that crisis and of our defense in meeting it.

In 1933 a group of men under the leadership of Adolf Hitler obtained possession of the government of Germany and overthrew the German Republic. Mr. Hull, our Secretary of State, has recently well described the methods of those men as the methods of brabarism. Both within and without Germany they have set back the clock of time more than five centuries. They have embarked on a scheme of conquest which is avowedly intended to be world-wide. For that purpose they have built up in secret an immense military machine based on the forced labor of Germany.

They have already attacked, conquered and occupied Austria, Czecho-Slovakia, Poland, Norway, Denmark, Holland, Belgium, Luxembourg, France, Rumania, Hungary, Bulgaria and Yugoslavia, and have reduced the people of those 13 countries to a condition of semislavery to the Nazi despotism. They have attached to their axis as vassals two other nations dominated by the same purpose of military conquest—Italy, guilty of unprovoked attacks upton Ethiopia, Albania and Greece, and Japan, guilty of a similar attack upon her neighbor, China.

Back to the Dark Ages

By this conquest they have destroyed the western civilization which had been slowly building up in Europe ever since the Dark Ages. We are so close to these sudden happenings that we can hardly yet realize the havoc which has thus been wrought both within and without the national boundaries of that unhappy continent.

For example, for many centuries humanity has slowly been building up the rule of individual freedom in all its various manifestations; freedom of the person, including the abolition of serfdom and chattel slavery; freedom of the mind, including the freedom to think and to talk and to write with our fellows; freedom of enterprise in our business and commerce; freedom to travel about the world with ever-growing liberty, and finally, the crowning freedom of all, political freedom in respect to the choice of our governments.

This growth in freedom had been so long and so steady that we had come to believe it was soon to be the recognized system of the whole world. All at once it has been dashed aside and trampled on by these Nazi rulers who are proposing to establish a world order in which they shall be the masters and the people of all other nations their slaves. They have left no such thing as individual rights of liberty within their territory or international rights of independence without their territory. Both domestic and international law have gone down under their blows. For the rule of law they have substituted the rule of the Gestapo. The secret police under whose malign terrorism no vestige of personal freedom is safe.

This is the so-called new order which we face today. It has openly announced its hostility to us and to our order. It has been steadily encircling our western world. Its advance agents are already busy among the republics to the south of us building strategic airlines through vital portions of that continent and creeping up toward our Panama Canal. Its armed forces are threatening West Africa looking toward a jumping off place within easy reach of the Brazilian coast. Its propagandists are already vigorously active in our own population.

Hitler and his military associates have seized their opportunities with uncommon skill. They have used their power to inculcate into the plastic minds of a generation of youth the abhorrent and reactionary doctrines of racial intolerance and hatred of other men. They have taken advantage of modern science to develop in secret, while other nations slept, a mechanized striking force of unprecedented power. They have used every method of duplicity and of propaganda to surprise their victim nations with sudden attack. They now arrogantly confront the world, including ourselves, with the alternative of abject surrender or uncompromising forceful resistance.

U. S. Always Has Stood Firm

I cannot recall that the United States throughout its history—even when it was small and weak—has yielded to such a demand. Let us see whether there is any need of changing our policy now. In the first place, this so-called New Order of Hitler is not new; and it has not and never will create order in this world. Hitler's regime of brutal lawlessness is merely one of those temporary reactions, which have occurred at intervals during all of man's long history of progress upward.

Since his origin millions of years ago, ambitious men have many times attempted a world-wide conquest over the liberties of their fellow men. But they have never permanently succeeded and they never will. Hitler has taken advantage of the discontent of a troubled postwar period to impose his rule upon a docile-minded nation which has more than once temporarily yielded its love of liberty to an efficient autocrat. His rise has been facilitated by many an accident which might easily have been prevented.

Many an unwary sentinel of liberty has been caught napping at vital moments. But as has always happened before, the progress of man along the path toward freedom will be taken up again and carried forward with new spirit and with fresh knowledge acquired by the unhappy experiences of the past. To be frightened into a belief that Hitler had created a new and permanent world order would be as naive as it would be cowardly.

In the next place let us examine the strategic conditions which must govern our defense against an admittedly serious danger, albeit it is only temporary.

The people of the United States have been greatly blessed by the geographical conditions of their homeland. Two broad oceans lie to the east and west of us, while north and south of us are only friendly nations of whose intentions and power we have no fear. Thus the instinct of our people in regard to their ocean defense is a sound instinct. There is great possibility of protection in the fact that we have the Atlantic Ocean between us and Europe, and the Pacific Ocean between us and Asia. So long as those oceans are under our own friendly control, their broad waters constitute an insuperable barrier to any armies which may be built up by would-be aggressor governments. But that condition of friendly control is imperative. If it should be lost, the oceans overnight would become easy channels for the path of attack against us.

Air Power Raises New Peril

The development of modern air power greatly intensifies this necessity of friendly control of the oceans. It now makes it necessary for us to command not only the reaches of ocean adjacent to our own shores, but the entire reach of the oceans surrounding the Western Continent; for, if hostile nations possessing powerful armies and air power can once make a landing on the shores of our weaker neighbor nations either north or south of us, our immunity is gone. It would then become a comparatively simple matter for them to establish air bases within striking distance of the great industrial cities which now fill our country. And the only way in which we could prevent this would be the intolerable method of ourselves maintaining armies large enough to command the areas of our continent for thousands of miles beyond our own borders. Such a condition would transform the good neighbor relations which now prevail throughout the American republics, into the same abhorrent system of forceful domination which we are seeking to keep out of the hemisphere. In short, to the nations of America, friendly control of the surrounding oceans is a condition of the reign of freedom and mutual independence which now prevails in that continent.

For over one hundred years the control of the Atlantic Ocean has been exercised by the British fleet. By the Washington treaty of 1922 Great Britain voluntarily consented to parity between her fleet and ours and thus admitted us to an equal share in that control. The significant feature to us of this century-old condition has been that a country speaking our language, possessing our traditions of individual and legal freedom, and inhabited by a population from which considerably more than 50 per cent of our own population is descended, has been accepted by us as a dominant factor in the ocean defense upon which our safety and mode of life depend.

During that century we have accommodated our whole method of life to that situation. We have maintained no large standing armies. We have built populous cities upon our seacoast which are easily vulnerable to attack from the Atlantic Ocean. We have, in short, adopted a mode of national life which is dependent upon the continuance of a sea power of which we ourselves feel in no apprehension.

Today that situation is gravely threatened. The British Isles, which have been a fortress against any despotic approach to our shores through the northern reaches of the Atlantic, are threatened both by attacks from the air and blockade from the sea. If their government should fall, either from starvation or from attack, the British fleet, if it survived at all, would have no adequate base for its continued operations.

If British Isles Should Fall

If the British Isles should fall, all of the great shipyards of Britain would pass into the hands of the aggressor nations, and their maritime shipbuilding capacity, thus augmented, would become six or seven times as large as our own.

Under such conditions our own fleet would be quite unable to protect the Western Hemisphere from the overwhelming sea power which would then confront it. Even today its tonnage is exceeded by the combined tonnage of the Axis powers and, with the enormous preponderance in building capacity which they would then have, command of the entire seas surrounding us would in time inevitably pass into their hands.

Furthermore, we have only just begun to build up our military and air defenses. At least a year will pass before we can have an Army and an air force adequate to meet the air and ground forces which could be brought against us if the control of the seas passed into Axis hands.

Ten months ago we began to build up those air and ground defenses and the progress which has thus far been made has been satisfactory and has surpassed our expectations. But the stubborn fact remains that an adequately constructed and trained air force and Army in a country of this size cannot be created in less than a minimum of two years fit to meet the air forces and army which Germany has been spending six years in producing.

Time is the essential factor and time cannot be had if sea power is lost. Today the wide-flung forces of the British navy are threatened in the North Atlantic, the Mediterranean and in Malaysia. Those thinly spread forces today alone are securing to us that precious time.

None of these facts are new. They have been unfolded before the eyes of us all, if we would take the trouble to read the lesson. They have been the motive of the policy and action of our Government thus far and our people understand them and have approved the course which the Government has so far followed.

Not only have enormous appropriations been passed by the Congress for our own defense but a statute, the so-called Lease and Lend Act, has been passed expressly for the purpose of furnishing aid to Britain and those other beleaguered nations whose defense the Congress has deemed necessary to our own defense. Under that act $7,000,000,000 more have been appropriated to effectuate that assistance. All of these statutes have been passed by overwhelming majorities.

Britain's Life Line Threatened

Now it is becoming every day more clear that all this alone is not sufficient. The life line of Great Britain is threatened. The high-water mark of the Nazi effort is at hand in the shape of an attack on the shipping which furnishes Britain with the means and the nourishment to maintain her battle. Not only does the blockade imperil the delivery to Great Britain of the munitions which we are sending her but the supplies of the food necessary for her population are already becoming gradually impaired. What are we going to do about it?

By the grace of fortune this most dangerous threat on all the threatening horizon is an attack which, if we will, we can successfully meet. While we are struggling to build up an uncompleted Army and an uncompleted Air Force, we have at our hands a naval instrument prepared and ready for just such an emergency in our defense.

Right now, at this crossroads of history, it is within our power, if we choose to use that instrument, to turn the tide of darkness back from the Atlantic world, and, while it is thus held in check, to gain the means which will preclude it forever from attaining its fell purpose. For many years we have been building and maintaining this Navy. We call it our first line of defense. It has been our pride. In it are serving in the cause of patriotism the flower of our young manhood.

If today that Navy should make secure the seas for the delivery of our munitions to Great Britain, it will render as great a service to our own country and to the preservation of American freedom as it has ever rendered in all its glorious history. Supplementing the efforts of the British navy, it can render secure all of the oceans, north and south, west and east, which surround our continent.

In that way it can help to hold in check the onward rush of the tide of Naziism until the other defense forces of all the democracies are completed. This would eventually and permanently confine the malign forces of despotism until the virus has run its course and the tide of freedom has begun to rise again.

Navy's Power Would Be Cut

On the other hand, if our Navy's assistance should be withheld until the power of the British fleet and nation is broken, its own power of execution would at once shrink to but an important fraction of what it could do at the present moment. If we should allow the present strategic moment to pass until the power of the British navy is gone, the power of our Navy would become merely a secondary power, instead of the decisive and winning power in the world contest.

Is it conceivable that the the American people would allow this to happen? After the carefully determined course which we have pursued until this moment; after the clear statements and appeals which have been made by our President in respect to the danger which confronts us; after the overwhelming response to his appeals which has been made by the Congress; after we have taken our place definitely behind the warring democracies and against the aggressor nations in the defense of our freedom; after providing for billions worth of munitions to carry on that defense and while we hold in our hands the instrument ready and able to make all these steps effective, shall we now flinch and permit these munitions to be sunk in the Atlantic Ocean?

Our entire history shows no precedent to make such a supposition credible. Neither the Government nor people of the United States have ever given occasion to make anyone believe that such an act of irresponsibility and indecision would be possible.

The unrestricted submarine warfare which Germany is carrying on in the North Atlantic, sinking ships without warning and without the possibility of saving the lives of their crews, is not a legal blockade under the rules of marine warfare. It has never been recognized as lawful by the United States. America's spokesmen at international conferences have again and again condemned it as a form of piracy. It was expressly the violation of law and humanity involved in unrestricted submarine warfare which in 1917 caused the President and Congress to take up arms in defense of the freedom of the seas.

Today Germany, by these same illegal means, is not only seeking to frighten our commerce and our vessels from the Atlantic; she has extended even into the Western Hemisphere a zone into which she has forbidden us to enter. Hitler has not only torn up all the rules of international law, but he is expanding his lawless activities into our hemisphere.

U. S. Acts Prudently

Our Government is acting with care and prudence. But our own self-defense requires that limits should be put to lawless aggression on the ocean. The President has said that we must not allow the steps which we have already taken to become ineffective.

I do not minimize the danger that confronts us. This is an occasion for grave seriousness but not for gloom or despondency. I have studied the military potency of the Axis powers and I do not underestimate the courage of their men in battle. But I also know well the initiative, the ready aptitude, and the courage of the men of this country. I have become familiar with the plans which are being made by our military and naval leaders for our defense. Provided that we all act with promptness and a united spirit, I have full faith in the outcome.

But I am not one of those who think that the priceless freedom of our country can be saved without sacrifice. It cannot. That has not been the way by which, during millions of years, humanity has slowly and painfully toiled upwards toward a better and more humane civilization. The men who suffered at Valley Forge and won at Yorktown gave more than money to the cause of freedom.

Today a small group of evil leaders have taught the young men of Germany that the freedom of other men and nations must be destroyed. Today those young men are ready to die for that perverted conviction unless we on our side are ready to sacrifice, and, if need be, die for the conviction that the freedom of America must be saved, it will not be saved. Only by a readiness for the same sacrifice can that freedom be preserved.

Russia's Fear Of War Rising, British Say

By Wallace Carroll

London (Wednesday), May 7 (U.P.).—Increasing Soviet fears of involvement in the war and an implied Russian warning to Germany were seen by British quarters today in Moscow's surprise announcement that Josef Stalin has assumed the premiership of Russia.

Official quarters were reluctant to comment immediately but pointed to indications of rising Russian uneasiness and apprehension over Adolf Hitler's expansion, particularly into Russia's own Balkan and Black Sea sphere of vital interests.

The British found it extremely significant that Stalin had considered it advisable to assume combined leadership of the government and Communist Party at a moment when Germany has reached the Dardanelles after conquering the Balkans and establishing Nazi dominance along the west coast of the Black Sea.

Also, it was pointed out, Stalin must be deeply interested in Germany's alleged efforts to incite the Moslems to rebellion by encouraging their nationalist movements in Iraq, Iran and other Near Eastern nations lying at Russia's southern door below the Caspian.

There are British quarters which contend that Stalin has "rejected" a German proposal that Russia adhere to the Axis pact, and these same sources profess to find significance in the fact that Molotoff, as foreign commissar, was the key figure of the Russian-German pact of August, 1939, just before the German invasion of Poland.

Although Molotoff, by the new Soviet decree naming Stalin premier, remains as foreign commissar and is made vice premier to retain large authority, his power has been greatly reduced, according to British impressions.

This, according to one British commentator, seems to fit into the picture of cooler German-Russian relations since Molotoff has been more closely identified with these relations than any other Soviet leader.

However, it is said here that Molotoff's loss of the premiership may or may not mean that "his loss of positions is likely to become a habit."

Selectee Bonus Bill Proposed in Congress

The first draft act bonus bill was proposed in Congress yesterday.

Representative Burdick (Republican), of North Dakota, introduced a bill in the House calling for a bonus of $100 a year for each year's service of persons in the Army and Navy beginning with September 16, 1940, and ending at expiration of the President's national emergency proclamation.

Perform Leading Roles in Defense

Fair Sex Excels At Jobs Requiring Mental Alertness

Are Adept at Tasks Calling for Skill, Patience, Judgment

In the third of a series of special articles on women in America's national defense industries, Inez Robb, International News Service staff writer, tells of unique tasks women are performing in the Nation's gigantic rearmament program.

By Inez Robb,

International News Service Staff Writer.

"I sing of arms, and the man," chanted the Poet Virgil some 2,000 years ago when he set down the first line of "The Aeneid," the epic poem of Imperial Rome. But never before in the history of the world or of war have arms been so important to the fighting man as now when mechanized divisions have devastated a continent.

In the task of providing America with a mechanized army, no task or instrument is too delicate or too gigantic for women workers to master. In the New Departure Division of General Motors Corporation at Bristol, Conn., girls assemble the smallest ball-bearing ever made in this country. The bearing has an outside diameter of 2.7 millimeters and contains three one-millimeter balls almost too small for the eye to see.

At the opposite end of the scale are seven young women in the General Electric laboratories at Schenectady who play important roles in the construction of gigantic electric machinery weighing hundreds of tons and valued in millions. Their work, unique in industry, comprises the turbine calculations department of General Electric.

Lifeblood of Industry

Their calculations of the stresses and strains on turbine parts enable engineers to determine the best types of metal and construction for massive power units through which flows electricity—the lifeblood of American industry—in thousands of plants humming with defense orders.

When Miss Harriet Krasnow checks in for work at the New Departure plant of General Motors, she does not pull off her gloves, roll up her sleeves and start in. Indeed, she does the very reverse. First, as do all the other girls in her department, Harriet puts on a very becoming powder-blue rayon smock with long sleeves. And then she pulls on a pair of the finest kid gloves that money can buy.

Only then is she ready to go to work. Harriet, because her hands and fingers are small and nimble, is employed in assembly of the smallest ball bearing made in this country.

Until the Second World War engulfed Europe, such tiny bearings had always been imported from abroad. After Harriet has assembled these infinitesimal bearings, they are used in aviation instruments, controls, engines, pulleys and as stack bearings for variable pitch propellers with stresses up to 300,000 pounds.

Now the dimensions on which these bearings are manufactured are built to one ten-thousandth of an inch, or about one-thirtieth of the thickness of a human hair. The balls are but one three-hundredth of the thickness of a human hair. Because these dimensions are so fine, the assembly in many instances is done in a room in which the temperature is kept constant in order that gauges are not disturbed by variations in temperature.

So Harriet does not put on the powder-blue rayon smock because is is becoming, or slip her hands into expensive kid gloves because they keep her pinkies clean. Harriet wears that rayon smock because it produces no lint, and the lint from either a cotton garment or a woolen sweater would impair the functioning of the bearing.

She wears the gloves because any touch of a human hand on the bearing leaves perspiration or saline deposits, which would result in rust spots.

After a certain stage, the bearings are handled either with gloves or with tweezers. Harriet even works at a stainless steel table covered with a specially prepared cellophane. And the room in which she works is air-conditioned and scrupulously cleaned, for dust would impair the bearings no less than lint.

Packing the bearings is almost as painstaking a process as their manufacture.

"The girls who do such work are especially trained and must be particularly adaptable and of high intelligence. In fact," boasted W. R. Crumb, assistant to the general manager of this General Motors unit—and why shouldn't he boast?—"the group of girls working in this particular field would compare favorably in intelligence, looks and smartness with those on any college campus!"

More than 1,100 women are employed on these small bearings at one of General Motors Connecticut plants. The plant there turns out over 150,000 such bearings daily.

The delicacy of the manual operations in assembling these tiny ball bearings is no more minute than the delicacy of the mental calculations which General Electric's seven slide-rule queens bring to bear on giant turbines.

Workaday World Complex

Miss Emily T. Hannan, a personable young woman, heads this feminine brain trust in the Schenectady laboratories. Their workaday world revolves in a complicated universe of higher mathematics and logarithms, slide rules, intergrating machines and precision measuring instruments.

Although none of these young women is an engineer, they can give any engineer cards, spades, and big and little casino in the realm of higher mathematics and still win in a walk. These gals can and do employ a 20-place logarithm table in many of their calculations. Most engineers freely admit they have never seen a logarithm table of more than seven places.

Turbines are tailor-made. No two turbine jobs are ever handled exactly the same way. From the large windows of the fifth-floor office which Miss Hannan and her staff occupy, they survey a vast assortment of machinery, castings, mammoth steel sections and piping which reposes temporarily in the bay between two of the big turbine shops. Huge cranes lift ponderous materials on and off flat cars moving in and out of the great shops.

It is little Miss Hannan and her associates who predetermine just exactly what shape this mass of material will eventually assume in the finished turbine. Their desks are covered with graphs and charts which will shape and size these materials in finished form.

The girl who was graduated from the College of New Rochelle with the intention of becoming a math teacher and who landed a job at General Electric by accident is now one of the determining cogs in the great wheel grinding ceaselessly for national defense. For the work Emily Hannan does and supervises represents power in the making—power to be translated by great turbines into the electricity that whirs faster and ever faster the machines producing tanks, planes and guns for America.

genthau, Secretary of War Stimson, Secretary of Navy Knox, Chief of Staff Gen. George C. Marshall, Chief of Naval Operations Admiral Harold R. Stark, and Rear Admiral John H. Towers, chief of the Naval Bureau of Aeronautics. Hopkins, who acts as a clearing-house on war aid matters for the President, also attended.

None would comment on the meeting afterward.

An executive order creating Gen. Burns' new post in the lease-lend administration made clear that it will be one of the key jobs in the defense picture. The order gave formal status to work Burns has been doing for some months.

The duties of the director of the Division of Defense Air Reports were defined as follows:

1. Coordinate requests for lend-lease aid, acting as a central clearing house for reports and transactions.

2. Keep accounts and records of lend-lease operations.

3. Prepare reports for the President on progress of lend-lease aid and act generally as an information clearing house on this phase of aid to friendly nations.

Gen. Burns was appointed by a military order which said that his functions would be "essentially of a military character."

The transfer of agricultural defense work was revealed in a letter from the President to Agriculture Secretary Wickard which set the following goals for the farm program:

Guarantee of an adequate supply of food for the needs of the United States and for supplemental needs of "those nations whose defense is essential to the defense of this country."

Provision of sufficient agricultural raw materials for expanded defense production.

In asking Wickard to take over the NDAC farm functions, the President requested that he create within the structure of his immediate office, an "Office for Defense Agricultural Relations." It was not known who would head this new bureau.

The new office is to have the following functions, the President said:

1. Serve as a clearing house for agricultural defense problems.

2. Help coordinate the scattered defense operations in the Agriculture Department.

3. Aid the Agriculture Secretary in keeping in touch with other defense agencies on farm problems.

4. Assist in the planning of "adjustments" in the farm program in order to meet defense needs.

Davis, in tendering his resignation from the NDAC, said it would "clear the way for the remaining steps in the liquidation of the Agricultural Division."

Accepting his resignation with "real regret," President Roosevelt said Davis had discharged his responsibilities with "vigor and ability."

Pepper Asks U.S. to 'Get Tough' And Seize Atlantic, Pacific Isles

President and approval by Congress of "a state of national emergency" to provide a "partnership" in leadership between the President and Congress. Next, he said, there should be "full mobilization of mental and spiritual forces" with a "draft of brains, because the best brains haven't been mobilized."

He referred repeatedly to Japan as "the bandits of the East" and to the European Axis as "these braggarts of the totalitarian world."

Denounces Lindbergh

Japan, he said, was waiting for Germany to engage us in the Atlantic so she could become "another Mussolini and plunge a stiletto into our backs."

A denunciation of Charles A. Lindbergh as "the epitome of appeasement" brought Clark first to his feet, but Pepper shut off all interruptions. McCarran took the floor as he finished, but Pepper left the chamber immediately.

"The Senator is going out, but the American people are not going out with him," McCarran shouted after him. The Nevadan said he "wondered if the Senator was speaking for the Administration;" that if he was, "then count me out."

"There is only one thing for America to do and that is to take care of America," said McCarran. "For God's sake do not let us say that we will lead this country into war."

Bone said Pepper's argument that lives lost now would avert greater losses later was "an astonishing slant" and Clark said he was "shocked by the callousness of those remarks."

Likens Pepper to Hitler

The Missouri Democrat called Pepper "one of the most adept and vociferous advocates of Hitlerism in the world" and said Pepper "frankly advocates a dictatorship."

"The implication is that if the President is reluctant to be a fuehrer, there might be someone else near at hand," he added.

Clark said both Pepper and Senator Guffey (Democrat), of Pennsylvania who advocated convoys last week "essentially made attacks on the President for his failure to put us into this war." He again read to the Senate the Democratic and Republican platform positions against war entry.

"My theory is that the Senator from Florida will get us into this war before we have a chance to vote on it," Clark said.

He declared Pepper's "only trouble in discussing Lindbergh is that he never will be able to approach the stature of Lindbergh either in 1927 or 1941."

Insure Aid, Texas Asks

Austin, Tex., May 6 (AP).—The Texas House of Representatives adopted by a vote of 110 to 15 today a resolution asking Federal authorities to insure continued production and delivery to the Democratic nations at war.

Questioned by a member as to his interpretation of the word "insure," the author, Representative James Taylor, a National Guard lieutenant, replied:

"Insure to me means convoys to the port of Liverpool, if necessary."

more enlarged Army and Navy, activities which all cost money.

Information that new appropriation requests are being prepared was obtained after Treasury Secretary Morgenthau told his press conference Monday that he saw nothing which would lead him to alter his spending estimates of $19,000,000,000 for the year. He said his figure of $3,500,000,000 to be raised by new taxes "stands."

Officials offered no explanation for the apparent contradiction between Morgenthau's statements and their activities.

Army Calls D. C. Nurse

It was announced yesterday at Third Corps Area Headquarters that Second Lieut. Martha McKool, Reserve nurse, 217 E Street Southeast, is ordered to active duty with the United States Army for a minimum period of one year, effective on or about May 12, 1941. Lieut. McKool will report for duty to Fort Story, Va.

Molotoff Resigns, Stalin Takes Over

The president of Russia is Mikhail I. Kalinin, president of the presidium of the Supreme Council of the SSR created under the Soviet constitution of 1936, but the office carries little authority.

It was indicated that although Stalin's formal authority is now as broad as it can be there will be little change in Russian policies inasmuch as Molotoff in handling both internal and foreign affairs had worked in close cooperation with Stalin and under his supervision.

In this connection it is recalled that in many recent developments of Russian policy, such as the recent signing in the Kremlin of the new pact with Japan, Stalin appeared as the key figure in the ceremonies and has sat in on frequent international conferences here.

Tonight's announcement came as a distinct surprise, as do most Russian official decisions.

However, the announcement stressed that Molotoff will remain in direct supervision of Russia's foreign policy at a grave moment when all Russian leaders are warning of the threatened spread of the "second imperialist war" and its menaces to Russia's own frontiers.

Only last night Stalin, in a speech at graduation exercises for 16 Red Army military academies and 9 military departments of civil higher educational establishments, had told of Russia's swelling defense preparations and determination to be prepared for "any surprises."

Molotoff, premier since 1931 and reelected by the Supreme Soviet in January of 1938, became foreign commissar on May 4, 1939, just four months before the outbreak of the war, when he suddenly was chosen to replace Maxim Litvinoff.

Molotoff formerly was secretary of the central committee of the Communist Party.

House Favors Giving Britain Axis Ships

amendments restricting the scope of the bill, both introduced by Representative Oliver (Republican), of Maine. One would have permitted the President to purchase or charter but not "requisition" foreign vessels, while the other flatly prohibited the transfer of any of the vessels taken over under the Bland bill to any foreign power, whether a belligerent or not.

Bland told the House approval of the Culkin amendment would be "the first evidence of weakening, of appeasement, of yielding to the Fuehrer."

He said the United States must help Britain now or "fight this war ultimately without any allies against the rest of the world."

"If convoying ships is necessary," he added, "I'm ready."

As the House moved toward approval of the Bland bill, the Merchant Maritime Commission yesterday disclosed that $6,000,000 from the President's emergency fund has been set aside for repair of the Italian and German vessels seized in American harbors March 30.

A commission spokesman said some of the damaged vessels are already in private shipbuilding yards and that others are ready for repair as soon as shipyard space is available. Damage to some of the Axis merchant ships is so slight that they can be prepared for service without a trip to the yards, he said.

House debate on the Bland bill took a boisterous turn when Representative Ramspeck (Democrat), of Georgia, charged Representative Short (Republican), of Missouri, and other opponents of the bill with being "long on invective but short in faith in the American people."

"If I had no more faith in the people of the United States than he seems to have," Ramspeck cried, "I would run into a hole like a rabbit when a hound gets after me."

A wave of booking swept the Republican aisles. A few minutes later scores of G. O. P. Representatives burst into cheering when Representative Johnson (Democrat), of Texas, in an attack on "self-appointed leaders of defeatism," mentioned the name of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh.

"I want the record to show," Johnson answered sharply, "that all the applause came from the Republican side."

Johnson was interrupted again when he asserted that opponents of the shipping bill were dealing "loosely and recklessly with the truth."

Representative Rich (Republican), of Pennsylvania, demanded motives of members of Congress, that the words be expunged from the record as a reflection on the but Speaker Rayburn ruled that Johnson's remarks could stand.

Passage of the shipping bill would be an unmistakable step toward war, Representative Robsion (Republican), of Kentucky, told the House, "and that war would be the longest, costliest, bloodiest conflict we ever fought."

Representative Harris (Democrat), of Virginia, a Norfolk newspaperman making his first House speech, asked his colleagues to "stop quibbling as to whether Adolf Hitler would regard this as an act of war.

"He will not strike at us until he is ready," Harris said, "and when he is ready he will need no pretext. I say we must fight the devil with fire."

Majority Leader McCormack, of Massachusetts, contended that supporters of the Culkin amendment were following "the same old sniping method" employed against the lend-lease bill and other measures.

"They haven't the courage to come out against the bill, so they try to make it ineffective by an amendment," he asserted.

The amendment was carried by a teller vote of 143 to 122, with a score of Democrats joining the G. O. P. bloc.

Single Nazi Bomb Hit T. N. T. Ship

T.N.T. ship.

Four hours later, just as the Calcutta got away, the munitions ship blew up with a tremendous double explosion which rocked Athens, 5 miles distant, and spread burning wreckage all over Piraeus.

In the resulting fires, six other ocean-going vessels and ten coastal ships burned and sank.

For several blocks, wharves were blown to pieces or destroyed by fire.

During the subsequent nights, the Luftwaffe continuously attacked the harbor, laying mines and dropping bombs.

From the roof of my hotel I watched a large freighter hit a mine and sink in broad daylight. Ship losses were closely guarded secrets, but every day coastal ships left the harbor and were never heard from again.

Besides the Piraeus affair, the following is an incomplete list of the German air force's war effort in Greece, compiled from first-hand knowledge and reliable information:

Sinking of 22 coastal steamers and at least ten ocean-going steamers crowded with supplies and in some instances with troops;

Sinking of two new Greek destroyers, the Hydra and Psara, and damaging of a third, the Kondouriotis;

Virtual destruction of the Greek air force and the R. A. F. units in Greece within two weeks after the war started;

Destruction of 41 Yugoslav planes on the ground one hour after they landed in Greece;

Disruption of the Greek army's retreat from Albania, making it impossible for lines to reform and continue effective resistance.

The Luftwaffe threw hundreds of planes into the air to overwhelm aerial opposition and then to work with the land army like the parts of a well-oiled watch.

Fighters and short-range bombers stayed in the air over the front during every daylight hour, bombing troops and attacking roads.

Correspondents visiting the front could not drive for more than ten minutes on any road in Greece outside of Athens without being bombed and machine-gunned.

Longer-range bombers attacked seaports, dropped mines and roved out to sea to attack shipping.

an Arrow cab. He voluntarily went to police last night and told of picking up Dr. Simon at Seventeenth and Church Streets Northwest, shortly before 2 a. m. Tuesday.

He drove Dr. Simon to his home, the Concord Apartments, 1815 New Hampshire Avenue Northwest. He said the German exile, who has been lecturing on music since his arrival in Washington about a year and a half ago, appeared to be "dazed."

Just before he lapsed into unconsciousness in his fifth-floor apartment, Dr. Simon tried to tell his wife, Mrs. Irma Simon, what had happened to him.

"They beat me on the head . . . in some little dark street," he mumbled to her in German.

Church Street is both little and dark.

Police last night broadcast a radio lookout for Dr. Simon's gray hat, his horn-rimmed spectacles, his wallet and his zipper change purse. All these were missing when he returned home after one of his customary nocturnal walks.

An autopsy at the District Morgue showed that Dr. Simon had died of a skull fracture, caused by a blow behind the ear with "either a blackjack or a piece of covered pipe."

Mrs. Simon, who did not discover her husband's injuries until three hours after he returned home, was hysterical yesterday. She apparently could not believe that after the family's flight from Germany to this sanctuary on the Potomac, such a thing could have happened to her husband, a man who sought only peace and friendliness.

A tall, blonde woman, whose father, Dr. Joseph von Schey, was a famous professor of civil law at the University of Vienna, Mrs. Simon wept convulsively.

"It is fantastic," she said in German. "It cannot be true."

Even then Dr. Christopher Murphy, deputy coroner, was performing an autopsy on her husband's battered body at the morgue.

Beside the skull fracture, caused by a blow behind the ear, Dr. Murphy found severe bruises to both lips and nose, and also a bruse in the middle of the back.

Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald, the coroner, said:

"Dr. Simon was assaulted; there is no doubt about that."

Maj. Brown and Inspector Thompson both attended the autopsy. This indicated how much importance was attached to the case.

The cab driver, Proudfoot, told Capt. John Fowler of the Thirteenth Precinct that he had been to the Shoreham Hotel and was traveling south when, at about 10 minutes before 2 o'clock, he saw a man standing at the corner of Seventeenth and Church Streets Northwest, bareheaded and holding his hand to his head.

He said the man's hand dropped, and he assumed that he was summoning him. He said the man asked to be taken to New Hampshire Avenue and Swan Street. When they got there, Proudfoot said, his fare told him he had no money, but would go upstairs and get some.

Proudfoot said he waited for about 10 minutes and then drove home. Yesterday he saw Dr. Simon's picture in a newspaper and recognized it. He went to the Simon apartment to tell what he knew and there encountered Capt. Fowler.

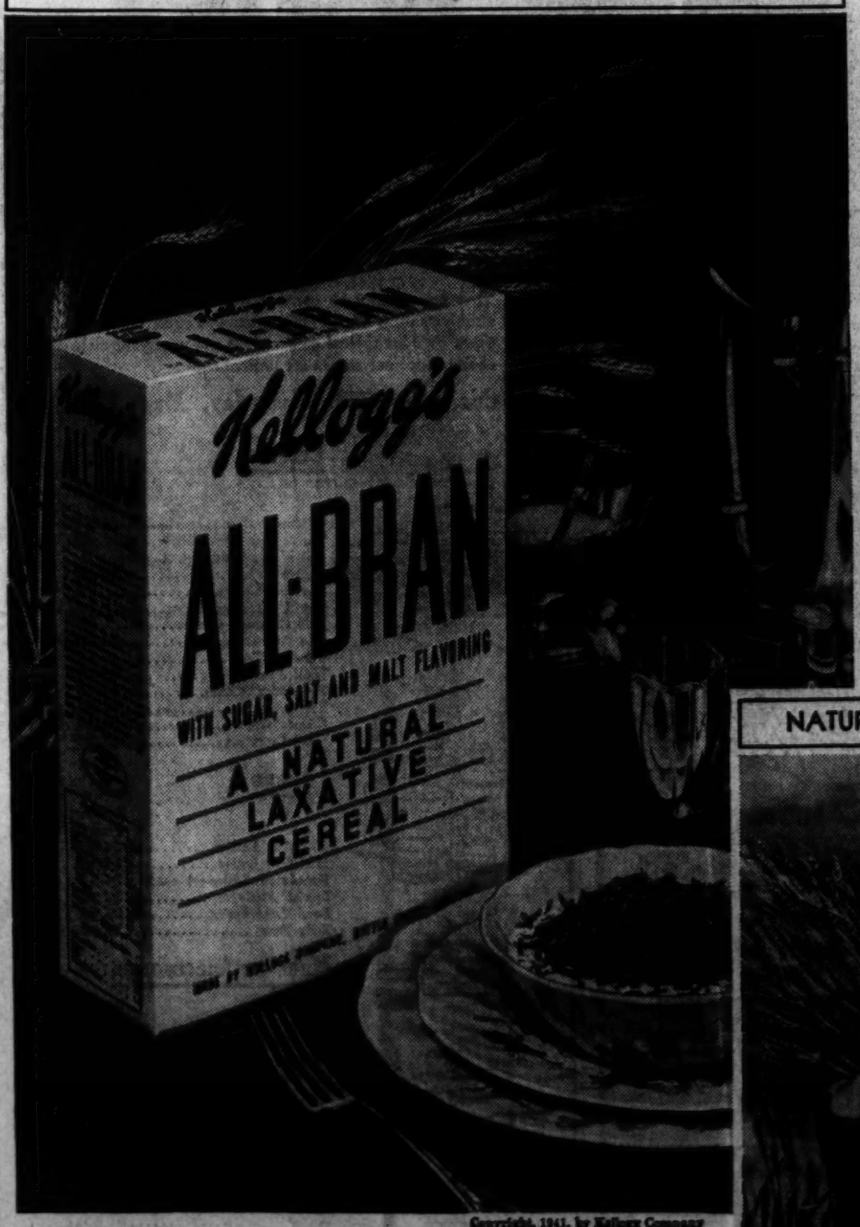
TODAY YOUR GROCER CAN SUPPLY IT!

THIS IMPROVED, DOUBLY DELICIOUS "GOLDEN SOFT" KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN

IT'S LIGHTER! CRISPER! BRIGHT AS SHREDS OF GOLD!



Copyright, 1941, by Kellogg Company

WHAT'S THIS? An improvement in an old favorite cereal? It is indeed! Just wait till you taste the improved ALL-BRAN!

IT'S DOUBLY DELICIOUS! It's made of finer quality bran from one of the world's softest wheats. The improved ALL-BRAN comes out of our toasters bright as shreds of gold. It's lighter! Crisper! More delicate! Ask your grocer for it today.

"Why improve an old favorite cereal like KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN?" many people have asked us. Because making a good thing better is an old American custom. And because Kellogg's grain buyers have discovered a marvelous wheat from which comes a bran of exceptional quality.

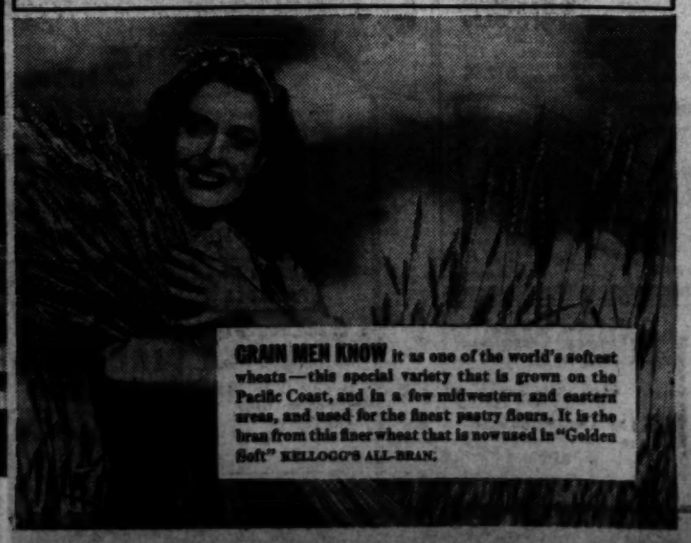
Put through ALL-BRAN'S toasting ovens, the bran from this choice wheat came out bright as shreds of gold — and lighter, crisper, more delicate than any we had used in 20 years of making this famous cereal.

And now the improved and more delicious ALL-BRAN is at your grocer's.

If you or other members of your family are troubled with constipation due to lack of proper "bulk" in the diet, try the improved ALL-BRAN. It is just as effective as ever—but doubly delicious. But be sure to eat it regularly; it takes a little time for best results. Make ALL-BRAN your steady breakfast cereal, drink plenty of water, and see if you don't forget all about constipation due to lack of "bulk."

ALL-BRAN is made only by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. It is sold by grocers and served in restaurants everywhere.

NATURE GAVE THIS WHEAT SPECIAL SOFTNESS



GRAIN MEN KNOW it as one of the world's softest wheats—this special variety that is grown on the Pacific Coast, and in a few midwestern and eastern areas, and used for the finest pastry flours. It is the bran from this finer wheat that is now used in "Golden Soft" KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN.

In Accord With Policies

Eccles Invited to Testify Today on Tax Plans

The House Ways and Means Committee yesterday called Marriner S. Eccles, chairman of the board of governors of the Federal Reserve System, as a surprise witness on the Administration's $3,500,000,000 tax program.

Eccles, who last week expressed "wholehearted accord" with tax policies of Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, was invited to testify today following Leon Henderson, director of price stabilization, Chairman Robert L. Doughton said.

Henderson reportedly is not fully in accord with the Treasury proposals. Both were expected to discuss tax steps necessary to avoid runaway prices.

Meanwhile, the Ways and Means Committee heard Livingston W. Houston, chairman of the National Association of Manufacturers Committee on Government Finance, advocate imposition of a general sales tax and a broadening of the income tax base, both policies opposed by the Treasury.

Urges Economy

Houston, first spokesman for big business to appear before the committee, said the tax program should be accompanied by "stringent economy in the ordinary expenditures of Government through savings in all nonessential items of nondefense spending."

He said "all patriotic citizens of the country are willing to help meet the costs of our great national defense efforts and we say without qualification that industry is willing to shoulder its full share."

The N. A. M. spokesman said an entirely new source of income must be explored to produce the needed funds and he therefore recommended either a Federal tax on retail sales or a general manufacturers' excise tax on products at the point of final manufacture.

His other tax suggestions:

An increase in the present normal rate on net income of corporations.

A decrease in the exemptions and credits in the establishment of individual income subject to normal tax.

An increase in the normal tax on individual incomes.

Houston Offers Suggestions

Houston opposed the proposals for increase in the surtax rates on individuals and in urging lowered exemptions said he felt "those who are now enjoying very substantial increases of income because of the national defense program would not object to contributing a relatively small proportion of this increased income to the Federal Government."

He said Treasury and joint committee income tax proposals thus far offered "tend to fall in a major degree upon the great white collar class of workers whose incomes tend to remain practically constant."

He suggested the following:

Eliminate multiple taxation of intercorporate dividends.

Permit consolidated returns for normal tax purposes.

Provide general extension for filing returns wherever required, conditioned on filing tentative returns and payment of one-fourth estimated tax.

Extend two-year loss carry-over provision to five years.

Relieve individuals from normal tax on dividends received.

Hundreds of farmers from tobacco producing States meanwhile were organizing for a mass appearance before the Ways and Means Committee tomorrow in protest against Treasury proposals to double present taxes on chewing tobacco, smoking tobacco and snuff, and to lift the tax on cigarettes from 6½ cents to 8 cents on a package of 20.

Jewish Leaders To Discuss Drive

Representatives of the principal local Jewish organizations will gather today at 8:30 p. m. in the Jewish Community Center, Sixteenth and Q Streets Northwest, in behalf of the united appeal for overseas relief and refugee needs.

Morris Simon and Rabbi Isadore Breslau, cochairmen of the united appeal, will speak. At 10:30 p. m. delegates will listen to a broadcast entitled "Calling Humanity," over Station WMAL. On the radio program will be Pierre Van Passen, Chief Rabbi Herzog, of Palestine; Jascha Heifetz, Paul Lukas and Raymond Massey.

Senate Gets D. C. 'Civil Rights' Bill

A District "civil rights" bill which would make the management of "any place of public accommodation" subject to penalties for denying admission on grounds of race, religion or color, was introduced yesterday by Senator William H. Smathers (Democrat), of New Jersey.

In addition to civil penalties in the form of recoveries from $50 to 100, violators of the bill's provision would be subject to Police Court fines ranging from $10 to 100, or jail sentences from 10 to 100 days.

Metal for Defense

U. S. Striving to Multiply Its Production of Aluminum

Defense officials are embarking on a program to increase production of aluminum to between two and three times the present output and to raise magnesium production to from five to six times its present level, it was learned yesterday.

Although details of the gigantic expansion program are not crystallized, officials asserted that there was no alternative for the enormous increase and that it "has got to be put through," mainly because of the demands occasioned by the President's orders on Monday for a 200 or 300 per cent enlargement of the heavy bomber program.

The new schedule for both defense metals, whose strength and light weight make them indispensable for aircraft production, call for the objective being reached by 1943.

In aluminum, the current production of which is at the rate of about 600,000,000 pounds a year, present expansion plans already "in the works" will provide for an annual output of about 800,000,000 pounds by the end of the year. The new goal is said to be in the neighborhood of from 1,500,000,000 to 1,600,000,000 pounds annually.

Power Is Needed

Magnesium production, which was only 14,000,000 pounds in 1940, is now flowing at the rate of about 25,000,000 pounds a year. The new objective is an annual rate of 150,000,000 pounds.

Major hurdle to be overcome in the new program is the availability of electric power, huge quantities of which are necessary to fabricate aluminum from bauxite and magnesium from brine.

As a result, great expansion of generating facilities at the TVA and Columbia River dams will be necessary, it was learned. Some of the new plants made necessary by the program will obtain new power to be generated at Grand Coulee Dam, and others will draw on energy to be produced by enlarging TVA capacity, it was said.

Alcoa to Have Major Share

Also undecided are the agencies which will undertake the program and the financing arrangements to be made. The Aluminum Co. of America, it was anticipated, would shoulder the major share of the work, although a relatively newcomer to the aluminum field, the Reynolds Metal Co., may also take part. The latter concern will be in production within a month in the Pacific Northwest, using Bonneville Dam power, and is said to have shown great success in its initial operations.

A possibility that the Government itself might undertake the production was also believed to be under consideration.

Although the program is still in a formative stage, it is reported to be developing very rapidly and may be definitely launched within two or three weeks.

Meantime, shortages of aluminum, particularly forgings, have already curtailed capacity operations at some airplane factories.

Sandstorms Test Nazi Endurance

Cairo, May 6 (INS).—Fierce sandstorms swept the western desert tonight and the Tobruk and Salura areas were engulfed in a fierce furnace-like heat, testing for the first time the endurance of the Germans as desert fighters.

While the situation in the embattled area around the British-held garrison of Tobruk remained static after the British beat back an Italo-German offensive over the weekend, R. A. F. planes carried out smashing attacks on the important enemy Libyan strongholds of Bengasi and Benina.

"In Cyrenaica," an official communique said, "the heaviest bombing attacks were made on the harbor of Bengasi, the airdrome at Benina and landing fields at Barca, Derna and Gazala. Five enemy aircraft were destroyed."

All Commons Orators Insist Churchill Stay

By Robert P. Post
Copyright by New York Times

London, May 6.—The great defense debate in Parliament opened today with every speaker stressing the fact that there could not and should not be a change of government but nevertheless voicing his own criticism of the way the government is being run.

The debate, which will continue tomorrow when the World War Prime Minister, David Lloyd George, may speak, and Prime Minister Churchill certainly will, was opened today by Foreign Secretary Eden with a long temperate expression of his mission to the Near East and a justification of the government's actions in that area.

The chief critic was Leslie Hore-Belisha, who in January, 1940, resigned as war secretary and who attacked the government from all directions. Hore-Belisha claimed that the British public had been misled and that the full war effort was not being exerted.

Eden's recapitulation of the situation added little to present knowledge of the Grecian campaign. He devoted much of his time to explaining what few people, either in Commons or in the country, have denied—that the sending of troops to Greece was necessary for British honor.

Denies Charges

The foreign secretary denied that the decision to aid Greece was taken for political reasons only. Admiral Sir Andrew Browne Cunningham, commander in chief of the Mediterranean Fleet; Sir A. Longmore, chief air marshal in the Middle East, and Lieut. Gen. Sir Archibald Wavell, commander in chief of the army in the Middle East, all agreed to the Grecian expedition, Eden said.

Furthermore, the Foreign Secretary added, Gen. Sir John G. Dill, chief of the Imperial Staff with whom he went to the Middle East, authorized him to say there was no word of truth to reports of disagreements.

The government, Hore-Belisha said, was trying to fool the public by talking about the Battle of the Atlantic to take attention away from the battle in the Near East. The two, he contended, were equally important, equally interdependent.

Hore-Belisha wanted to know why Italy—"the most vulnerable country in Europe"—had not undergone concentrated and systematic bombings which Hore-Belisha said, could have been carried on from airports in Greece.

Secret Service Attacked

"It was plain that our information (from the secret service) was wrong or was wrongly interpreted and that our setback in Libya, our reverses were attributable primarily to this cause," Hore-Belisha said. "No one will dispute that our dispositions in the Mediterranean would have been different had we known the facts." It should be noted here that many people in London would dispute this statement.

Hore-Belisha claimed that the Battle of Matapan, which many Italian ships were sunk, was only a decoy action under the cover of which Germany transported forces to Africa.

The Gallup Poll

Power of Labor Union Leaders More Feared Than Power of Magnates or Government

By Dr. George Gallup
Director American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., May 6.—The recent report of the Temporary National Economic Committee dealt at length with the question of concentration of economic power in the hands of large corporations, and recommended stricter enforcement of antitrust laws. But there is another power about which the American voters show greater concern today—the power of labor union leaders.

A public opinion survey by the Institute finds that more people think labor union leaders have too much power than think big business corporations are too powerful. Furthermore, there is relatively little public concern, apparently, over the power of a third factor in American life—the Federal Government. Only a minority, the survey shows, think there is too much power today in the hands of the Government in Washington.

Three Questions

In order to evaluate public attitudes on the issue of concentration of power, the Institute's survey, interviewed a nation-wide cross-section of voters on three questions, as follows:

"Do you think there is too much power in the hands of the government in Washington?"

Yes 32%
No 56
No opinion 12

"Do you think there is too much power in the hands of a few rich men and large corporations in the United States?"

The vote was:

Yes 59%
No 27
No opinion 14

"Do you think there is too much power in the hands of the leaders of labor unions in this country?"

The results on this question were:

Yes 75%
No 13
No opinion 12

It is interesting to note the upward progression of the "yes" vote in this table. The power of the Federal Government is least feared, the power of corporations next, and the pwoer of labor unions leaders most of all.

Party Differences

Important differences of opinion by political parties were revealed in the study. While the rank and file of both Democrats and Republicans agree that labor union leaders are too powerful, there was a sharp difference of opinion concerning corporations and the Federal Government.

Only 17 Roosevelt voters in every 100 said the Federal Government has too much power, as compared to 56 in ever 100 Willkie voters.

Two-thirds of the Democrats said there was too much power in the hands of large corporations, while only 49 per cent of Republicans said this.

Opinion likewise differs by income levels. The poorer voters are more concerned with concentration of power in large corporations than in concentration of power in the Federal Government.

It is interesting to note, however, that all income levels—upper, middle and lower—think there is too much power in the hands of labor union leaders.

Too Much Power in the Hands of Labor Union Leaders?

	Yes	No	No Opinion
Upper income voters	82%	13%	5%
Lower income voters	76	14	10
Lower income voters	71	13	16

The press hailed these accomplishments as proof that the R. A. F. was growing stronger as the air war in western Europe climbed to a summer level of fury.

The Germans sent two separate air forces against the southeast English coast yesterday. The R. A. F. beat them off, but not before three of Dover's barrage balloons had burst inta flames in an attack by four Messerschmitts.

In this "hell's corner" engagement one German plane was downed and one British plane was acknowledged lost.

A strong force of the bomber command dropped "a great weight of high explosive and incendiary bombs" on Mannheim during the night and attacked Frankfurt-am-Main in the same foray, the air ministry announced.

In Tuesday's air fighting Germans claimed ten British pursuit planes and two combat ships were shot down over the English Channel and over Malta, in the Mediterranean, without German loss.

The Berlin radio, quoting Bagdad accounts, said British planes had raided the Iraqi capital, killed or wounded several civilians and damaged a mosque, in addition to bombing other so-called "open towns" during the last 24 hours.

The British Middle East command at Cairo told in a communique of heavy bombing attacks on Iraqi military positions around Habbaniyah where direct hits were scored, across the Euphrates near Falluja where motor transport columns were blasted, and in the Diwaniya sector 60 miles south of Bagdad on the Euphrates.

At Diwaniya, "direct hits were scored on barracks and administrative buildings," the R. A. F. communique said.

British planes were said in the Cairo communique to be "constantly patrolling" all Iraqi positions.

An Iraqi communique broadcast by Axis radio stations told of "severe damage" to the R. A. F. properties at Habbaniyah, and claimed that Iraqi police had occupied the British port of Kissur near Amarah, about 60 miles north of Basra.

North Beach To Get Naval Testing Field

The Navy yesterday placed a contract for the construction of field research station near North Beach, Md., an annex of the naval research laboratory at Bellevue.

Officials said approximately 50 acres of land would be acquired on the Chesapeake Bay, about 1 mile south of North Beach, to carry on special work for the main laboratory here. Approximately $100,000 is to be spent at this time for a laboratory building, dormitories, officers' quarters and administration building.

Scientists and engineers from the Bellevue plant and the Navy Department will usce the new field annex for experiments, it was said, some of them commuting and some remaining there. A small naval guard will be established.

The Charles H. Tompkins Co. of Washington will construct the new field research annex and build a three story addition to the chemical laboratory at Bellevue under a $210,000 modification of an existing cost-plus-fixed-fee contract it has for expansion of the local station.

At the same time, the Navy Department announced that the Jeffress-Dyer Co. will undertake additional work at the Dahlgren, (Va.) proving ground, to cost $260,900. The job includes additions to buildings, a sewer and sewage pumping station, and a water tower.

The John McShain Co. Inc., received $74,500 in additional construction work at the Quantico (Va.) Marine base. New barracks and an extension of an existing building are planned.

The War Department, meantime, announced that 3.9 miles of additional gravel roads will be built at Fort Belvoir, Va., to cost $25,373, and 7-10 of a mile of road costing $8,500 wil be constructed at Fort George G. Meade, Md. The work is part of a $2,616,049 road-building program disclosed yesterday to provide better access to Army posts throughout the country.

least two women and three children, were lost "in a recent ship sinking."

List of Americans

The list of Americans reported lost:

Kenneth B. Collings, Rockville Center, N. Y.; R. E. Fordyce, Chicago; R. A. Lowell, Chickasha, Okla.; J. S. Wright, Medford, Okla.; J. C. Torpey, Silverdale, Wash.; E. Fredericks, Peoria, Ill.; R. Burden, Warsaw, Ind.; J. A. Woodall, Dallas; W. H. Nance, Houston; R. G. Smith, Warsaw, Ind., and E. Landis, Boyerton, Pa.

The twelfth American reported lost was Reginald Lawrence Wells, of Melrose Highlands, Mass., a company sergeant major serving with the Canadian forces.

Also lost, it was reported, were 74 members of the Canadian army forces, 10 Canadian army personnel and 28 others, presumably civilians.

English Family Lost

Among the civilian was one complete family, consisting of J. E. Lomas, his wife and their three small children. Lomas was an expert armaments examiner from Woolwich, Eng., who had been on special assignment in Canada with the war inspection board. He had made many trips to United States armaments plants.

debate with the statement:

"The United States is today helping us greatly in many spheres and many ways. The more fully, the more rapidly and the more certainly that help can reach the battlefields of Asia, Africa and Europe the shorter will be the duration of the war."

Laborite Lees-Smith said that in the final analysis the Battle of the Atlantic holds Britain's fate and he appealed urgently to the United States to persuade Eire to turn over air and naval bases to Britain.

Lees-Smith deplored the "fantastic position" of Britain resulting from her inability to use Irish ports for defense of her Atlantic lifeline and said that if Britain could use Berchaven and Lockswilly, as in the World War, the U-boat war would be changed almost overnight.

Eire Prime Minister Eamon de Valera's adamant stand, he said, is "stultifying" the United States' own new naval patrol policy.

Lees-Smith predicted that United States supplies eventually will swing the battle of the Mediterranean in Britain's favor, but he said that "the time is short."

Former War Minister Leslie Hore-Belisha asserted too that Britain's victory depends upon United States aid.

"We ought to thank 'God every day for President Roosevelt," he said amid cheers.

"But it is unfair to him and his country to overstate what is possible."

Four Temporary Buildings Will Rise Here To Provide More Office Space for Defense

Four temporary Federal office buildings for approximately 6,200 defense workers are to be built on the Mall and on the Army War College golf course, Federal Works Administrator Carmody announced yesterday.

One of the buildings is to be erected on the Mall site, between Fourth and Sixth Street on Independence Avenue, on the Mall's southern margin. Three structures are to be built north of the War College Administration building at the suburban end of the grounds.

The buildings are to be two-story frame structures, made of fire-resistant boards.

Workers numbering about 5,000 will be given office space in the three War College buildings while approximately 1,200 employees will be posted in the Mall structure. All will be members of "first line defense agencies," such as the War and Navy Departments and the Office of Production Management.

Collectively, the four new buildings will furnish an estimated 523,000 square feet of office space. About 177,000 square feet of space still were to be arranged for to complete the 8,000,000 square feet of new office room desired for the influx of defense workers.

The four buildings are expected to cost approximately $3,000,000. A total outlay of $4,100,000 was appropriated by Congress to the Public Buildings Administration for new defense office space. However, a stipulation was written into the bill limiting the building to sites on Government-owned land in the District.

Originally, it had been planned to build the temporary Federal structures on the experimental farm in nearby Arlington County, Va.

Carmody set May 13 as the deadline for selective bids of contractors for the Mall building, which will have a 527-foot frontage. Bids have not yet been sought for the other three structures, as final specifications have not yet been drawn up.

The War College structures will include their own heating plant and cafeteria, but the Mall project will have neither. It will be linked with the Government's central heating plant.

FLAVOR-PROTECTED STEAK — and HOW!

HERE'S WHERE you really will "go to town" as a master chef (and your guests go into ecstasies) by providing the most luscious steak feast that ever enthused a human palate. Simple to do, too.

First, have the wife order a 4-lb. sirloin or tenderloin that measures at least 2 inches thick (still better if it's 3 inches). And, before you forget, have her order a few bottles of Three Feathers* whiskey. For if ever there were two items on the same menu which boasted of perfect harmony, one of them is that grand whiskey and the other is this grand steak. For both are Flavor-Protected—Three Feathers* being kept at the very cream of its fine flavor from the very moment it's blended, and the steak—well, just wait and see—or better yet, just wait and taste!

Better make the dinner party a foursome (even a big, four-pound steak will go fast when they start calling for "seconds"—and they will!) but be sure that the other couple are "good eaters," too.

And now to roll up your sleeves and get to work. Begin by preparing your oven. Light the broiler—turning it on full for at least ten minutes so that the entire broiling oven is as hot as you can make it. While waiting for the temperature to rise in the oven, prepare the steak to meet its destiny. First, dip the steak into salad oil in which two cloves of garlic have been crushed. Then salt heavily (this is important) and pepper well.

No, that oven isn't quite ready yet. But, you can bet a chef's hat that everybody's ready to enjoy the Manhattan cocktails you're going to serve up during the interlude—especially if you make 'em this way: Five parts whiskey (here's where that Three Feathers* comes in)—yes, we said five parts whiskey—one part vermouth (sweet) and a dash of Angostura bitters. Ice, stir, strain—add a cherry to each, if you wish—and serve. Wager you've never tasted so flavorful a Manhattan (Flavor-Protected Three Feathers* does make a difference).

By that time the oven should be ready. So lay the steak on the broiling grid, sliding it well under the flame. Then, to "flavor-protect" the steak, quickly sear on both sides—turning each side momentarily to the flame (this keeps all the flavorful juices in the meat just like Flavor-Protection keeps all the flavor in Three Feathers* whiskey). Then leave the steak close up to the flame. Don't mind if it burns—the surface should char; it adds to the flavor. Time it carefully. Eight minutes each side if you want it rare. Twelve minutes for medium.

When finished, place on a hot platter and squeeze over it the juice of one lemon. Add a liberal chunk of butter—and rush it to the table.

Man! oh, Man! If ever you thought steaks were just steaks (and Manhattans just Manhattans) just pay heed to what you've read here—and go to it!

Yours for Flavor Protection,

*TF

Engineer Denies Trying To 'Cover Up'

R. C. Marshall, jr., Washington consulting engineer, denied yesterday that he was trying to "cover up" anything, in destroying records of his activities for Army contractors in the recent military construction program.

Testifying before the Senate Defense Investigating Committee, the former Army construction chief, now a brigadier general in the Reserves, said Monday that he had destroyed his files "partly" because of the appointment of several Congressional investigating bodies to inquire into the cantonment construction program.

"Why would you destroy records of that sort unless there was something you wanted to cover up?" demanded Chairman Truman as Marshall was recalled yesterday for further questioning.

Recalled Other Inquiries

Marshall replied that he had not anticipated being called by the Truman committee, but added that he had "very vivid recollections" of the Congressional committees which investigated Army affairs after the World War.

"They took every opportunity to make something out of nothing," he stated.

"Well," replied Senator Truman, "you have given us an indication there was something to cover up."

The former Army official, who resigned in 1920, said he received $250 a month under a contract with the Consolidated Engineering Co. of Baltimore, which built the new cantonment at Fort George G. Meade, Md. The committee has been investigating reasons for the cost of the camp running more than twice original estimates.

Contract Canceled

The contract, which called for payment of about 10 per cent of the contractor's fee of $226,000, was canceled when the War Department called on the firm to make an affidavit that no one was paid a commission for aiding in getting the work, Marshall said.

Later, the engineer said, he destroyed his records on this and similar Army jobs.

Chairman Truman asked the witness if he were known as "Gen. Marshall." When he replied that he was, the Senator asked if he was ever confused with the Army chief of staff—Gen. George C. Marshall.

"Every once in awhile," he replied. "I get some of his mail and he gets some of mine."

'Typewriter' Brigade Takes Field With 29th

By the Associated Press

Fort George G. Meade, Md., May 6.—The Twenty-ninth Division's "rear echelon," including administrative, supplies and records keeping forces, moved into the field today for a training exercise in which the rattle of typewriters took the place of machine-gun fire.

The various administrative centers of the division's fighting units and special services, the latter including units such as the 121st Engineers, the 104th Quartermasters and the 104th Medical Regiment, were grouped together outdoors in relatively the same positions that they would be set up during a battle.

This formation would be somewhere, possibly many miles, to the rear of the combat troops, but in touch with the fighting forces, and with each other, by means of a field communications system.

Tents and field office equipment, including typewriters, mimeograph machines, tables and records cabinets, were moved onto the field in trucks late this morning and the offices were in operation soon afterward.

The formation was inspected this afternoon by Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord, Twenty-ninth Division commander. Actual office work of the units was carried on during the inspection.

The training exercise, under supervision of Lieut. Col. Peyton G. Nevitt, division adjutant general, was held so that the behind-the-lines sections might determine in general their normal positions during action, test field office setups and work out transportation routine and other problems of this nature.

House Group Votes Inquiry Into Recreation Setup in District

A House District Subcommittee yesterday voted unanimously for investigation by Congress and the Federal Bureau of Investigation of recreation administration in Washington, but last night Chairman Jennings Randolph said the authority of his full committee to handle the inquiry remains to be settled first.

Informed that the Parks and Recreation Subcommittee at a preliminary hearing yesterday closely quizzed witnesses concerning operation of the Welfare and Recreational Association and management of the city's five public golf courses, Randolph raised the question whether the inquiry should be made by his committee or the House Public Building and Grounds Committee.

The matter of jurisdiction will be settled, Randolph said, when the subcommittee's call for an investigation is considered at the next full committee meeting Monday.

In an executive session at the close of the hearing, the subcommittee voted to ask the full committee to request the House to authorize an investigation with full power to subpena witnesses and to call on the FBI for assignment of auditors and investigators.

Motion by Schulte

This action followed a motion made in open hearing by Representative William T. Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana. At the time Schulte and other subcommittee members were questioning Capt. Frank W. Hoover, general manager of the Welfare and Recreational Association. In calling for an inquiry, Schulte declared: "Let's go into this thing once and for all . . . We have every reason to believe it (the association) is a $3,000,000 organization."

"Confidential figures" were given the subcommittee by Walter R. McCallum, newspaper golf writer, to show that the S. G. Leoffler Operating Co. in 1939 grossed $250,323.89 from operation of golf courses, restaurants and other concessions. Of this amount the company paid National Capital Parks $19,966, McCallum said, adding that operating costs were $133,365.

McCallum said that $100,000 represented an "estimated excess" of gross revenue over costs as Representative F. Edward Hebert (Democrat), of Louisiana, remarked that if the Government had operated the courses that much might have been spent on improving them.

Would Remake Links

McCallum described the links as "entirely inadequate" and "ridiculously outmoded." The Rock Creek golf course, he said, "should be entirely remade and if I had anything to do with it I would have the greens out there spaded up and thrown into the Potomac River."

Sederine G. Leoffler, president of the operating company, called McCallum's figures "ridiculous" and declared that his net profit in 1939 was $5,059.29 and that in 1940 he lost $2,600. When questioned further, however, he admitted paying himself an annual salary of $18,200. Golf-restaurant profits, he said, were "used in other investments."

In a written statement, Leoffler said he has paid the Government $117,210 in rentals in the last ten years in addition to taxes ranging from $658 to $7,668 a year. In addition, he said, he has constructed 22 golf holes in East Potomac Park.

Referring to a study of Welfare and Recreational by the General Accounting Office, Capt. Hoover told the subcommittee that he and Richard Elliott, then the acting Comptroller General, had disagreed over the right of the association to pay large sums to welfare organizations but that there "never was any question of personal use of money."

Schulte pointed out that Congress has no control of an organization that, Capt. Hoover declared, operates 22 eating places, many of them in Government buildings, the bicycle and boat concession at the Tidal Basin, the Great Falls (Md.) concession, the Washington Tourist Camp, Government employe camps and a group insurance plan for field employes of the Veterans Administration.

Hoover stated that his salary is $9,500 a year, that the association has 1,600 workers on its pay roll and that the organization's directors are chosen by 30 Government officials who are its "active members."

New Citizens Told Value of Liberties

The blessings of liberty, which are the constitutional rights of American citizens, were stressed by Justice Jesse C. Adkins yesterday in his address to 90 alien-born men and women whom he admitted to United States citizenship.

Welcoming the applicants from every country in Europe to their place in the American state, Justice Adkins told them that "the right of citizenship is the greatest gift in the power of the American people."

This right, he added, "cannot be valued in money and it cannot be bought, but it is freely given to those who comply with the requirements laid down by Congress."

Without naming the totalitarian states, Justice Adkins indicated some American contrasts, saying:

"Our citizens are protected in freedom of person. It is our right to work for a livelihood and to acquire property. Our family relationship is sacred. We have the right to keep our children in our own homes and to take care of them in our own way. We have the right of free speech in all its forms. And we have the right of religious worship . . ."

The new citizens are:

Mrs. Margaret Lucia Lilly, 41, 813 Taylor Street Northwest; John Jerome Coleman, 34, Catholic University; Mrs. Ida Emelia Wheelur, 33, 1354 Meridian Place; John C. Shields, 59, 2222 I Street Northwest; Mrs. Rachel Rissin, 66, 3222 Wisconsin Avenue; Anthony Izzo, 35, 3416 Pennsylvania Avenue Southeast; Miss Olive Annette Henriksen, 69, 5425 Western Avenue.

Also Samuel Abraham Golden, 54, 233 Sixth Street Southwest; Mrs. Ethel Hardy Bord, 34, 2440 Sixteenth Street Northwest; Salvado Joseph Mascoret, 39, 4831 Thirty-sixth Street Northwest; Mrs. Delphina Mathilda Endicott, 35, 6625 Thirty-second Place Northwest; Mrs. Elisabeth Schelling, 56, 1601 Argonne Place; Harry Belson, 48, 1344 Taylor Street Northwest.

Mrs. Linzel Again Heads District Movie Council

Mrs. Frank A. Linzel was re-elected president of the District of Columbia Motion Picture Council yesterday at a meeting at the Alice Deal Junior High School.

Other officers include Mrs. C. D. Curtiss, first vice president; Mrs. Elmer Stewart, second vice president; Mrs. William Fahey, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Hershey Munroe, recording secretary, and Mrs. G. R. Wilhelm, treasurer.

The council met at the Alice Deal School as that is the only one in the city in which the students have a motion picture club. It is under sponsorship of the English department with Mrs. A. T. Bottenberg, a teacher, in charge. The students see a movie each week, discuss it and print a guide of their own which they post on the bulletin board. If any other students want a guide, the club sells it to them at a nominal cost.

Rotarians to Meet

A joint meeting of the Washington and Cleveland Rotary Clubs at the Willard Hotel today at 12:30 o'clock will include presentation of a plaque and an honorary membership to Senator Harold H. Burton (Republican), of Ohio.

McCarran Calls 2d Suffrage Hearing Today After 30 D. C. Groups Sign Vote Petition

The second suffrage hearing in two days was called for today at 2:30 p. m. by Senator Pat McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, after his subcommittee received a petition bearing indorsements of the Capper-Sumners resolution from 30 leading civic and trade organizations in the Capital.

Earlier yesterday the subcommittee heard citizen statements both for and against the measure to authorize Congress to enfranchise the District.

Charles T. Wilson, speaking as an individual, said he was opposed to any change in the present form of local government, which he said is "the best in the United States." He was supported by A. D. Calvert who asked why the existing government should be changed for a system of "corruption and intimidation."

Cited As "Example"

Wilson told the subcommittee he had no desire to vote "because I was born here," and Paul E. Lesh, of the Citizens Joint Committee on National Representation, cited him as an example of what denial of franchise does to the natural desire of Americans to vote.

Mrs. Morgan Pryse contended that, actually, there are only 93,393 District residents who are denied the right to vote, but Lesh countered with Census Bureau figures showing that 450,000 adults here were disenfranchised on the eve of the last election.

Mrs. Harvey Wiley, representing the Women's City Club and the District Legislative Council, and Mrs. Margaret Hopkins Worrell, of the Columbia Heights Citizens Association, made pleas in support of suffrage.

Opposes Vote Ban

The belief that Washington, as the seat of Federal Government, must be protected against coercion should not bar residents of the city from representation in the House, Senate and Electoral College, Mrs. Wiley said.

"What do you lose by not having a vote for President?" Senator McCarran asked her.

"I think I am entitled to vote for the President of my country, as an American," Mrs. Wiley replied.

Jesse C. Suter presented the petition in behalf of the citizens joint committee. He said it was suggested by Senator Arthur Capper (Republican), of Kansas, sponsor of the bill.

Mrs. Straus to Receive For Tom Tippett, Writer

Mrs. Michael Straus will hold a reception this afternoon at 4:30 p. m. in her home, Linnean Hill, Porter Street and Klingle Road, Rock Creek Park, in honor of Tom Tippett, labor writer, now on the staff of the National Youth Administration.

The reception, sponsored by members of the Washington Committee of the Affiliated School for Workers, will hear Tippett describe work of the Office Workers' School in Chicago. This is one of the workers' education centers affiliated with the American Labor Education Service for industrial and office workers.

Mrs. Straus is secretary of the committee, and Miss Helen Herrmann and Mrs. Adeline Taylor Vermilya are co-chairmen.

How the Timken Roller Bearing Company solved the Week-end "BLACKOUT"

BACK in August of 1939 the Timken Roller Bearing Company foresaw the huge amounts of Timken steel, Timken tubing and Timken bearings that would be required as the defense program gained headway. Steps were taken at that time—twenty months ago—to inaugurate a system that would enable us to keep our equipment running 168 hours a week (24 hours a day for 7 days)—and thus eliminate "week-end blackouts" while still complying with the 40-hour work week. Keeping step with the expansion of defense needs during this 20 months period, one department after another has been put on this schedule.

In brief, this "anti blackout schedule" calls for three 8-hour shifts per day up to 40 hours per week. By having four crews (instead of three) to handle these three shifts we are able to rotate the working time for each crew so that it works 40 hours a week (the four crews thus keeping the equipment running 160 hours a week).

Shifts and crews are so scheduled that each crew works five extra shifts over each period of 20 weeks (for which overtime is paid). These five extra shifts for each of the four crews are all that is necessary to bring the "equipment work-week" up to the 168 hour total.

*This schedule has been so carefully worked out that every man works five days in a row and then is off at least 48 hours, after which he changes shifts. And over a period of 20 weeks, each man has five Sundays off. The shift schedule runs 20 weeks and then repeats without change.

To still further step up defense production, millions of dollars have been spent for new machinery and new buildings to avoid bottlenecks.

Furthermore, there will be no vacations for Timken men and women this summer. Early this year employees were notified that they would receive checks for an amount equal to vacation pay.

There are no "blackouts" at the Timken Roller Bearing Company.

Actors' Fund Benefit Is Victim of Circumstances

Sunday Night's Performance Is Canceled; A New Trend in Short-Story 'Shorts;' This, That and the Other About the Theater

FOR GOOD AND SUFFICIENT REASONS—and some that are slightly divergent—plans for the Actors' Fund Benefit that was to have been held in the National Theater next Sunday night have been abandoned. This is a lamentable, but apparently inescapable, circumstance.

BELL

An unfortunate selection of date, which could not have been foreseen at the time it was made, seems to be the dominating factor. With the Fund Benefit occupying the stage on Sunday night and the current engagement of "The Student Prince" not ending until Saturday night, it would have been impossible to install the necessary equipment for the projection of the Walt Disney-Leopold Stokowski collaboration, "Fantasia," in time for Monday night's benefit premiere, under the Auspices of the Young America Wants to Help group of the British War Relief. "Fantasia" is booked for an indefinite run and, after all, the Actors' Fund Benefit was for one night only.

As one who, in an earlier incarnation, was closely associated with the Actors' Fund Benefits in Washington through a string of years, we especially regret the impasse that has arisen. It already has been pointed out here on numerous occasions that the Actors' Fund of America operates one of the most worthy and most efficient charities in the United States. This is the first time one of its benefits ever has been canceled, here or anywhere else. It is to be hoped that this will not mean the abandonment of Washington as one of the cities in which these admirable entertainments annually are held.

There are subterranean rumblings, of course, that public interest seemed not to be at the boiling point up to the time the projected Sunday night benefit was called off, but that means little or nothing. My experience always has been that there comes a last-minute surge that invariably puts these enterprises over. It no doubt would have been the same in the present case. Better luck next year is what I always say. In the meantime, those who already had bought seats for Sunday night's performance may have their money refunded by calling at the National Theater box office.

Short Stories For Shorts

A new trend in screen short subjects seems to be setting in. Encouraged by the success of "The Happiest Man on Earth," adapted to the cinema from the O. Henry Memorial Award story by Albert Maltz, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer now is engaged in producing "The Tell-Tale Heart," Edgar Allan Poe's famous story. If the popularity of these two-reel picturized short stories holds up, many more will be made. "The Happiest Man on Earth," with Paul Kelly in the title role, comes to the screen at Loew's Palace Theater in conjunction with Paramount's "The Road to Zanzibar," costarring Bing Crosby, Dorothy Lamour and Bob Hope.

Steve Cochran's Olney Theater, out there in Maryland halfway to Baltimore, relighted last Saturday night with the "olde time country barn dances" that kept the rustic playhouse open all winter, with the exception of the Lenten season. This Saturday night, the Westminster Old Timers, well-known radio entertainers, will supply the impetus for another session of "round," "square" and "Paul Jones" dances—with an extra added attraction. Buddy Baer, who has set up training quarters on Steve's 17-acre tract, against his coming championship bout in Griffith Stadium on May 23, will relax on his feet along with the rest of the merry villagers. I'm not saying that this might be a precursor of the reopening of the Olney Theater for the "straw hat" season of hot-weather drama, but it might be.

Padded to Beat the Band

When Ted Weems brings his "Beat the Band" Orchestra to Loew's Capitol tomorrow, he will present three special acts in addition to the regular entertainers who are a permanent part of his musical organization. They are Walter Dare Wahl, one of the foremost of the acrobatic comedians; Mardoni, suave "Maestro of Magic," and Dennett and Dae, youthful dancers. Among his own nationally known specialists are Perry Como, barytone; Elmo Tanner, whistler; Red Ingle, comedian; Orm Downes, with his "drumatics," and Marilyn Thorne, sirenic songstress—and having seen her picture that word "sirenic" is our own.

Signs-of-the-Times Note

Combine a couple of forthcoming local marquees and this, approximately, is what you will have:

"AFFECTIONATELY YOURS"
"THAT NIGHT IN RIO"

Genius Seems Perturbed That Muse Is Not Musing!

WALT DISNEY

who never should look like that, what with his "Snow White," Academy Award-winning short subjects and now "Fantasia." But perhaps that is how the most brilliantly creative instinct in the cinema works. Mr. Disney, of all people, should be gloomy! Anyhow, "Fantasia," his collaboration with Leopold Stokowski and Deems Taylor, opens in the National Theater on Monday night with a gala benefit performance

M. CHAUTEMPS: Eve Currie, who was deprived of her French citizenship last week by the edict of your Vichy government, will receive additional honors, before she returns to London next month. Two major American universities will confer honorary degrees upon her. . . . When the Vichy press recently attacked Mlle Currie—and falsely announced that President Roosevelt had ordered her visa canceled and that she leave the country—Eleanor Roosevelt immediately invited Eve Currie to spend two days at the White House. . . . During dinner, Steve Early entered and whispered something into the President's ear. "Here's what you must tell him—and in just these words," the President said to Early. "Tell M. Henri-Haye, the French Ambassador, that I'm sorry, but I won't be able to see him tomorrow morning—because we're busy entertaining Eve Currie."

REX STOUT: The President now is completing the Fireside Chat—mentioned last week—which he soon will deliver to the Nation. In it he will declare that convoying your supply ships to Britain is not the answer to the current problems—and he will discuss his Patroling-the-Seven-Seas plan.

FEDERAL COMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION: The radio chains will not submit to your ruling against them concerning their alleged monopolies. They will bring suit to halt the enforcement of your recommendations . . . JOHN BARRYMORE: Stardom in a hit show agrees with your sister, Ethel. She's gained 25 pounds since the premier of "The Corn is Green." The costumes she wears in that play have had to be let out.

DUKE OF WINDSOR: Charles Bedeaux, who sponsored your ill-fated trip to America before the war, now is in Paris. His son, Charles Bedeaux, jr., is there, too—operating the Bedeaux system in the French factories. . . . EQUITY: Charles Butterworth soon will decide whether he'll return to the Broadway stage. . . . ASCAP: A film short about your rival, B. M. I., has just been completed. It was made by Julian Roffman, the documentary photographer.

CORDELL HULL: Henry Bernstein, the French playwright, now is called "Hank" by his friends—inasmuch is he's already received his first naturalization papers. . . . Bernstein, whose French citizenship was cancelled by Vichy last week, will not return his Legion of Honor decoration to Marshal Petain. Bernstein received that decoration from Clemenceau, after the last war.

DISTRICT ATTORNEY O'DWYER: The case of Ernie Haas will be reopened soon. Haas is the prize fighter who was sentenced to a long prison term for killing the aide to the Nazi Consul here. At the trial he pleaded self-defense. He now has evidence to prove that he was insane at the time, and now he's willing to risk capital punishment, if he succeeds in getting a new trial. N. Y. DRAMA CRITICS CIRCLE: Lillian Hellman's reward from Herman Shumlin—the producer of her Critics Circle prize play, "Watch on the Rhine"—was a diamond bracelet.

Statue From Wood Is Gift to Taylor

Robert Taylor will have a permanent reminder of his characterization in M-G-M's "Billy the Kid." When the picture finished production he was given a small paperweight in the shape of a statue.

The statue was made by Jack Young, Taylor's make-up man on the picture, who spends his spare time carving various figures from wood.

At the same time Taylor presented Young with a set of expensive wood-carving tools. Previously, Young had used an old jackknife in working at this hobby.

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, May 6 (INS).—Carol Bruce's secret visit to Hollywood a few days ago, when she flew in and right out, was to make a test for Frank Lloyd. The tests were so satisfactory that Carol leaves "Louisiana Purchase" and comes here in a few days to play the only feminine role in "I, James Lewis," Frank's next picture. The story of the little Bruce girl on Broadway is one of the stories we all enjoy, because it is reminiscent of the days when unknowns had a chance on the stage. Although Carol didn't have the lead, she was so colorful and so attractive that she has had reams of publicity.

PARSONS

Universal, on the strength of that publicity, signed her some time ago, but nothing was done until she was tested for the Lloyd picture.

I have often wondered why Elizabeth Bergner, who was one of the greatest foreign stars before the war, hasn't made a picture since she came to Hollywood. She has lived here quietly with her husband and we have heard nothing about her since she arrived, a refugee from Germany, where she was U. F. A.'s biggest feminine star. So it's very interesting, at least to this writer, to hear there is a strong possibility she will play the role of "Mrs. Skeffington," in the widely read "Mr. Skeffington," for Warners.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Wayne Morris, whose divorce from Bubbles Schinasi, becomes final in September, has already put an engagement ring on Pat Stewart's finger; looks as if cupid will be busy this year. Not only have Alice Faye and Phil Harris admitted their engagement, but Alice is also wearing a ring on the proper finger; 'tis said also that Priscilla Lane has chosen July for her marriage to the newspaper publisher, John Barry; George Jessell and Lois Andrews are back in town and will be here for several months.

Deanna Durbin and Vaughn Paul are living at the Beverly Wilshire until their house is ready; the best show Hollywood has seen in a long time was the burlesque edition put on at the red, white and blue ball. Proceeds went to Ann Lehr's Hollywood Guild and she should be very happy, for no affair has brought out so many important movie celebrities. Connie Bennett and Gilbert Roland, who were in the show, gave a dinner party at which the Darryl Zanucks, Joan Bennett, Walter Wanger, Norma Shearer, Sylvia Fairbanks and others were guests. The cutest pair were Bonita Granville and Jackie Cooper who danced every dance together. Martha Raye's strip tease number brought a laugh and I wonder why her arms were bandaged to the elbows.

Vivian Mason, her mother and Lew Wertheimer in ringside seats at the Florentine Gardens; Alice Moore and George Kent, former piano player at Bill Jordan's bar of music, taking up where they left off.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

In Hollywood

—With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, May 6.

Because Dan Kelley, casting director at Universal, likes to look at pretty pictures, another 9-year-old Cinderella girl has started on a film career.

HOPPER

The girl's name is Elizabeth Taylor, and her father brought a collection of Augustus John drawings and paintings from England just after the Munich pact was signed. When Dan went to look at them, he saw a little blue-eyed, black-haired youngster, and heard a natural coloratura soprano voice singing. Her mother was Sarah Sothern, whose big stage break came when she played the little crippled girl in Eddie Horton's production of "The Fool" at the old Majestic theater here.

After making a success on the New York and London stage, she met and married Mr. Taylor, then retired. Little Elizabeth was born in London, where she spent most of her lif . But both her parents are Americans, and if there's anything in heredity, Elizabeth should be a hit.

That blue lucent hat Boots Mallory wore to the Beverly Tropics, which was lighted from within by a cocealed battery, was such a sensation Earl Carroll is having 60 copies made for a new chorus number in his show. You've heard of "bats in the belfry," but now we'll have "Neons in the Noodle." . . .

There is a simple little human interest story on my desk this morning which will serve to show what makes columnists go crazy. I quote: "Jimmy Cagney keeps chickens. His favorite was a hen named 'Providence' which always laid an egg a day. A week ago, 'Providence's eggspired!' Eggscruciating? How's that for studio bilge?

"Slim and Slam" the "Flat-Foot-Floogie" boys, opened at the Swanee Inn, and when those two cut loose with the guitar and bull fiddle, it is a real "Swing-fest" that tickles your toes.

You'd never guess it, but Nat Pendleton once was a star cosmetic salesman, and at the same time a heavyweight wrestling champion. Nat, who's about the only actor in town who can speak Portuguese, asks, "Why can't I get a date with Carmen Miranda?"

Dick Powell and Joan Blondell whittled down the size of their yacht until now it looks just like a rowboat—and it is, with an outboard motor.

Arthur Rosson has gone to the Florida Keys, looking for a hurricane to film for DeMille's "Reap the Wild Wind" background. Says Robert Preston, "I don't know which would take the most courage, waiting and facing the hurricane, or coming back to DeMille without the pictures of it."

Gene Tierney tells me the first time she dated Mickey Rooney she had a perfectly swell time, but after it was all over, she didn't feel so happy. "Then," says Gene, "I figured out what was wrong. Mickey's personality is so positively positive he makes you feel negative by comparison. Dating Mickey is like playing in a picture with him. If you don't step fast, he'll swipe every scene."

'Fantasia' and Five Other New Films Occupy Spring Screens

"FANTASIA." The widely awaited Walt Disney-Leopold Stokowski film, opens at the National Theater Monday evening as a benefit for the "Young America Wants to Help" organization, a division of British War Relief. Thereafter it will be shown twice daily, at 2:30 and 8:30 p. m., on a reserved seat basis. Seats for all performances are now on sale at the National box office. The celebrated collaboration has resulted in an unusual alliance of symphonic music and Disney's inimitable fantasy. Under Stokowski, the Philadelphia Orchestra plays Bach's "Toccata and Fugue in D minor," Dukas' "The Sorcerer's Apprentice," Chaikovski's "Nutcracker Suite," Stravinsky's "Rite of Spring," Ponchielli's "Dance of the Hours," Beethoven's "Pastoral Symphony," Moussorgsky's "A Night on Bald Mountain" and Schubert's "Ave Maria."

Palace

"THE ROAD TO ZANZIBAR." Bing Crosby, Bob Hope and Dorothy Lamour are reunited in a safari much like their eminently successful "Road to Singapore" of last season. Again Hope and Crosby trade quips and songs in their efforts to find favor with the fern-clad lady. Eric Blore, Una Merkel, and Joan Marsh are the chief supporting players on hand to hear the new Crosby songs and watch Hope shot from a cannon. Opens tomorrow morning.

Earle

"AFFECTIONATELY YOURS." Merle Oberon, Denis Morgan, Rita Hayworth and Ralph Bellamy are the stars of this comedy, which tells of a playboy foreign correspondent who hurries home from Europe to prevent his wife from marrying another man. George Tobias, James Gleason, Hattie McDaniel and Jerome Cowan are featured. Charlie Spivak and his Washington Orchestra headline the stage bill, featuring Ginger Maylen, Garry Stevens and Bunny Shawker. Emmett Oldfield and Company, Evelyn Farney and Joey Bardin are the other stage entertainers. Opens Friday morning.

RKO-Keith's

"THE LADY FROM CHEYENNE." Loretta Young appears with Robert Preston, Edward Arnold and Gladys George in this story of Territorial Wyoming, an entrant in the RKO Maytime Movie Jubilee Hits. Detailing part of the early struggle for women's franchise, the film is described as a comedy treatment with a fresh background. Frank Craven and Jessie Ralph are in the company, which was directed by Frank Lloyd. Opens Friday morning.

Capitol

"WASHINGTON MELODRAMA." Frank Morgan, Ann Rutherford, Kent Taylor and Dan Dailey, jr., have the leads in this new picture whose title seems concise description of what it is about. Ted Weems and his "Beat the Band" radio orchestra tops the stage bill with a company that includes its stars of the Sunday night radio program: Perry Como, baritone; Elmo Tanner, whistler; Red Ingle, Orm Downes and Marilyn Thorne. Walter "Dare" Wahl; Mardoni and Bennett and Dae are others on the variety bill. Opens tomorrow morning.

Metropolitan

"SIS HOPKINS." Judy Canova plays the popular hill-billy heroine whose triumphs at college over her wealthy cousin have made her a long-loved character. "Professor" Jerry Colonna, Charles Butterworth, Susan Hayward, Katherine Alexander and Elvia Allman (Cobina, of "Brenda and Cobina") share leading honors with Bob Crosby and his orchestra. Music of the film goes from hill-billy to opera to swing. Opens Friday morning.

Columbia

"THAT NIGHT IN RIO." Alice Faye, Carmen Miranda and Don Ameche return to F Street after a week at the Capitol in this comedy with music, whose scene is Miranda's native Brazil. Besides her vivid costumes, La Miranda adds a group of Portuguese and American songs to her repertoire. Opens tomorrow morning.

Trumpeter

CHARLIE SPIVAK, who, according to all report, finally will bring his orchestra to the stage of the Earle Theater to headline the revue beginning Friday

Little

"THE GIRL IN THE NEWS." Margaret Lockwood and Carol Reed, star and director of "Night Train," again form a Little Theater partnership for this mystery importation from England. The story, having nothing to do with the war, concerns the circumstances which bind a nurse to two murders through circumstantial evidence. Barry K. Barnes, Emlyn Williams and Roger Livesey are featured. Opens this morning.

Trans-Lux

"HIS NIGHT OUT." Charlie Chaplin's fabulously funny comedy of a drunk who attempts to bluff his way out of getting home with the dawn is revived as the featured short subject on the newsreel screen. Comedy rules the rest of the features, with Ken Murray, Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy in a "Screen Snapshots" release and a Walt Disney cartoon, "Pluto's Playmate." Opens Friday morning.

Gayety

"TONS OF FUN." Valerie Parks tops the performers in the incoming burlesque revue opening Sunday afternoon at the Ninth Street house. Sammy Smith and Stanley Simmons have the central comedy roles, while Evelyn Brooks, Sally O'Day, Wyn Miller and John Barry also are featured performers. "Zorita," the current star, continues through Saturday's midnight performance.

Glen Echo

THE WHIP is the thing this week out at the amusement park, a trick ride which emphasizes its safety as much as it does its thrills. At night this traditional ride of the carnivals is aglow with lights. In the Spanish Garden ballroom, Paul Kain's orchestra plays for dancing weeknights from 9 till midnight, featuring Jim Fitzpatrick, the burly Irish saxophonist from Boston. Adele Van does the vocals.

Open-Air

"THE MARK OF ZORRO," starring Tyrone Power, and "Glamour for Sale" are the current features of the large screen at the drive-in auto theater on the Richmond Highway. Tomorrow "Sing, Baby, Sing" and "Meet the Wildcat" take over the screen for three days, continuing through a midnight showing Saturday night.

C. I. O. Official Is Expected To Be Deferred

Deferment of the draft call of Walter P. Reuther, key official of the C. I. O. United Automobile Workers' Union, was considered likely yesterday when it became known that high defense officials had interested themselves in keeping him in his present civilian position.

Reuther, who has been told to report as a selectee on May 22, is the U. A. W. representative in the General Motors Division of the union and is now in Washington participating in conferences before the National Defense Mediation Board on the General Motors dispute, where a strike involving 160,000 workers on defense orders has been threatened.

Reuther is to report to his local draft appeals board in Detroit tomorrow, where his case has been appealed by C. I. O. President Philip Murray, and by U. A. W. President R. J. Thomas.

Defense officials here are said to be concerned with Reuther's case on the grounds that as a union leader he is as vital to the huge defense program in Detroit auto factories as any machine tool operator or skilled mechanic.

It is known that these officials consider Reuther as one of the few U. A. W. officers who commands the confidence of both the union members and auto company officials. They cite his battle against communistic elements in the union and give him credit for devising a grievance procedure which reduced a chaotic condition in G. M. plants to a program for orderly handling of disputes. His position is particularly vital at this time, it is said, because of the current G. M. strike threat and the importance of his participation in settlement negotiations and in subsequently carrying out the resulting arrangements.

Reuther, who is 34, is married but his wife holds a job paying $1,000 a year as his secretary in the U. A. W. offices. Other grounds for deferment, however, consist of language in the draft regulations which, it was learned yesterday, were specifically written in to cover union officials.

When the regulations were being drafted, it was disclosed, the question of labor leaders arose and received lengthy discussion. It was decided at that time that these individuals held positions vital to national defense and should have opportunity for deferment.

Accordingly, those who wrote the regulations defined as "necessary men" those "in industry, business, employment, agricultural pursuits, Governmental service," and added the words "or in any other service or endeavor," so that local draft boards would have the opportunity for discretion in the case of union executives.

National Defense Mediation Board Settles Issues in Regulator Plant Dispute

The National Defense Mediation Board, successful in averting a strike threatened eight days ago at the Minneapolis-Honneywell Regulator Co., yesterday effected a settlement of the issues in dispute.

Terms of the agreement, which were not immediately made public, were expected to be ratified as a matter of course last night in Minneapolis by members of the C. I. O. United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers local involved.

The union, seeking recognition and clarification of its status in respect to an independent union which also had membership in the plant, set a strike deadline for midnight, April 28. A few hours before the scheduled work stoppage, the Labor Department certified the case to the board, which requested that there be no strike.

A stoppage would have involved 2,000 men, working on $3,000,000 of Army ordnance orders for fire control apparatus.

Defense production at the Ex-Cell-O Corporation, one of the largest tool-making companies in Detroit, was halted yesterday by a strike of C. I. O. United Automobile Workers, the Associated Press reported.

The strike was said to involve 3,000 workers. It became effective at midnight Monday and climaxed two weeks of unsuccessful negotiations.

The union originally demanded wage increases of 10 cents an hour, and last Sunday rejected a company offer reported to call for a 5-cent boost. The present basic wage rate was not made public.

Another pre-strike dispute, involving union recognition issues at the Pittsburgh plant of the Allis-Chalmers Co., will be heard before a board panel a 10 a. m. today. Officials of the company and the U. E. R. M. W. will meet with a board panel headed by Chairman Clarence A. Dykstra. The labor representative is Clinton Golden, C. I. O. Steel Workers Organizing Committee official, and the management member of the panel is Cyrus Ching, of the United States Rubber Co.

Meantime, a five-man board panel continued its conferences with union and management of the General Motors Corporation, where a strike of 61 plants was deferred when the dispute was certified to the board April 25.

Conferees declined to comment on progress at the negotiations. Further sessions are scheduled today.

Settlement of a five-day C. I. O. Steel Workers Organizing Committee strike against the General American Transporation Co. at Masury, Ohio, was reported yesterday by the Associated Press. The agreement was effected on the company's promise to make retroactive to April 1 a 10-cent-an-hour wage boost to the 500 workers employed.

Westbrook Pegler

As the Washington newspaper which had the honor of printing Westbrook Pegler's pieces on union racketeering, The Post extends its congratulations to Mr. Pegler on the award of the Pulitzer Prize for that series. The award is given "for a distinguished example of a reporter's work." Formally Mr. Pegler is not a reporter, but a columnist, and yet the expose which came from Mr. Pegler's pen was an outstanding example of reportorial craftsmanship. The reporter's primary job is to get the facts. In this case the facts were difficult to find, but Mr. Pegler never relaxed his quest, and the story he finally exhumed "stood up" in every detail. Then a story has to be written as well as found. Mr. Pegler, as our readers well know, has more than a knack for writing a story; he clothes it in a style all his own, imparting to it a pungency and a savor which are now known in journalism as Peglerian. It took courage to write such a series, too. The upshot of the series, finally, proved Mr. Pegler to have rendered a public service of such high distinction that the prize committee had probably no hesitation in giving him the accolade.

Administration Bill

President Roosevelt's indorsement of the Overton bill gives it the status of an Administration measure, and now Majority Leader John W. McCormack has underlined Administration support for the bill by according it his personal approval. Likewise it has the support of the House District Committee. As the bill goes before the House next Monday, therefore, it may be properly regarded as an important item in the Administration's legislative program for 1941.

The House ought to consider the Overton bill in the light of this fact. The Administration is eager to avert the crisis that would certainly arise if Congress should deny the District funds to expand its municipal services in this time of emergency growth. The Senate has manifested the same concern by passing the Overton bill. It is not to be supposed that the House will unquestioningly fall into line. But, while intelligent debate on such issues is always desirable, the House certainly ought to face the issue of providing adequate revenue for the District. That body has rejected proposed amendments to the local income tax. Its legislative responsibility could not possibly be met by mere rejection of this bill.

Of course, the Overton bill, which calls for adjustment of the Federal payment to the District on the basis of Federal land holdings here, ought to be passed in fairness to this city of many tax exemptions. Then the perennial row over the sum of the annual Federal payment to the District could be terminated by acceptance of the most reasonable "yardstick" available. But even if these considerations fail to sway the House, it should remember that it is dealing with a problem that must be solved in one way or another. No one appears to have devised a practicable substitute for the Overton plan to date. Unless a better plan can be worked out this week, the House will be under a strong obligation to follow the lead which the President and Majority Leader McCormack have given.

Symbol Of Hope

As events go today the news that Hailie Selassie is back at Addis Ababa is not a major item of news. Yet as a symbol of what can happen elsewhere in a world swept by the totalitarian tide, the return to his ancient throne of the Lion of Judah and King of Kings is not without its real significance. Ethiopia was the first nation whose sovereignty was completely destroyed by Fascist aggression. It was, unfortunately, not the last. During the five years that elapsed between the time Haile Selassie left Addis Ababa and his return, Ethiopia's fate has been repeated at the expense of many other nations—Austria, Czecho-Slovakia, Poland, Norway, the Low Countries, France, Yugoslavia, Greece and others. Hitler on Sunday proclaimed again that the Third Reich he has established over their resistance will live for a thousand years, but no doubt it was with the same illusion of permanence that Mussolini proclaimed the founding of the new Roman Empire in 1936, after his armies had triumphed in Ethiopia. Mussolini's empire, however, is now in ruins. And, in so far as Italy itself has not disintegrated altogether, that has only been because Italy today is in the position that Ethiopia was yesterday, a conquered country run for the benefit of the conquerors. It is Ethiopia that is rising from the ashes. Is there not a lesson in all this for the occupied countries of Europe?

More Than Convoys

It is not often we agree with the kept press of Nazi Germany, but yesterday the Deutsche Allegemaine Zeitung made a comment that is irrefutable. Writing on American aid to Britain, the paper said that the task of delivering American aid to Great Britain was the crux of the situation, not machines. Nobody who is watching the Battle of the Atlantic will dispute the statement. It is good news that the output of bombers is to be accelerated, but the machines are destined for the smashing of Hitlerism, and this job must await victory in the sea battle which is raging in our front yard.

That this battle is distinctly our battle is pretty well acknowledged in every poll of American opinion. If Hitler wins the Battle of the Atlantic, this ocean will become what Secretary Cordell Hull calls "a broad highway" for the swastika. In other words, a country that has sworn to dominate the world will be in control of the ocean which washes our Atlantic seaboard. Our own Navy, to be sure, would still be afloat, but by that time Hitler's Europe would have at its disposal shipbuilding facilities which, as Alsop and Kintner again remind us, would leave us hopelessly outclassed. Moreover, we would be faced instantly with the breaking up of our Pan American bloc. An uneasiness is already reported among our Latin-American friends as they see the approaches to their continent taken one after the other by Adolf Hitler.

We are behind schedule, anyway, in the production effort which is necessary to make our country the "arsenal of democracy." And time has become such an inexorable taskmaster that waste is intolerable. At home, in fact, we are taking every step to cut it out, and, furthermore, to harness to the full our tool-making equipment. But what kind of a policy is aid-to-Britain when we see the fruits of our labor sent to the bottom of the sea? It is said that the sinkings amount to 40 per cent of our exports. If this goes on, our frustrated aid will not only discourage the British; it will discourage the men at work in our own arsenal. Aid to Britain, in other words, is falling between the Presidential "they shall get the goods" pledge and the Churchill request to "give us the tools." A bridge between them must be made before the two ideas are reduced to a mere exchange of poetic sentiment.

Time, indeed, requires more even than a decision to see that Britain gets the goods. In the past The Post has said that our aid policy must keep the same tempo as the war itself. But since the lend-lease bill was passed, Hitler has conquered virtually all continental Europe, has erased most of Britain's North African gains, is now turning the Middle East into a battleground, and is engaged in making rubble out of Britain's cities. The shadow of his might is now looming over the American continent for all to see. And the spectacle may at any time convince Japan that, with Britain so heavily engaged, and with America inhibited, the time is ripe for her threatened rampage across our Pacific communications. Mr. Matsuoka hitherto has been playing for time—one reason, no doubt, for the soundings for an American trip. Yet we continue to lag behind in our own defense measures against this encircling menace.

So much lost time has to be made up that the logical next step is for the President to bypass convoys and ask country and Congress for the recognition that the Battle of the Atlantic is so much our battle as to warrant our fullest naval participation. We can leave it to our Navy "to get there fustest" before all the approaches and points d'appui to our continent are Nazified. Rule the air we must before Naziism can be crushed, but there is a prior claim on our energies, and that is to rule our own seas.

Windfall Of Time

It is now almost a month since Axis mechanized forces, moving with breathtaking speed across Cyrenaica, recaptured practically all the territory which Gen. Wavell's army of the Nile had previously wrested from the Italians. Suez, as Winston Churchill bluntly pointed out to his hard-pressed but undiscouraged people, was again in danger. That danger remains, and is not to be discounted. The end of the struggle in the Balkans has released a large number of seasoned fighting men which Germany and Italy are now in a position to send to the North African front. It has also released German air power capable of harassing British land and sea communications in the eastern Mediterranean. It is far too early to take an optimistic view of the British situation in that area, particularly in view of the new and added and potentially very serious complications arising from recent developments in Iraq. Yet if the British situation in Egypt remains critical, it is not yet desperate.

The month that has elapsed since the fall of Derna has given Gen. Wavell a badly needed breathing spell in which to reorganize and reinforce his weakened lines. A large part of the army he had been forced to divert from Egypt and Libya for Greece managed successfully to evacuate the Greek mainland, and is now available for action in Africa, though the loss of mechanized equipment left behind in Greece may immobilize part of these reinforcements until new equipment can be supplied. With the fighting in East Africa about over, part of the British Empire forces that have been fighting in that sector is being moved to Egypt.

In the meantime the British have reason to be encouraged by the stout and successful resistance put up by their garrison at Tobruk. That fortified city has repeatedly been attacked by mechanized Axis units. But its fall, which the Italians confidently predicted as imminent as far back as April 8, has not yet taken place. On the contrary, the Tobruk garrison has again and again managed to carry out successful counterattacks resulting in the capture of many prisoners. And, as long as Tobruk holds out, any further venture by the Germans and Italians beyond their present outposts at Solum would be fraught with danger.

Now, with the torrid season in Egypt very close at hand, the Axis may find extensive military operations in that sector difficult if not impossible.. No wonder, then, that there are increasing reports of German pressure on Vichy and Madrid to bring the governments of unoccupied France and of Spain into the military orbit of the Axis. It was widely predicted some time ago that a drive on Gibraltar would coincide with a drive on Suez. With operations in the Suez area difficult Hitler may decide to concentrate at this time on the western instead of the eastern end of the Mediterranean. The British, therefore, have no reason for complacency in their acquirement of a windfall of time in Egypt. Nonetheless they can find some real comfort in the circumstance that for a month the German-Italian drive in Egypt has been stalled, even if only temporarily.

Arcadian Spring

A nostalgic letter has come into this office from Junction City, Kans. It is from a woman who visited the Capital 30 years ago, and she was moved by some cherry blossoms in her own countryside to tell us of her memory of Washington. In the locket she opened for our benefit, there is not a word about the sights. All she remembers is the loveliness of spring in Washington, and at the close of her letter, she asks, rather wistfully, "Is it so lovely, still?" The question, coming from such a distance in time and space, did not cause us to look around for the answer, only to put it down. Yes, Washington must be just as lovely. At any rate, no spring, according to old residents, has been kinder than this, though it arrived most ungently, with an eagerness which quickened the growth of trees and flowers. We forgave the abruptness of the visitation when we saw the intent and began to enjoy the result of it. And this is what Washington and its army of visitors have been doing these three weeks past. In the parks, which we had known as Arcady long before Lord Halifax had his Arcadian experience there, the flowers and the trees were almost miraculously unlocked, and the honeysuckle crept over the sills in private gardens with almost visible swiftness. It was a magic bursting forth of bud and bush and tree.

But our correspondent picked out of her remembrances the gardens of the White House. Well, the lilacs there have been and gone, there is no dogwood left, the magnolias are no more, but the trees and the garden flowers are making up for the departed glory of the bushes. It is a parade which the laughing soil seems to provide endlessly. In full bloom right now is the noble horse chestnut which fringes the Presidential grounds. Perhaps there were no tulips around the fountains when our correspondent was here, but we may tell her that they are red on the south side, and pink on the north. We mention them in particular because their dappled beauty gets a full quota of exclamations from those who come our correspondent's way. No doubt she did not miss the livelier iris, but we wonder whether she saw them swaying in the same light breeze which put them all in commotion for our benefit. Even the roses are budding, and now the greensward is taking on a warmer green.

And overall there is a softness in the air of ethereal mildness. This is the gentle spring that the poets sang about. Nobody wants to stay indoors in such a season, and, seemingly, nobody does. The benches under the leafy trees in park and square are full—by day with Government clerks eating their picnic lunches and at night by couples exchanging their vows. Truly this spring makes the day a delight and gives the evening a velvet clerk for those whose tempo of work has been tuned up by the harsh necessities of an unlovely world. Yes, Washington is as lovely, still—a capital in which we Americans may well take pride, especially when a 30-year-old memory of it can be kept so fresh and green.

FROGS IN THE PATH

It makes no difference where we tramp
Over the path where moss is damp,
The frogs are here, tiny and quick,
Jumping aside on rock and stick
To miss our feet. Listening, we pause
And hear the rustle that they cause
On leaf and stem . . . so it is known
We cannot stray this wood alone.
Under the drooping leafy branch
Frogs are a pattering avalanche,
Fearful of our company
And doing more good to woods than we.

Strike Substitute

In these times the making of a proposal for the elimination of strikes needs no apology. The strike, as such, has no friends among either labor or management. Its only excuse is that labor lacks any other method of backing up its bargaining with management. Consequently, the suggestions so far made for the legislative elimination of strikes are objectionable in that they are designed to ameliorate the situation at the expense of one party to industrial disputes—labor—and that they would seriously infringe, if they did not altogether terminate, labor's liberty to bargain. I therefore believe that a legislative solution to the problem should be sought which would give labor a quid pro quo: a strike substitute which would retain every characteristic of the strike proper save the disastrous stoppage of production, which is, after all, the principal aspect of a strike to which legitimate exception may be taken.

I propose a Federal statute, which may conveniently be divided into two sections. Section 1 would absolutely prohibit any organized cessation of production, providing stiff penalties for those found guilty of inciting such a cessation or participating therein. Section 2, however, would permit any labor organization, in circumstances in which a strike would now be legal, to declare a state of "substitute strike." As soon as notice to this effect has been served upon the employer, he shall be compelled to pay into the Treasury of the United States, to be used for purposes of national defense, a fixed sum per day. This sum should bear the same relation to his daily profit that the number of men represented by the striking organization bears to the total number of employes: that is, if the union represents 70 per cent of his employes, he must contribute 70 per cent of his profits during the period of the strike; if it represents all of them, he must pay all of his profits into the Treasury. To make matters equal, each employe represented by the striking union (or, alternately, each employe who would be prevented from working by a real strike) will receive only 25 per cent of his normal wage during the strike, the other 75 per cent being paid into the Treasury for defense purposes. The application of the statute would be limited to plants certified by the War or Navy Department to be engaged in defense production.

In my opinion, such an arrangement would retain substantially every legitimate effect of a strike. The pressure which would be placed upon management would be that which is now placed upon it—loss of profit during the period of the strike. Whatever gain might accrue to management from the adoption of the substitute would be balanced by the fact that labor would lose only 75 per cent instead of 100 per cent of its wages during the period of the dispute. The statute would not affect the rights of labor otherwise than as above mentioned. The rights to organize and to bargain collectively would be unimpaired, and the Wagner Act would be enforced as before.

This plan, however unusual, seems to me, in the light of present conditions, substantially sound. However fastastic it may seem, it is certainly less fantastic than the spectacle of two groups, each in mortal peril, stopping work on the weapons with which to protect themselves in order to settle a private quarrel.

International Court

Unless the people of America are willing that they and their progeny may be compelled for a generation to labor as slaves that Germany can be indemnified for injuries suffered by reason of our departure from neutrality to intervene in the war, they must insist that the naval forces of the United States be engaged immediately to demolish that power's quasi-piracy which is called, and is not, a blockade.

With England's power eliminated, and the nations of Europe reduced to a condition analogous to that of the native states of India, Germany's only serious anxiety would be the United States. The Germans pretend to believe that America is too conglomerate in composition to withstand the cataclysmal shock of a prolonged war; regardless of this opinion, that power probably would not desire, previous to a demonstrated permanency of the reconstitution of Europe, to wage such a costly and dangerous war with us. From the political history of France near the end of the last century is a menacing suggestion. A Gallic admiral published an article in which he proposed that an object of the naval armada France was to build ought to be the extracting of ransoms from British coastal cities exposed to the danger of being leveled from the sea. The proposal was so approved that this officer obtained a government seat and was placed in charge of the Admiralty.

Such a Germany, plus a fleet, and German interests in Europe and the earth round, would be less vulnerable to injury by the United States than America, with the mightiest fleet we could build, would be to injury by Germany, for our resources of men and materials would be less immense than Germany's, assuming that the conquered peoples finally acquiesced in their subjugation in consideration of the right to exist and any advantage besides that Germany might grant—such, for illustration, as migration to Germanized regions in Latin America.

The fundamental political faults of our present civilization are that international law is less a command of sovereignties enunciated by themselves to control their relations than an imperfect modus vivendi with endless provisos to relieve any power of serious restraint except when a nation or nations intervene to frustrate an aggressor, and the nonexistence of an international judiciary. Only by ending them may the nations realize the immunity voiced by Isaiah, that the fruit of righteousness is peace, and the result of righteousness, quietness and assurance forever. By the establishment of such lawful righteousness in the relations of nations, whose remedy for wrongs would be a court instead of war, an earth in which armed conflicts would be minimized, if not completely prohibited, would be guaranteed for the future.

World Peace

Thinking people well know that the way we think, that way we act and do. Hence, shall not America become too war-minded, like struggling Europe, when all we read, all we think and all we talk is war and war? Oh, where, oh, where, are the great, the courageous, the stout-hearted leaders of our day who will challenge for world peace—to stop the carnage, the misery, the cruel shouts of "war over there?"

Quotes From Lincoln

In a letter recently published in The Post a correspondent used an excerpt from Lincoln's first inaugural address, with the purpose of exhorting us to "stop, look and listen" before taking a more active part in the present world war.

May I, too, quote from one of Mr. Lincoln's speeches? In speaking of ambition, he says, "It thirsts and burns for distinction and, if possible, it will have it whether at the expense of emancipating slaves or enslaving free men. Is it unreasonable, then, to expect that some man possessed of the loftiest genius, coupled with ambition to push it to its utmost stretch, will at some time spring up among us? And when such a one does, it will require the people to be united with each other, attached to the Government and laws, and generally intelligent, to successfully frustrate his designs." About 26 years after making those statements Mr. Lincoln signed the Emancipation Proclamation. And about two years after that Booth shot him, crying as he did so: Sic semper tyrannis.

Mr. Lincoln was never troubled by the fear of inconsistency, which Emerson called the hobgoblin of little minds. He did what he believed to be right and necessary, regardless of previous utterances. Mr. Booth still passionately believed that a man who had achieved greatness at the expense of liberating slaves was a tyrant. Many Americans still hold the beliefs voiced by Mr. Lincoln in the same speech: "All the armies of Europe, Asia and Africa combined, with all the treasure of the earth (our own excepted) in their military chest, with a Bonaparte for a commander, could not by force take a drink from the Ohio or make a track on the Blue Ridge in a trial of a thousand years." This country is a great deal larger, this world a great deal smaller, than they were in 1837 when young Abraham Lincoln spoke before the Young Men's Lyceum at Springfield, Ill., on the subject, "The Perpetuation of Our Political Institutions."

"The devil can quote Scripture" and quite honest and sincere people can today find in the speeches of Washington, Jefferson, Madison, Lincoln, statements to back their varying beliefs as to our right course of action in this present crisis. What many fail to realize is that each of these great men spoke for himself in his time, what he himself at that time believed to be right. These men were not concerned with tradition, precedent or consistency; they were concerned only with their vision of right and their duty to act upon it.

Such a man as Lincoln referred to has indeed sprung up among us. He has enslaved the free people of many nations. He has himself proclaimed his ultimate aim: A German-dominated world. It is time for "the people to be united with each other . . . to successfully frustrate his designs."

Convoys, Planes, Pilots

Unless we heartily and quickly give all-out aid to Britain, it will be "all-out" of liberty, independence and civilization for us. Speed up convoys, send planes and pilots to defeat the monstrous force that spreads across the world.

MATHILDE KRENGER.
New York City, May 1.

Last November some 50,000,000 Americans voted for Roosevelt and Willkie to lead them. The course of world events since then has made it inevitable that both of these far-sighted and broad-minded leaders realize that if human freedom, including our own, is to survive, the Nazi slave-drivers must be beaten. Each succeeding week makes it more apparent that only the might of America combined with the courage and position of the British can lick the tyrants. Our great strength must be given without stint; not some time when it suits us to stop bickering and get around to it, but right now when Britain faces the most horrible pounding from the air and from under the sea that fiendish ingenuity can devise.

Instead of taking polls of bewildered people torn between hatred for brutal tyranny and fear for their sons, why not take a poll of the rank and file of the Navy and Air Force. They are the men who will fight this war, not the civilian army. Let's hear what they say about joining the British navy and the Royal Air Force in the World War for freedom versus slavery.

The Major's Mare

"You say you had three years of basic training in the R. O. T. C. infantry course in college?"

"Yes, sir."

"But your certificate here states that you successfully completed the two-year course, qualifying you to perform the duties of a corporal in the Organized Reserves."

"That's correct, sir."

"What, then, caused you to spend three years in the service on a two-year course?"

"The major and a horse, sir."

"What?"

"Yes, sir. It hapened when the officers attached to the R. O. T. C. unit at the university staged a horse show for the amusement of themselves and the edification of the student body. Most of the students had never seen a horse show before and wouldn't have recognized a horse's conformation had it stared them in the face.

"Maj. St. Julian Palmer Gilmore was professor of military science and tactics and commandant of cadets at the university. He was a huge fellow, pompous and red-faced, and possessed of a stentorian voice. An old campaigner, the major had been in the Army when bows and arrows were standard equipment, and he had a long memory and a short temper. And no sense of humor!

"The horse show was held on a warm, sunny afternoon in the early spring. An arena and corral had been improvised over on the parade ground by the enlisted men. Knock-down bleachers (borrowed from the athletic department) were set up. Boxes for the honor guests were draped with bunting.

"Long before the gorgeously arrayed announcer rode into the show ring to call the contestants for the opening event, the stands were filled to overflowing. The boxes were occupied principally by R. O. T. C. officers and their broods. It was evident that the R. S. V. P. on the printed invitations sent to the officers' wives had been accepted literally, for riding suits were very prominent amongst the service set. And, strangely enough, the ladies with the most generous contours wore the brightest and the tightest breeches. As they gossiped and fanned themselves lackadaisically with pine boughs to disperse the myriad gnats and mosquitos, their offspring consumed ice cream suckers in a manner noisy and sadly lacking in Army efficiency.

"The bleacher seats behind the boxes were filled with students who had turned out either from sheer curiosity or for reasons politic.

"Maj. Gilmore was competing in one of the jumping classes. He made a fine figure of a man as he cantered into the arena astride a big black mare (listed on the mimeographed programs as Bad Girl, out of Mother's Trouble by Disaster). Horse and rider were a fitting complement to each other and the audience leaned forward expectantly as the pair prepared to negotiate the five hurdles lining the oval course.

"The starter gave a signal and they were off! The major spurred his mount and she bore down on the first hurdle at a gallop. Suddenly, almost on top of the barrier, she swerved to the right and ran around it. Pulled up for a second attempt, she neatly sidestepped to the left. After repeated efforts, in which the major's persistence failed to impress Bad Girl, they finally took off at a gallop toward the next obstacle.

"Upon arrival, the mare halted directly before the hurdle and daintily kicked each of the pine rails off the uprights with a forefoot. Again the major's zealousness failed to register upon his mount. He began to look explosive.

"A poorly stifled titter welled up from the student body, but died aborning in the spring air beneath the belligerent glares of the officers and their families.

"The next two hurdles were a repeat performance—run around one and kick one down. Maj. Gilmore was definitely irritated, but Bad Girl was having a wonderful time. Horse shows were fun! The audience maintained a silence almost noisy, save for an occasional and anonymous giggle of uncontrolled mirth.

"Then came the final hurdle. Racing at it under the flailing hand of the major, the horse skidded to a stop just before running through it. The rider's lusty comment, heard by most of the gallery, was eloquent. The mare, forefeet planted defiantly apart, rolled her head from side to side as though in doleful meditation. Then, without warning, she gathered herself and sailed skyward, clearing the fence beautifully. The crowd was surprised. The major was surprised too. He fell off. Bad Girl reared, emitted a caustic snort, and broke for the stables on the far side of the drill field pursued by two enlisted men in blue dungarees.

"Somehow, Maj. Gilmore learned that I wrote the local newspaper story of the horse show. The summation in the final paragraph displeased him. It read, 'The most intelligent performance of the afternoon must be credited to a big black mare named Bad Girl.'

"It was then that the major decided a repeat course in the second year of basic infantry training might be of real benefit to me, sir."

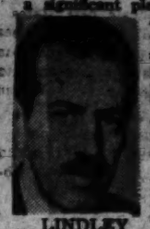
Price Control

By Ernest K. Lindley.

Labor Unions And Prices

THE UNITED Shoe Workers of America, through their general executive board, have addressed a significant plea to Leon Henderson, Administrator of Prices and Civilian Supply. It is a plea to prevent "unwarranted increases" in the retail price of shoes.



LINDLEY

It is almost unheard of for a labor union to seek to prevent price increases in its own industry. The custom has been to seek higher wages, and let the industry do what it could about increasing prices. Sometimes, the resultant increase in prices has been used as an argument for still another increase in wages. And sometimes, especially in the building business, unions, contractors, and supply houses have worked hand in hand to raise prices.

When the argument that higher prices would be bad for an industrial product has been made by either employes or employers, it usually has been made by the latter. Too often it has been a blanket argument against wage increases. The industries in which both sides have bargained with an attempt to appraise fully the effect of wage increases on prices and consumption are rare.

BUT NOW there is a Government agency to watch over and try to control prices, and the United Shoe Workers ask it to prevent unwarranted price increases. In support of their plea they recall what happened in 1937 and 1938.

In 1936 the index of wholesale prices for men's black calf lace oxford shoes averaged 102.7. By January, 1937, it had become 105.3. By the fall of 1937 it had become 113.3.

"These price increases were maintained through the spring of 1938 and had such an effect on the market that the fall of 1938 saw a price decline greater than the original increase," write the United Shoe Workers.

"As a result, production and employment dropped so that the period January to August, 1938, compared with the same period of 1937, showed a 16.7 per cent decline with a greater decline in pay rolls due to the chaos created in the market."

Both wages and profits dropped. But in 1939 and 1940, at lower price levels for shoes, they picked up again, according to the United Shoe Workers.

Of course, there was a general and sharp business recession in the fall of 1937 and spring of 1938. Excessive price increases in the spring of 1937 may have been one cause.

THE SHOE WORKERS want higher wages, naturally. They are especially eager to get them in the low-wage unorganized centers—which held the average annual wage of shoe workers throughout the country to $942 in 1939. But, they assert, wages can be increased—as much as 20 per cent in the low-wage areas—without requiring much of an increase in shoe prices. On the average, labor costs are less than 25 per cent of manufacturing costs of shoes. They estimate that a 20 per cent increase in wages would require an increase of only 2.3 per cent in retail prices.

Even this additional cost, they assert, can be absorbed by rising consumer demand and greater production, resulting in lower overhead costs. Present production is at the rate of about 400,000,000 pairs annually, whereas the estimated capacity of the industry as it now stands is 750,000,000 pairs.

The United Shoe Workers also register a protest against increased costs "due to speculative actions in the hides market."

How much, if any, shoe prices must be increased to take up current or impending increases in wages is a problem for the experts. In this, as in other industries, there obviously are limits to the wage increases that can be granted without forcing prices higher. But wage increases should not be used as an excuse for excessive price increases.

ADMINISTRATOR Henderson stopped a general increase of steel prices, following the recent wage increases. Some steel prices may be upped. Indeed, under sliding scale Government contracts, the steel companies have the right to pass on to the Government part of the wage increases. But Henderson's action won time for a thorough investigation.

Henderson's great task is to prevent a general spiraling of prices—in other words, inflation. It is to everybody's interest that he succeed. If he is to succeed, brakes must be applied to wage increases—at least in some lines where they are already as high as they can go without forcing prices up.

The United Shoe Workers want their wage increases, but they recognize that it is to their interest to prevent shoe prices from skyrocketing. They believe employers and employees alike will benefit from holding prices down and trying to increase the consumption of shoes. By implication, they acknowledge that there are limits to the wage increases they can ask or exact without defeating this larger purpose. For they take the trouble to argue that the wages they are asking for now will not require much of a price rise.

THE UNITED Shoe Workers want Administrator Henderson to appoint experts to sit down with representatives of the shoe manufacturers and of the union and study the price problem.

This is good publicity for the union, of course. But, more than that, it is encouraging that at least one union is looking beyond wage increases to their effect on prices and, in turn, to the effect of higher prices on the welfare of their own industry and of the country generally.

What Can We Do?

IT IS CLEARLY time for a report on just what this country is physically able to do about the war. Much loose talk, both overgloomy and over-cheerful, is going the rounds. The moment of American decision is appallingly close at hand, unless the war is simply to be lost by default. Where does the real truth lie?

A careful check made at the War and Navy Departments and among men now working regularly at the White House reveals that the truth lies, as usual, about halfway between the extremes of contrary rumors. American preparation has not yet reached the stage at which an expeditionary force of any size can safely be sent out of this country, even to North Africa. That must wait, if it is to be done at all. But American preparation has already reached, and passed, the stage at which active American intervention would probably fundamentally alter the present course of the war.

THE MAIN THINGS that can be done are four in number. First, and by far the most important, is meeting the German threat in the Atlantic. As has been noted before in this space, a small, informal British-American joint committee, composed chiefly of distinguished naval and air officers, quietly worked out a complete system of shipping protection during the winter. The job was finished a good many weeks ago, and the chief British officers who sat on the committee have already returned to London. American naval authorities have also visited Britain to perfect details, and see to the adequacy of proposed bases.

The exact nature of the proposed system is naturally secret. But in broad outline it is understood to call on this country to clear a safe sea lane, by naval and air action, from Halifax to Greenland to Iceland to North Scotland, leaving to the British navy the onerous tasks of coastal convoying and protection of shipping elsewhere on the world's oceans. About three weeks ago, the President was so nearly determined to initiate the system that he put out feelers to learn what support he would receive among his own followers and in the Republican opposition. The replies to these feelers were extremely satisfactory, yet he drew back, probably from a mixture of personal indecision and fear of public opinion.

Second, although it is impossible to gather and equip a continental expeditionary force as yet, the Army and Navy are quite adequately prepared to occupy and defend the Atlantic islands. The Azores and the Cape Verdes are of great importance in the battle of the Atlantic. Possession of them will be a crucial advantage to this country, should Britain fail for want of American support. Large detachments of German "tourists" and the like are already at work in the Atlantic islands. Intelligence reports show shipping being gathered by the Germans for a raid on them. Forestalling such a raid would be both easy and highly profitable.

THIRD, the two moves described above imply American acceptance of full war partnership with Britain. Although they might not entail a declaration of formal belligerence, they would have the effect of one, on Britain, where the morale of the people needs a tonic; on Germany, where every intelligence officer agrees American intervention would be greeted as an irretrievable disaster; and finally in the still neutral nations. This last effect is especially deserving of consideration. Backing up Spain, Portugal, the French in North Africa and the Turks may seem a bet on a long shot. Nevertheless it is a bet good enough to be made, in the opinion of many authorities, in such desperate times as these.

Fourth, American acceptance of full war partnership with Britain will also imply an all-out American effort. This will have several good results. Primarily, more war materials will go to Britain than are going now. The War Department, for example, has decided that so long as Britain is still in the ring, three-quarters of our output may reasonably be sent abroad. Not so much as this is going now. Then, in addition, the "business as usual, this is not an emergency" psychology will disappear, both in the Government and among the people. And when that goes, the production program will spurt forward magnificently.

A picture of our situation in little is presented by the status of tank production. On the one hand, quantity tank production will not begin until July, when Chrysler will start producing five medium tanks daily, Baldwin Locomotive three, and American Locomotive three. Without tanks, a continental expeditionary force cannot be equipped. On the other hand, because no all-out effort is being made, nowhere near the full potential production is now scheduled. Chrysler's output, for instance, is calculated on a one-shift basis, whereas Chrysler alone can turn out between 12 and 15 tanks daily, if all goes well, with mobilization of labor to permit three shift operation.

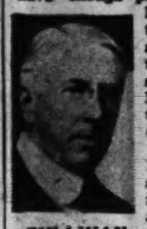
IN AIRCRAFT, in small arms and in one or two other special fields, the program is more advanced. In certain essential products, such as big antiaircraft guns, the lag is even worse than it is in tank output. Fortunately, reports recently received show that British production has held up incredibly well, actually increasing slightly rather than dropping off, despite the worst the German bombers can do. Among the best American strategists, there is none who accepts the thesis of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, that the British are beaten already. On the contrary there are few who doubt that if America will accept full partnership with Britain, no opponent can stand up permanently against such a team. Such are the facts which must be taken into account in the great and terrible decision now likely to confront the people in a tragically short time.

Battle Of The Air

By Mark Sullivan.

Britain's Chances For Victory

COL. LINDBERGH, in his latest radio speech, argued—indeed asserted—that Britain cannot win the war. This has started, or coincided with, a large amount of examination and utterances by persons of various degrees of expertness. There is much dissent from Col. Lindbergh's conclusion. Most of the discussion goes on the assumption that airplanes will be the decisive factor. Those who think Britain can win say that presently Britain, with our aid, will have enough planes to defend herself against the German (air attacks; and that thereafter, with still more planes, Britain can carry the air war into Germany.



SULLIVAN

About this, Col. Lindbergh's quite startling statement was: "The area and geographical position of the British Isles, make it impossible to base enough aircraft within them to equal in strength the aircraft that can be based on the Continent of Europe." This amounts to saying that no conceivable quantity of airplanes that we can make for Britain can enable her to win.

COL. LINDBERGH supported his position by saying that "British objectives are now much more accessible to German bombers than German objectives are to British bombers." This is true, at the present time. The Germans possess airports on the coast of France, within 30 to 50 miles of the English coast. A German bomber can fly to London, drop its bombs, and return to its base in perhaps an hour. On the other hand, a British bomber, in order to reach an objective on German soil, must consume some hours.

Obviously the German advantage is great—to say just how great would involve intricate calculation. It is not merely that a German bomber can make 2 or 3 trips in the time it takes a British bomber to make one. The German consumption of gasoline, to make a hit on British soil, is much less than the British must consume to make a hit on German soil. Further than that, because a German bomber needs less gasoline, it can carry a heavier and more destructive bomb.

How all this works out is impossible to be sure about. There are other factors—possession by the British of a greater quantity of gasoline, the difference in quality between British planes and German planes, the difference in skill and daring of pilots, the relation between bomber planes made for offense, and fighter planes made for defense.

THE TRUTH IS, no expert knows how a battle for air supremacy works out—certainly no one knows from experience or precedent, for there has never been any such thing. Frequently the fate of nations, and the map of the world, has been determined by naval battles, by supremacy on the sea, often determined in a single battle of a few hours' or days' duration. About that there are whole libraries of books; thousands of technicians are familiar with that. But if we are now to see the fate of nations, and the map of the world, determined by a contest for air supremacy, there is no precedent from which we can get light.

We know that the contest in the air will differ fundamentally from contests on the sea. Navies, or individual naval vessels, meet each other, stand up to each other, and shoot it out to a finish. But planes fly past each other. It does not happen that armadas of planes, or the whole air forces of nations, come together in a single decisive battle. Apparently the final efficacy of planes depends not on what they do to each other, but on what they do to the armies, navies, cargo ships, buildings and peoples of the opposing nations.

COL. LINDBERGH seemed also to doubt that the United States can necessarily make more planes than Germany. On this point we, with Britain, have a population of some 200,000,000, possessing great skill in mechanical production. Germany has some 80,000,000. True, she has also, now, opportunity to use the factories of Italy, France, Belgium and Holland. The quantity and quality of the planes she can get from unwilling conquered peoples must be inferior. It is difficult to doubt that when America achieves full quantity production, we, with Britain, will make more and better planes than Germany. Also, if and when Britain has more and better planes than Germany, she may be able to blast the Germans out of their present air bases in France and drive them back to where they will lose their present advantage in distance.

WHILE air supremacy is important, the outcome of the war will not be determined by a single duel in the air, as past wars have sometimes been decided, by single duels between navies, or between armies. The outcome of this war will be determined by the sum of many factors—armies, seapower, economic effect of blockades, relative natural resources, morale of peoples. To suggest which side will "win," it is necessary to define that word. If Britain winning means Britain surviving, experts believe that Britain can successfully resist conquest. If Britain winning means Britain conquering Germany, many doubt whether this can be accomplished without a larger army than it seems feasible to land on German soil.

Japan And France Sign Pacts For Indo-China Collaboration

By Otto D. Tolischus

Copyright by New York Times

Tokyo, May 6.—After four months of negotiations, Japan and France today signed two agreements for economic collaboration between Japan and French Indo-China which are hailed here as another concrete step in the establishment of a greater East Asia coprosperity sphere under Japanese leadership.

The signatures were fixed this afternoon.

First agreement is a convention regarding residence and navigation, providing for reciprocal national treatment as a basis and for most-favored nation treatment as the occasion demands, for entry, establishment, acquisition and possession of movable or immovable property in the conduct of commerce, manufacture, the imposition of taxes and treatment of companies. In particular, French Indo-China agrees to admit Japanese capital in the development of agriculture and mining hydraulic concessions. Ships of the two countries will be treated on an equal footing in principle.

The second agreement, a bulky document which required months of study before ratification, concerns trade and tariffs payments. It provides for reciprocal most-favored nation treatment in respect to customs and tariffs, but French Indo-China agrees to admit Japan's products either duty free or at reduced minimum duties, and to impose only minimum duties on all other Japanese products.

In return Japan agrees to give favorable customs treatment for the principal products of Indo-China.

The trade provisions envisage an increased mutual trade with French Indo-China exporting rice, corn, minerals and her other principal products to Japan, and importing Japanese textiles, other manufactured articles, and miscellaneous products.

Payments are to be made in yen and piastres.

Furthermore, French Indo-China agrees to the admission of Japanese commercial firms into the federation of importers and exporters, which was one of the principal issues until recently, the establishment of Japanese schools, and the institution of periodic economic conferences to examine general economic questions between the two countries.

Fair Enough

Of Mrs. Roosevelt

I HAVE counted 10 times 10 before undertaking a discussion of Mrs. Roosevelt's position on union organization, as stated under her signature late in March, and I still have to insist that this lady has taken a pestiferous part in the trouble and has given active aid and comfort to brutal, criminal and implacable enemies of the nonunion citizen and of the involuntary union member. Mrs. Roosevelt concedes—quite belatedly, it seems to me—that persons who prefer not to join unions should not be compelled to do so. This seems to be an indorsement of the open shop, and if that is the correct interpretation of her position, I should like to know when she ever offered any fight on behalf of this important right and principle in the councils of her own union, the Newspaper Guild, which holds the contrary view.

THE NEWSPAPER GUILD not only insists that working journalists with families dependent on them should be compelled to join its ranks—under Communist leadership, incidentally—but savagely rejects that provision of the sacred Wagner Act which is supposed to guarantee workers the right to bargain through representatives of their own choosing. In a recent case in New York several American journalists on the Mirror, becoming rebellious against the Communist domination of their affairs, resigned from the Guild and joined a parallel union of the American Federation of Labor. The A. F. of L. was bargaining agent of their own choosing, but Mrs. Roosevelt's union conducted a Moscow trial, from which the defendants, having resigned, remained absent, and fined all the heretics, one of them the sum of $500. Of course, these fines will not be paid, and in measurable time the Communists will wreck the Guild, but that is beside the point. The point is that Mrs. Roosevelt's own union insists that nonmembers must join, uses compulsion to make them join and conceals within its constitution a negative, shysteresque provision that no member may ever resign. Therein its policy is identical with that of the Communist Party.

Last winter Mrs. Roosevelt personally appeared at a strike meeting called by a New York union, certain of whose officials then were under indictment on a charge of rioting against the public peace and assaulting the New York police. Undoubtedly there were present to hear Mrs. Roosevelt's encouraging remarks individuals who had taken part in this unprovoked and criminal disorder. Since then Harry Van Arsdale, jr., the business agent of this union, has been convicted on the charge of rioting and sentenced to Sing Sing—his second conviction of the kind. In a past occasion he was convicted of felonious assault in the shooting of a man at a union meeting, but the case was reversed on appeal and was dropped when the witnesses recanted their testimony against him. Prosecutors have interesting theories as to the reasons why witnesses recant in shooting cases.

THE RIOT by the union to which Mrs. Roosevelt addressed the remark that all workers ought to join unions was the result of a double-cross. The union's representatives had considerately agreed not to riot, and the police department trustingly reduced its guard to a small force to protect from physical violence those workers who, in the exercise of their rights and their judgment, had preferred not to join.

The union agreed to picket peacefully and in numbers just sufficient to advertise the fact that a strike was in progress. Then, suddenly, a mob of rioters appeared and the small police detail was temporarily routed until reinforcements could come up. This union, incidentally, was the same which was involved in a case that was brought to Mrs. Roosevelt's attention at a Congressional hearing in Washington. Therein it was shown that a destitute citizen had been unable to take a job on a cantonment project because he could not put up an initiation fee of $300, and didn't want to, anyway. On that occasion Mrs. Roosevelt said she thought the case must be unusual, which just showed that she knew practically nothing about a subject in which she has taken a very busy part on the side of those who rob and abuse free citizens.

In her statement of policy Mrs. Roosevelt said: "There have been abuses in the labor movement and I think we should fight them," and I here invite anyone in the house to cite a single instance in which Mrs. Roosevelt fought any abuse by union racketeers or closed-shop coercionists.

Facing Realities

By Barnet Nover

Can America Be Encircled?

IN HIS ADDRESS to the Reichstag on May 4, Adolf Hitler told how delighted he was when the Yugoslav government agreed to become a partner of the Axis and how his joy had turned to fury when news came of the coup d'etat at Belgrade. "You will surely understand, gentlemen," he said, "that when I heard this I at once gave orders to attack Yugoslavia. To treat the German Reich in this way is impossible."

NOVER

Yugoslavia's crime was to assume and to act on the assumption that she was a sovereign and independent state, free to determine her own policies, free to cooperate or refrain from cooperating with the "new order."

Hitler would probably have put up with this affront to his pride had Yugoslavia been strong and powerful. In 1934, he had retreated like a rat to its hole when Mussolini threatened to send Italian troops across the Brenner if the Nazis tried to seize Austria. Germany was then weak and Italy, by comparison, strong. Germany has since become powerful. Yugoslavia was weak. What is worse, by pursuing a policy of neutrality Yugoslavia had allowed herself to become surrounded. No wonder the Indian sign was put on that Balkan kingdom the moment she chose to flout Hitler's wishes.

THERE ARE AMERICANS who in discussing our position in the world insist that we have nothing really to fear from a Hitler victory since we are impregnable on our home grounds. They refuse to admit that the plight in which Yugoslavia found herself last month, France last year, Czecho-Slovakia in 1938, can ever be our plight. Yet nothing could be more short-sighted.

In plotting the conquest of one country after another Hitler has following an unvarying technique. It has consisted, with only minor variations called for by changing circumstances, in dividing his victim from within while surrounding it from without. Through such tactics he was able in due course to encompass the destruction of Austria. Once Austria was incorporated in the Third Reich he could proceed to carry out what proved to be the equally bloodless conquest of Czecho-Slovakia. He was helped in this endeavor by the criminal stupidity of the British and French governments whose policy at the time of the Anschluss, throughout the course of the Spanish War and in the period of crisis leading up to Munich was the very negation of statesmanship.

With Czecho-Slovakia out of the way Hitler began to beat the drum for the return of Danzig. Had Poland been compliant, Germany would have been placed in a position to strangle that republic. Poland resisted. She was destroyed by force after having been surrounded through the German-Soviet deal.

THE SAME THING has happened in the Balkans and is now in process in the case of Turkey, whose statesmen have real cause for alarm since Hitler went out of his way, in his speech of May 4, to praise their nation.

In the Balkans, the occupation of Rumania at the invitation of the Antonescu government destroyed whatever freedom of action Hungary had previously enjoyed. There were men of conscience in Budapest who tried to salvage what they could of Hungary's honor and her self-respect. Teleki was one of them. But Teleki found the going too difficult and committed suicide. Hungary is now a jackal state exhibiting all the characteristics of that unpleasant animal. And Bulgaria is running with the pack. The adhesion of Rumania, Bulgaria and Hungary to the Axis placed Yugoslavia and Greece in a precarious position. To the eternal honor of those brave peoples they preferred death to craven surrender.

THE PROCESS of encirclement is now taking place in the case of Turkey. It is taking place in the case of Russia. And Germany has tried to carry it out in the case of Great Britain.

That is not all. For some time Hitler has been engaged in an ambitious effort to encircle this Nation. It is fantastic to assume that he cannot succeed. He can. In fact, he has made considerable progress in that direction already. We are in far greater danger today than we were before Munich; the fall of France, Hitler's conquest of the Balkans, his threat to dominate the Mediterranean—all these have increased our peril. Our plight would be serious indeed were Great Britain to fall.

As matters stand today the American hemisphere is surrounded by the Axis. On the one side are Germany and her satellites. On the other side is Japan. The partners of the Axis cannot pool their forces against the United States as long as Great Britain and China remain in the fight; at the present moment they can only pool their threats to take action against us should we help their enemies.

These threats would, however, be capable of being translated into grim realities were Great Britain and China to throw in the sponge. Then we should not only have to face a two-ocean menace but also the weakening of the partnership of American states that we have helped to build up in this hemisphere over the last eight years. Turkey's unreadiness to implement her alliance with Great Britain because of Britain's weakness in the Balkans might have its counterpart in the attitude of certain South American states toward the United States in the event of a Hitler victory.

THOSE NATIONS that Hitler has victimized all stood by helplessly like sheep separated in a storm. Each of them thought of its defense in negative, static terms. They waited for the Nazi leviathan to come rumbling over their borders before they would act. By that time it was too late. The time to have acted effectively was then gone.

That is a lesson the United States cannot ignore. As long as the British bastion holds in Europe we are safe, so far as the German menace is concerned. The Balkan nations were safe as long as the Low Countries had not been overrun and the French army destroyed. The Balkan nations were not safe indefinitely. Their bastion was in the west and when that fell they were at the mercy of Hitler. Our bastion is in the Atlantic. If we permit it to fall, we may not be spared the fate that has befallen Greece or Yugoslavia and so many other nations.

Highways of the Future: Redesign of Complex Mt. Vernon Square Proposed

PHOTO-DIAGRAM indicates the complex highway setup at Mount Vernon Square, long an irksome barrier to through traffic on K Street and Massachusetts and New York Avenues. Whitehurst report proposed depressing K Street, east of Seventh Street. (See map below.)

(This is the sixth article in a series about improvements in the District highway system as suggested in the report of the Highway Planning Survey.)

By Howard F. Wentworth
Post Staff Writer

Motorists traveling to Northeast or Northwest Sections of the city along K Street or Massachusetts and New York Avenues have long been irked by the forced detour and congestion at Mount Vernon Square, where the Public Library stands.

Under the recent Highway Planning Survey, Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways, proposed to correct the evil with grade separations and a complete redesign of the library park.

He admits, however, that final plans have yet to be worked out and his engineers are still studying the problem. The possibilities of a tunnel have been discarded, Whitehurst said, because such a project would necessitate moving the library building.

The chances are, it was explained, that Mount Vernon Place, on the north side of the square, will be widened and both Ninth and Seventh Street will overpass the more heavily traveled arteries of New York and Massachusetts Avenues and K Street.

The as yet incomplete plans to revamp Mount Vernon Square would come under the trunk highway development into Northeast Washington, Whitehurst said.

His survey report, now under consideration by the Commissioners, calls for the improvement of K Street east of Seventh Street Northwest to the vicinity of Sixth Street Northeast. This would be done, the report points out by depressing K Street below sidewalk level for the entire distance.

Ramps and service roads would be provided to connect abutting property and important north-south thoroughfares would be bridged over the sunken K Street.

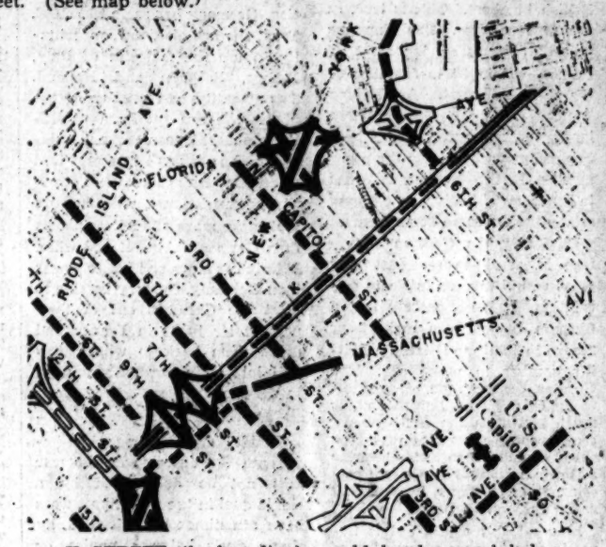
To complete the Northeast route, said Whitehurst, narrow, congested Sixth Street Northeast would be widened from K Street to Florida Avenue, to connect with a proposed grade separation structure.

From that point, Sixth Street would continue through part of Brentwood Park Northeast to the bridge across the railroad terminal yards now under construction at the edge of the park to the west.

Whitehurst emphasized that this project will provide direct access to New York Avenue by an interchange road at the new bridge and to Rhode Island Avenue and the Eckington area.

As a means of further facilitating traffic movement from the Northeast, the Whitehurst report contemplates making K Street Northeast a "triple" highway from Sixth Street to Florida Avenue. This would be done in general accord with the midtown development of K Street between Thirteenth Street and Connecticut Avenue Northwest, which is now divided into three portions by concrete islands.

Through this improvement, said Whitehurst, connections will be provided into Brookland along West Virginia Avenue, New York and Montana Avenues and Eighteenth Street Northeast. The connection of K Street at Florida Avenue also will provide access to the proposed grade separation at Fifteenth Street and Benning Road Northeast, he added.



K STREET (broken line) would be depressed below sidewalk level as far as Sixth Street Northeast. North and south streets would be bridged over sunken K Street. Grade separations would connect with cross streets at each end

EMPEROR PENGUINS SURVEY THEIR REFRIGERATED DEN

The Zoo's birdhouse, closed since January because of a parrot fever outbreak, was opened yesterday—in part—simultaneously with the arrival of ten rare birds from Antarctica.

Visitors were admitted to the house's south wing shortly after the newcomers—three emperor penguins, four gentoo penguins, a pair of kelp gulls and a giant white fulmar—were put on display in the refrigerated den at one end.

The Little Americans joined the four jackass penguins which have been Zoo tenants for several years.

Presented with compliments of the United States Antarctic Service, the low temperature birds arrived in New York Monday aboard the steamer Aconcagua, out of Valparaiso, Chile. The emperors, inquisitive fellows, were captured when they waddled up to an expedition party encamped at Little America. The other birds were taken in the vicinity of the Byrd Expedition's east base.

"We now," said Zoo Director William M. Mann, with unconcealed pride, "have the best penguin collection."

Davis, early in 1940, sent back to the Zoo an emperor penguin which he helped capture when he was a member of the Byrd Expedition, but the tall, 70-pound specimen—his (or her) name was Dugan—did not long survive in captivity.

These three are younger and are expected to take more readily to exhibition

St. Alban's Choir Sings 'Saint Paul'

Choir of St. Alban's Church presents Mendelssohn's "Saint Paul" on Tuesday night. Soloists: Charlotte Ridley Watkins, Teresa Shrader, H. Granville Leef and Thomas N. Leef. Director: Walter H. Nash. Organist: E. William Brackett.

Unperformed in Washington for a considerable number of years, Mendelssohn's oratorio, "Saint Paul," was sung last evening in St. Alban's Church, under the direction of Walter H. Nash. The well-trained choir gave an enjoyable reading of the work, and showed competence in the alternating styles of the music, which calls for both the simplicity of the chorale and the forcefulness of dramatic emotions. The solo parts were well sustained by Charlotte Ridley Watkins, soprano; Teresa Schrader, alto; H. Granville Leef, tenor, and Thomas N. Leef, basso.

BROWN

"Saint Paul," Mendelssohn's first oratorio, will be 103 years old later this month, having had its first performance May 22, 1838, at the Lower Rhine Festival in Dusseldorf. The composer was only 27 and inexperienced in writing religious music, while he was further handicapped by the restrictions imposed by the Caecilien Verein, which commissioned the work. The use of chorales was one of the conditions, and the dramatic effectiveness of the music was thereby weakened. Mendelssohn himself prepared the text, with the aid of his friends, Schubring and Furst.

Some of Mendelssohn's most memorable melodies are incorporated in the oratorio: the soprano aria, "Jerusalem, thou that killest the prophets;" and the alto arioso, "But the Lord is mindful of his own," the tenor solo, "Be thou faithful unto death;" and the choruses, "O great is the depth" and "How lovely are the messengers."

District of Columbia Federation of Music Clubs presents the annual choir festival Tuesday night in Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church.

In observance of National Music Week, the local Federation of Music Clubs offered its annual choir festival for a capacity audience last evening in Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, where it has been presented for several seasons past. Five choirs participated in the program, each singing a group of three numbers, and joining forces to close the concert with Haydn's "Glorious things of thee are spoken."

Deane Shure directed the Mount Vernon Place Choir in Levandovski's setting of Psalm 150, Chaikovski's "Praise the Lord" and his own composition, "Dark Cloud Cover the Sea." Woodside Methodist Church Choir was directed by Dorothy Radde Emery in "O Savior of the World," by Gotz Franz; "Love Divine" and Olds' arrangement of a seventeenth century hymn, "Praise Ye the Lord."

Trinity Church Choir, directed by Ruth Vanderlip, was heard in Candelyn's "The Annunciation," the Russian liturgical hymn, "To Thee We Sing," and Rathbone's "The Strife Is O'er." First Congregational Church Choir was conducted by Ruby Smith Stahl in Schuetz' "Cantate Domino" and two choruses by Melius Christiansen: "When Curtained Darkness" and "Wake, Awake." Joseph Harrison led the Ninth Street Christian Church Choir in O'Hara's "I Walked Today Where Jesus Walked," Voris' "The Path of Prayer" and Ippolitov-Ivanov's "Bless the Lord, O My Soul."

Dr. Freeman Urges Spiritual Preparedness

Adolf Hitler is responsible for "the mightiest attack the Christian ideal of life has ever sustained," and America must prepare itself spiritually "for the stern disciplines which this tragic age imposes," the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Episcopal Bishop of Washington, declared last night.

Opening the Washington Diocese's annual convention at Epiphany Church, Bishop Freeman asserted:

"We pray God that such dire calamities as our kinsfolk and neighbors have suffered may not come to these shores, but, if come they must, let us with renewed faith and deepened consecration be ready to meet them.

"America cannot go on as she has these recent years, she cannot with lowered moral reserves meet her enemies within and without her confines.

"Our immediate problem is not with some wicked and aggressive enemy beyond our borders; our problem has to do with disloyal and selfish and arrogant forces within our gates. A specious liberalism, a boasted modernism and a cheap patriotism, insensible to the laws of decency and morality, constitute a menace to our stability and threaten our permanence."

The story of France "and the record of the lessening of her moral strength and spiritual idealism should not be lost on us," Bishop Freeman declared.

"No Maginot line could prove impregnable when insidious forces had impaired and weakened the foundations of her morale and made her vulnerable to attack. Behind a strong and well-equipped army and an efficient navy must reside those elements that give poise, and loyalty, and moral courage to the defenders of a nation."

Bishop Freeman called on both clergy and laity for "a revived and militant Christian faith" and "a society purged of its uncleanness its flippant and irreverent ways and a Nation founded in righteousness."

While the ministry is "called to a harder and sterner duty than we have ever known," Bishop Freeman said, "may I with deference and respect admonish my brethren, the clergy, that it is not our part, nor is it consistent with our office, to use our pulpits for the purposes of propaganda or for making them recruiting agencies for our military and naval forces?"

Western's Co. K Wins Drill Cup as 10,000 Roar Approval

District Cadet Corps Capt. Alister Anderson, 17, of Western High School's Fourth Regiment, led his Company K to win first honors late yesterday in the annual competitive drill of white high school cadets in Griffith Stadium.

As an estimated 10,000 high school students roared their approval, Dr. Chester W. Holmes, assistant superintendent of schools, pinned the coveted Allison Nailor Medal on Anderson's uniform and presented a new company flag to Sergt. Wayne Kemmell, 18.

Winner of second honors in the competition was Company B, First Regiment, Central High, led by Capt. Richard Williams. Third place was awarded to Company C, Third Regiment, Eastern High School, commanded by Capt. Thomas D. Hollihan. Second and third place awards were individual ribbons for each company's member.

Besides winning the medal and new colors, Western also was given the "General Average by Companies Cup," presented the regiment with highest aggregate points per company. Capt. Anderson, who also was awarded a saber from the Junior Chamber of Commerce national defense committee, lives at 1219 Twenty-sixth Road South, Arlington, Va.

As Anderson and his company filed from the stadium they were mobbed by proud Western girl students.

Judges in the drill were Twelfth Infantry lieutenants from Arlington Cantonment, Richard Maushegian, Merle R. Preble and Richard J. O'Neill. Winning points were Company K, 87.02; Company B, 85.50, and Company C, 83.1. Western High also won last year's event and has placed in almost every meet during the last 20 years.

After a review of the entire brigade, which concluded yesterday's competition, suppers were held for company cadets in each of the schools represented.

Present in the reviewing stand at the drill were several District educational officials, including Dr. Frank W. Ballou, Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, C. Melvin Sharpe, and Mrs. Phillip Smith, all members of the Board of Education. Col. Wallace M. Craigie announced the winning companies.

Among enthusiastic onlookers in the grandstand yesterday was Mrs. Mary C. Spangler, teacher at the Anacostia High School, who designed and made the new company flag which was presented to Sergt. Kemmell, of winning Company K. Kemmell, who lives at 3831 Benton Street Northwest, also was awarded a medal from the Bunker Hill Post, No. 1, American Legion, as sergeant of the winning company.

Recent Official Statements On the Questions of Convoys

Here are some significant statements made within the last month by responsigle Government officials and influential leaders:

April 9—Maritime Commission Chairman Emory S. Land—"In the field of shipping aid to Britain, there is a huge bonfire burning—the submarine menace . . . We might well ask ourselves in our all-out aid to Britain if we could not give greater help by aiding the British to put out the fire rather than by concentrating most of our efforts on feeding it with fuel."

April 24—Secretary of State Cordell Hull—"It is high time that the remaining free countries should arm to the fullest extent and in the briefest time humanly possible and act for their self-preservation . . . aid (to Britain) must reach its destination in the shortest time in maximum quantity. So ways must be found to do this."

April 24—Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox—"We have declared that the fight that England is making is our fight . . . having gone thus far we cannot back down . . . Hitler cannot allow our war supplies and food to reach England—He will be defeated if they do. We cannot allow our goods to be sunk in the Atlantic—we shall be beaten if they are. We must make our promise good to give aid to Britain. We must see the job through . . ."

Neutrality Patrols

April 25—President Roosevelt at a press conference—U. S. neutrality patrols will be sent as far into the waters of the seven seas as may be necessary for the protection of the American hemisphere.

April 25—Wendell L. Willkie at Pittsburgh—"There is no value in our speeding up production over here if our supplies for over there are to rest upon the bottom of the ocean . . . it is necessary to protect these shipments . . ."

April 27—John D. Rockefeller, jr., at New York—"It is my firm conviction . . . that the people of the United States and of all the Americas should see this conflict through; that we should stand by the British Empire to the limit and at any cost."

April 29—President Roosevelt at press conference—Legal authority exists to send American warships into combat zones . . . this does not necessarily mean such action will be taken.

April 29—Secretary of Commerce Jesse Jones to United States Chamber of Commerce—"We have chosen our course . . . to give all possible aid to those countries which are fighting to preserve their independence and our way of life . . . More sacrifices are in store for us."

April 30—President Roosevelt in broadcast opening defense savings campaign—"We must fight this threat (of aggression) wherever it appears. . . ."

May 2—President Roosevelt, requesting round-the-clock schedule for machine-tool defense industries—Arms production must be stepped up to meet "the ever-increasing demands for munitions, planes and ships, caused by the critical situation which confronts our Nation."

May 3—Wendell Willkie at Washington—"The state of sinkings is so serious that we should protect our cargoes of arms and foods to England."

"Ever Ready to Fight"

May 4—President Roosevelt at Staunton, Va.—". . . Freedom of democracy in the world . . . is the kind of faith for which we have fought before, for the existence of which we are ever ready to fight again"

May 5—President Roosevelt in a letter to War Secretary Henry L. Stimson ordering increased production of heavy bombers—". . . Command of the air by the democracies must and can be achieved."

May 5—Chairman Carl Vinson of the House Naval Affairs Committee—"I am for convoys now."

May 5—Representative E. E. Cox (Democrat) Georgia, in House speech—". . . Of course we are going to convoy and we are going to convoy right away."

May 6—(Senator Claude Pepper (Democrat), Florida (in Senate speech)—The American people are "willing to spill their blood" to crush Adolf Hitler and are eagerly awaiting "responsible and authoritative Government leadership to put forward a program to defeat the Axis powers."

Disaster in Balkans Laid To Nazi Superiority in Air

By Russell Hill

Copyright by New York Tribune Inc.

Cairo, May 6.—The most important element in determining the outcome of the battle of the Balkans was air power, according to the thousands of Australian, New Zealand and English soldiers, who fought bravely to hold positions under withering, practically unopposed bombing and machine-gunning attacks by scores of first-line Nazi planes.

Having seen it myself, I did not really need to be told, but again and again soldiers told me about it. Seeing by the uniform that I was a war correspondent they came up eagerly and began talking about the campaign.

"When you write to your newspaper what are you going to write about this campaign?" one young English soldier, who was being evacuated on the same ship with me, asked.

"What do you think I should write," I parried.

"Just one thing," he said decisively. "Airpower. There were other reasons why we lost. There was a 'fifth column' and some other things, but if we had had the planes we could have beaten Jerry."

Followed Planes to Bases

Then he told me of how the Germans had been able to follow the British planes to the latters' bases and destroy them on the ground, until the Royal Air Force was practically disabled from fighting. A Yugoslav pilot with whom I had spoken in Serbia told me the same story about the destruction of the Yugoslav air force. In both cases it had not been possible properly to defend the air fields.

I know how these men felt seeing planes in the sky continuously but seeing only enemy planes.

One result of this was that the German break-through in southern Serbia was facilitated, and more than 1,000,000 Yugoslav soldiers had to lay down their arms. Most of them were anxious to fight, but never got a chance.

Another result of this German air monopoly was that the war-weary Greeks were demoralized and yielded to the Germans without putting up the same determined and heroic resistance they had shown when fighting the Italians.

Even British troops, while their spirit remained unbroken, saw themselves compelled to withdraw in the face of the continued aerial bombardment, to which was added the numerical superiority and greater tank strength of the enemy.

Lesson for the Future

When the causes for the allied air deficiency are discussed the question always arises whether the combined British and American output of planes during recent months had really been so low that only a few squadrons could be spared for such an important campaign as the one in the Balkans.

One answer given is that Great Britain is the main battlefield and that the war will be won or lost there; hence it is essential to build up a large reserve of aircraft there.

The explanation also is heard that Greek air fields were inadequate to maintain a large number of aircraft.

All these discussions would be largely irrelevant if it were merely a question of fixing the blame for what happened. But those who feel that if the Balkan campaign served no other good purpose it can at least be a lesson for the future.

Convoys Urged By Australian Prime Minister

By the United Press

New York, May 6.—Prime Minister Robert Gordon Menzies of Australia arrived today from Lisbon by Dixie Clipper en route to Australia and said he felt the United States should convoy materials to Britain.

In a prepared statement Menzies said the United States could do more than produce war materials, it could "see that they arrive where they will do the most good."

"Are we to understand," a reporter asked, "that you advocate that we should convoy materials to Britain?"

"I do," the Prime Minister replied. "It would be quite bogus of me not to give you that answer. Of course, it is for you to decide on the facts as you see them and I hope that you handle that as a quite honest opinion from me, and not as a suggestion of what your policy should be."

"It's Up to America"

In his prepared statement Menzies asserted Britain cannot lose the war but that the "speed with which she wins" depends on the United States.

Observing that "a long-drawn-out great war can ruin every part of the world," he added:

"So, as Australian Prime Minister, I want to say frankly to the United States of America, it's up to you. Australia has no more natural born interests in the politics of Europe than you have. Like you, we are a long way off, and we have and love a life of our own. But this war is not about the politics of Europe; it's about the politics of the human race."

Menzies said "the enemy is having his inevitable victories," but that they "are aside from the main issue."

"In the next 12 months that issue will be fought out in the air and on the Atlantic," he added.

The United States, he said, can make aircraft, "particularly bombing aircraft, as far as possible to British specifications, on the same scale and with the same concentration as if she were at war."

Army to Call 8,000 Graduates From R. O. T. C. This Summer

The War Department announced yesterday that more than 8,000 young officers would be called to active duty as second lieutenants this summer on their graduation from college and on completion of training in the Reserve Officers Training Corps.

The announcement was made in connection with the fixing of dates for R. O. T. C. summer training camp courses at 31 Army posts, beginning in June.

The R. O. T. C. summons was said to be an unprecedented step. Those who have finished their R. O. T. C. work but have not finished college will not be called immediately.

Accelerated steps to give the Navy patrol type "blimps" for use in hunting submarines was indicated yesterday when Capt. Charles E. Rosendahl told the House Naval Affairs Committee President Roosevelt had withdrawn his opposition to immediate preparation of three naval air stations for lighter-than-air craft.

Sites Are Selected

The stations would be located at Elizabeth City, N. C., in the Boston area and in the San Francisco area.

Rosendahl said they were designed to accommodate six patrol blimps for which the Navy already has let a contract to the Goodyear Co.

Rosendahl said three additional stations would be required to accommodate the additional blimps—one in the Puget Sound area, one in Southern California and one in Florida.

The committee deferred final action on the bill to permit the department to draft an amendment which would direct the return of the Sunnyvale (Calif.) Air Station now being used by the Army Air Corps as a training center, to the Navy for its original purposes as a lighter-than-air base. Chairman Vinson (Democrat), Georgia, said that would eliminate the need for the Navy to build a new West Coast blimp base in the San Francisco area.

The War Department announced that the first two flying schools of a new series designed to raise the Army's pilot training program to at rate of 30,000 pilots a year will be at Dothan, Ala., and Harlingen, Tex.

The department said authority had been granted for an Air Corps advanced training school at Dothan and a flexible gunnery school at Harlingen with construction to begin as soon as possible.

Doctor and 2 Teachers Held For Flogging of Athlete

By the Associated Press

Camdenton, Mo., May 6.—Two Ozark women school teachers and a physician who wants to marry one of them were charged tonight with the "honor lashing" of a young athlete.

The three admitted the flogging, the sheriff said, charging that the youth had criminally attacked one of the women. The victim, Max Caldwell, 23, denied the charge.

He said the doctor brought him to the teachers' cabin on Lake of the Ozarks, near their school, and made him lie on the floor, shirtless, while the teachers wielded a crude cat-o'-nine-tails.

For 45 minutes, Caldwell alleged, Hilda Rhodes, 25, his accuser, and her roommate, Aldythea Keith, 26, flogged him until they were exhausted.

Whip "Homemade"

Caldwell told Sheriff H. J. Williams that last Thursday night Dr. Robert Murrell, 35, of Eldon, Mo., called for him at his Bagnell home. He knew the doctor slightly and accepted his invitation to motor to the women's home at nearby Osage Beach.

There, Caldwell said, Murrell held a revolver on him and gave a "homemade" whip to the teachers.

Afterward, Murrell took Caldwell home, he said. Caldwell reported to Sheriff Williams Saturday, had his "black and blue" back examined by Dr. E. G. Claiborn at Camdenton, and had it photographed.

Camden County Prosecutor Lieu Cunningham charged the doctor and the teachers with felonious assault.

Murrell furnished $2,500 bond and the women $500 each. Their school was closed ten days ahead of schedule.

Denies Attacking Her

Sheriff Williams quoted Miss Rhodes as saying that Caldwell, a high school basketball star and resort center employe, had attacked her during a party west of Camdenton over a year ago. Caldwell, Williams said, admitted having taken her to the party but denied the attack.

Murrell, who recently asked Miss Rhodes to marry him, was quoted by Williams as saying:

"Caldwell had it coming to him. I feel that we were justified."

Murrell admitted having the cat-o'-nine-tails "made for the occasion" and said he burned it after using it, Williams said.

Unusual Pictures In Post Window

Three unusual paintings are this week's exhibit in The Post's art window. They are Sarah and Hesikian, by Pearl Faye Rau, of San Diego; Lilies and Daisies, by Alma Jordan Knauber, of Cincinnati, and Design, by R. G. Twiggs, of Pittsburgh.

The Rau painting is unusual because of its subject—two white cats—and its technique; the Lilies and Daisies because of the wal yellow is used as the key color, and Design is an abstraction.

Right Foods Help to Keep Family Fit

By Ida Jean Kain

THE NUTRITION DIVISION of the Health, Welfare and Related Defense Activities is making a valiant all-out effort to equip Mrs. America with a practical knowledge of nutrition. In one of the latest leaflets issued by the Bureau of Home Economics, the home maker is provided with an excellent means of checking the value of the family menus.

For example, do you give your family one green, leafy or one yellow vegetable every day? Try to include daily one of these: spinach, kale, chard, collards, mustard green, beet or turnip tops, or one of the wild greens such as dandelion, dock, cress or purslane. In addition, there should be potatoes and one other vegetable.

You can save the minerals and vitamins in all vegetables by cooking no longer and in no more water than absolutely necessary. The cooking water or juices should be utilized. Never use soda in cooking vegetables.

Vitamin C Needed

Each member of the family needs a daily serving of orange, grapefruit, tomato, or some other rich source of Vitamin C.

How much milk does each member of your family actually consume each day? The growing child needs from three-fourths quart to a whole quart, the expectant and nursing mother one quart, and each adult one pint or more. If you must hew to a budget, you will be interested to know that one pint of undiluted evaporated milk, or one-fourth pound of dry milk, is approximately the nutritional equivalent of one quart of whole milk.

Each member of the family needs one egg daily and should have at least three or four eggs per week. The eggs used in making custards, sauces and baking may be counted. The daily menus should also provide a serving of lean meat, fish or poultry. It is nutritionally wise to choose different kinds of meat and occasionally to use liver, kidney and such salt water fish as salmon, herring and mackerel. In economizing, use dried beans or peas as the main dish several times a week.

Use Whole Grain

Make sure that the bread and cereal used are of the whole grain variety. The bread should be dark rye, whole wheat, or the new Vitamin B enriched bread, and the cereal should be rolled oats, cracked wheat, whole ground corn meal, or any dry cereal which includes all of the grain. Such foods as spaghetti, macaroni, noodles, grits and white rice are in the class with white bread—they do not count as vegetables.

Butter or an enriched margarine should be used daily.

Sweets should be used in moderation. There should be enough for palatability, but not enough to spoil the appetite for other foods. Very sweet desserts, syrups, honeys, jellies, jams, sugars and candies are all sweets.

It is a good health rule to make a habit of drinking plenty of water, particularly in the summer. When perspiration is excessive, take an abundance of water and use more salt than usual.

If you have infant or growing children in the family, remember that they need fish liver oil, direct sunshine, or some other Vitamin D-rich source daily.

Put these nutrition tips into practice to keep your family fit.

Comfort and Eye-Appeal on the Court

Whether you play a "wicked" game of tennis or just make a pretense, a short dress is practical and attractive. The one above was designed for action by Alice Marble—famous tennis champion and designer of sportswear. With action-sleeve shoulder line and all-around pleated skirt, this short-short tennis dress is given distinction in Celanese canvas knit jersey. The tri-colored mesh belt gives just the slight touch of color that Miss Marble approves of on an all-white dress.

New Types of Curtain Stress Gay Color

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

THE MOST chi-chi dress designers haven't yet thought up a more becoming idea than a white frill at the neck of a simple black dress. The same thing goes for a pretty curtain in a plain room—it will often freshen and flatter more than an expensive new piece of furniture. Here are curtain ideas we've picked up here and there lately:

Flowered chintz on a white ground for side curtains finished all around with a narrow pleated ruching edge of rose chintz. Topped with a cornice of the flowered chintz striped horizontally with four rows of the rose pleated ruching.

Flowered chintz with a pale pink ground for side curtains finished all around with 8-inch knife pleated ruffles. Topped with swag valances and jabots also finished with the knife pleated ruffles and caught at each corner with white plaster rosettes.

Gray and yellow striped side curtains hung over yellow poles with scroll ends—with glass curtains of striped white net.

Gray taffeta curtains with an 18-inch ruffle across the bottom of plaid taffeta in greys and bright pinks. Finished at the top with narrow ruffled valance of this same plaid.

Double sash curtains of yellow chintz with a border design all around of an applique garland cut from a figured chintz.

Yellow chintz side curtains with a narrow pleated ruching edge—swag top with jabots of grey and yellow striped chintz.

Green chintz side curtains with scalloped cornice of strawberry patterned chintz on a white ground—hung over white organdy curtains with deep ruffles and spattered with appliqued motifs of the strawberries.

Rosebud patterned sateen in water repellant finish for bathroom curtains and shower curtain in an all-white bathroom.

Brilliant green taffeta draperies with swags of the same taffeta over eggshell net glass curtains—interesting because two windows on either side of a bed are each hung as one side of a single big window.

Old gold raw silk for slide curtains and covered valances, finished with a thick moss fringe used in a scroll design as if it were a braid.

Cabbage rose chintz side curtains made in three deep ruffled flounces instead of in one sweeping length.

Early Furniture Was Portable Kind

Medieval furniture was essentially Gothic in character—which means that it grew out of Gothic architecture and never lost this structural form. Chairs were not for the common man at this time, having more of a throne-like connotation. The ordinary folk were seated usually on stools or benches. Chests were the most important piece of furniture throughout this time, growing more elaborate as the period progressed. Beds were frames almost entirely enveloped in elaborate draperies and hangings. Tables were still confined mostly to trestle types.

Until the medieval era was well on toward the Renaissance, furniture was regarded as portable possessions and did not acquire permanent forms until man was more settled in his homestead. Oak was the wood used most throughout medieval times with characteristically heavy carving and always retaining its architectural mood.

Woman Asks How to Inform Galahad-Like Brother That Beautiful Girl He Loves Frequently Drinks To Excess and 'Dispenses Smut in Guise of Humor'

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My brother, in his late twenties, is for the first time desperately in love—with a beautiful girl who is 21. I do not know her real feeling toward him, but I do appreciate something of his emotion and know that marriage awaits only her word. He is unusually well established in a lucrative business.

Yesterday, I learned accidentally from an unimpeachable source, that the girl is not the fine character my brother thinks she is. Among other things, she frequently drinks to the point of intoxication; and in mixed company of kindred spirits, dispenses smut in the guise of humor. In other words, she is plain common.

My brother, with whom I maintain the closest ties, has always adhered to the highest ideals of conduct, as taught by our parents, and has lived a clean life. Regardless of the shock it may inflict, I am determined to tell him the truth before it is too late for him to benefit. I wish to do so in a way that will not drive him into her arms. Can you advise me how?—and soon? PERPLEXED.

If You Must Speak, Don't Pull Punches

DEAR PERPLEXED: In undertaking to disillusion your brother about the "character" of the girl he loves, you will be playing the role of busybody—whether you confront him pointblank with your unflattering findings, or whether you present the information by suave indirection. And there is no guarantee that either approach will alter his desire to marry the girl. But if your conscience drives you to put the truth (as you see it) at his disposal, it seems to me the pointblank method is preferable.

You have a choice, on the one hand, of submitting to him a clean-cut indictment of her alleged offensive behavior (as reported to you); and, on the other hand, of trying to knife her in the back with nasty insinuations intended to paint her blacker than she is—and it seems the latter method is the one you have (at least unconsciously) in mind. If, as I have already said, you feel you must speak out on your brother's behalf—a protective attitude that has some sentimental validity—then rely upon the unvarnished truth to help him, if help is transmissible to him at this stage of his emotional thralldom.

You might say to him, for instance: "John, I know you are mad about Nancy. But I wonder if she is the girl for you. I wonder how well you know the real Nancy. Perhaps it's none of my business. In fact, I know you have every right to tell me it's none of my business—but yesterday I learned, from an unimpeachable source, that . . . etc etc." If John has any intestinal investiture, he is going to leap to Nancy's defense, with scorn for you and your gossipy informant. But even so, what you have said will give him food for thought, after he has put you to rout—and may lead him gradually to see her in a different and less desirable light.

Let me remind you, however, before you speak, that there is a possibility your brother already is much better acquainted with the girl's frailties than you suspect—and either tenderly indulgent of them or eager to reform her, by putting his strength and philosophy at her disposal. There is a possibility, indeed, that there are hidden currents of earthy joie-de-vivre coursing through his overtly strait-laced personality, which are more captivated than repelled by her nonchalant disregard for the (shall we say?) Victorian code of ladylike behavior.

Witty Phrases Pep Up Talk

THAT AWFUL moment when you've been introduced and you haven't the vaguest idea how to start the conversation! If only you'd learned some lively friendly phrases!

For, in another moment, that attractive young man will walk away, telling himself "Nothing doing here!" And you could so quickly win him over with a bit of gay banter: "Let's talk about the weather—shall we? That's one way to break the ice!"

It puts you on such easy footing with everyone to know pleasing things to say. Tell your hostess "What a knack you have for making people feel at home," and she'll ask you often. Make callers welcome with a merry "Come right in! I'm so glad to see you."

And no stammering on the telephone when you have a few efficient phrases on tap, such as "Mr. Green left word for me to call."

Or, matching wits with cultured friends, use vivid descriptive phrases: "With clocklike promptness." "As light as summer air." In business, do you know the pleasing yet impersonal phrases that will impress your employer?

Knowing what to say—and when—is such an asset in both your business and social life! Our 40-page booklet, 1,500 USEFUL PHRASES, gives conversational and business phrases for many occasions, lively phrases to make you a delightful talker.

Send 15c in coins for our booklet, 1,500 USEFUL PHRASES, to the NEW YORK OFFICE of The Washington Post, Home Institute, 100 West Nineteenth Street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS and the NAME of booklet.

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

Third-Party Candidate

Mrs. Henrietta DeGoofey, eminent reformer, faces further opposition in her race for reelection as president of the Do Something About It League.

Miss Mopface

The hat of Miss M. Maggie Mopface (M. for Methuselah) has been thrown into the ring by the Association for Advancement, which has headquarters at 11 Maple Avenue, Hyattsville, Md.

Mrs. DeGoofey already is facing the opposition of Mrs. Buffington Blah, straw woman of Mrs. Wimplegate Wadd, who heads the wealthy stuffed-shirt faction of the league.

Heretofore the Association for Advancement has supported Mrs. DeGoofey and aided actively in all her reforms. Its present opposition to her is based solely on its dislike for a third term, according to its secretary pro tem, Miss Susie Que. In a communication to this column the association sets forth Miss Mopface's campaign platform, whose chief points are the aiding of national defense, the making of summer weather more bearable and bus riding less boring.

Feminine Touch In Army Barracks

Miss Mopface would turn over entirely to women the running of Army living quarters, as barracks, dining rooms, etc. She thus outlines her plan:

"Since the barracks are so barren, every day different groups of women and girls would decorate them with flowers and dispense cigarettes, sweetness and light.

"Clubs of women would be organized to issue invitations to and otherwise cheer up lonely selectees—provided the selectees submit photographs, credentials and social qualifications in advance.

"Personnel offices would be set up at the camps for lonely stenographers to serve lovely draftees by answering their mail.

"A special summer uniform would be be provided for the selectees. It would include khaki shorts (for all except bow-legged and knock-kneed service men) and elbow-length sports blouses."

Miss Mopface advocates the following plan to aid Washingtonians in bearing the heat:

"That everyone should carry comfortable straw Pulman-type slippers in handbags, to be put on the swelling feet as heat necessitates."

More Vacations, Better Bus Rides

Miss Mopface further suggests that "people who feel their work is futile, except for pay day, be given vacations with their bimonthly checks, thus eliminating the congestion in overcrowded offices and buses, since just as much work will be done, anyway."

As to buses, she proposes that they have "signs on the back and sides, as well as in front, so that so much energy will not be wasted in pursuing the wrong vehicle." She also would substitute quiz cards for advertising in buses and street cars to "prevent the passengers becoming bored."

Mrs. DeGoofey yesterday met the new challenge to her leadership by adding a plank to her platform providing for the establishment by Congress of a $5,000,000 research fund to encourage the development of the following:

A smart-looking dark cotton dress that doesn't in the slightest resemble a house dress, that doesn't stick to chair or bench and that doesn't have to be pressed every night.

A street outfit for a humid, rainy July or August day that doesn't give the wearer an inferiority complex.

Some shoes that are cool, summery-looking and comfortable and that do not have to be cleaned every night.

Some white gloves that can be worn two days without being washed.

A device other than a girdle for holding up Nylon stockings.

"With these new planks," said Mrs. DeGoofey, "I feel sure of getting the solid backing of the employed women and even of stealing some votes from the Association for Advancement."

Mrs. Blah, when informed of the new candidate, referred all inquiries to Mrs. Wadd, whose butler reported that she had just returned from a benefit committee meeting and was in the hands of her masseur.

Waterless Shampoo Latest Beauty Aid

If you'd like to shampoo your hair more often but don't want to upset your wave, chance a cold, or spare the time from an overly crowded calender, there's a bit of modern magic on the local market which permits you to have clean, shining tresses without water.

A waterless shampoo in the form of a fragrant, colorless lotion leaves the hair thoroughly clean and completely dry in a few minutes. Besides cleaning with little effort, the new shampoo contains a gentle lubricant property that nourishes hair follicles and soothes irritated scalps.

To use it, you simply pour a bit of waterless shampoo on the hair and rub into the scalp until a creamy lather is formed. Without adding any water for rinsing, remove the lather with a dry towel. Because no water is required, your hair dries in a few minutes.

Distinguished Guests Attend Garden Parties Given in Connection With U. S. Law Institute

By Hope Ridings Miller

LEGAL LIGHTS—national and local—illuminated the Capital scene yesterday afternoon when two garden parties of sizable proportions took over the social calendar. Both were arranged in connection with the current American Law Institute, and both were accented with distinguished guest lists.

Mr. and Mrs. William P. MacCracken entertained in honor of the President of the American Bar Association and Mrs. Jacob M. Lashly, gathering in a company of several hundred between 5 and 7 o'clock. Mr. and Mrs. Seth Richardson were hosts at their home on Chain Bridge Road where, as one guest expressed it, "You can see 18 miles into Virginia just by standing on the terrace."

The MacCracken fete, an annual affair, drew notables in droves. Two tables, lavishly laden with tea-time dainties, were set up in the garden, where guests gathered, and lingered, in the cool shade of locust trees. The hosts and their guests of honor received inside in the drawing room. Mrs. MacCracken was smartly turned out in a two-tone frock, featuring a navy blue jacket, a white plaited skirt and matching turned-back collar. Mrs. Lashly had chosen a print chiffon in blue and white and a wide-brimmed hat of blue, faced with a lighter shade and trimmed with flowers.

With a seemingly endless line stepping up to be received, greetings were hardly exchanged before guests made their way on to the garden. There, lawyers from all over the country chatted with diplomats, Senators and other official Washingtonians . . . and stayed on long past 7 o'clock.

ASSISTING the hostess were Mrs. William O. Douglas, Mrs. George Maurice Morris, whose beige frock, worn with red accessories, was one of the smartest outfits there; Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg, making herself useful as well as ornamental; Mrs. Eugene Carusi, Mrs. Courtlandt Parker, all in black and looking enough like Motion Picture Actress Helen Gahagan to pass as her sister; Mrs. Patrick J. Hurley, Mrs. Jouett Shouse and Mrs. Irene Caldwell.

Seen in passing: Mrs. Robert H. Jackson, surrounded from the moment she arrived . . . Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, chatting with Senator and Mrs. C. Wayland Brooks . . . Mrs. Eldridge Jordan, Mrs. Noyes Lewis and Mrs. George T. Pettengill, holding a court of their own at a small table . . . Maj. Gen. Allen W. Gullion, and the Minister of Finland, Hjalmar Procope, especially popular guests . . . Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis, wearing the Colonial Dames decorations and coming on from the tea Mrs. J. L. Houghteling gave for the Illinois Colonial Dames . . . Attractive Mrs. Foster Penick of New Orleans being introduced around by Clarence Hewes . . . Mr. and Mrs. Prentiss L. Coonley, Mrs. Carlton Holdrege, J. L. Houghteling, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Dewey and Mrs. Waggaman Pulver . . . Mr. and Mrs. "Chip" Robert — the latter in riding clothes . . . Senator and Mrs. Robert Taft, making the rounds . . . Brig. Gen. Albert Cox, telling friends that Mrs. Cox is recuperating and will be off for Florida tomorrow.

LEWIS MacCRACKEN, son of the hosts, was here, there and everywhere, seeing that everybody met his pretty cousin, Miss Marjorie Lewis, of Waco, Tex., Holton Arms student. Mrs. Simeon T. Lewis, mother of the hostess, and Miss Anne Squire seemed to know everybody present. Mr. and Mrs. Charles Drayton were there; also, Miss Pauletta Guffey, Senator and Mrs. Warren Austin and their son, Lieut. Edward Austin; Mrs. D. Worth Clark, Pendleton Hogan, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Grant Meem, Representative and Mrs. Luther Johnson and Representative Hatton Sumner.

Among others enjoying the pleasant party—to mention but a few—were Mr. and Mrs. Wade Ellis, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Legare, Senator Theodore F. Green, Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Hatch, Judge and Mrs. Herbert Goodrich, of Philadelphia; Richard Sanger, Mrs. Crosby Miller, Mrs. Sims Snow, James F. Mitchell, jr., Mrs. William T. Mann, Mrs. Marshall Langhorne, former Senator and Mrs. Edward Burke, the Minister of Guatemala and Senora de Recinos, Col. and Mrs. M. Robert Guggenheim, scores of out-of-towners and many, many more.

Heard here and there: That Senator Bennett Clark did a good day's work in answering Senator Claude Pepper yesterday . . . That Senator Pepper made a better speech that Senator Clark, and vice versa, once more . . . That the Capital social calendar is closing down . . . That the social calendar has never been so full before . . . That this country is in the war . . . That it's not; and will stay out, in spite of everything . . . That the District should have suffrage . . . And that it shouldn't—for a lot of reasons you never see in print. All and all, everybody seemed to be indulging himself in a frank expression of opinion, with nobody agreeing entirely with anybody else; but with everybody having a good time. That's Washington for you.

THE RICHARDSON party, meanwhile, was merrily under way, having started at 4 p. m. Planned primarily as a party for lawyers and their wives, it drew a number of celebrities whose name and fame hit the headlines back in the Republican era. Liberally sprinkled through the company, also, were a number of Democrats and New Dealers. ("Yes, they are different—entirely different," said somebody in the company.)

In keeping with the informal tone of the fete, the hostess eschewed the temptation to don a flowing garden frock and appeared in a floor-length dress of paisley print. I say "temptation" with reason, for that's exactly what it would be for me if my house had a stone terrace, a garden a-bloom, and a glorious tree-top view such as guests enjoyed at the Richardson home. In other words, if there's any place in Washington where a trailing garden gown, complete with picture hat and parasol, would fit into the setting—it's there.

Tea was served in the dining room, where the table was decorated with gardenias, and the pastel pink of clarkia. Guests for the most part, however, did not linger long inside, but obeyed that urge to wander gardenwise, or to collect in chatty groups on the stone terrace.

Among those assisting the hostess were Mrs. Owen J. Roberts, Mrs. Stanley Reed, Mrs. Robert P. Lammont, Mrs. Harry W. Blair, Mrs. Oscar Bland, Mrs. Charles March, Mrs. J. Spaulding Flannery, Mrs. Benjamin Weems, Mrs. Henry Richardson, Mrs. Oscar Bland, Mrs. Bruce Smith, Mrs. Paul Shorb, Mrs. Carr Loftin, Mrs. George Thorpe, Mrs. Charles J. Brand, Mrs. Merle Thorpe, Mrs. William D. Mitchell, of New York, and Mrs. Verne Bickelhaupt and Miss Gretchen Bickelhaupt, of Richmond, Va. There were about 100 guests, including many from out of town.

About the Town

—with Dudley Harmon

THEY'RE DOING a new paint job on the outside of the famous Larz Anderson mansion on Massachusetts Avenue. They're furbishing up the garden where the pink azaleas and wistaria are at their best. They're stocking up on china and cleaning and dusting—all in preparation for the visit next week of the Argentine Foreign Minister and Senora de Ruiz Guinazu.

DUDLEY HARMON

When the State Department decided to house the distinguished couple and their five children at Anderson House, it may have started a new custom for official foreign visitors. One of the most beautiful mansions of the Capital, the residence, now owned by the Society of the Cincinnati, is ideal for entertaining purposes. When the King and Queen of Siam were put up there during the Hoover Administration, a State Department official called it the only private home in Washington really equipped to take care of royalty.

FOUR SERVANTS, headed by a French chef, have been hired to make the Guinazus comfortable. As the couple are to be feted at so many dinners and luncheons, probably the only meal they'll take at home will be breakfast. But the staff is all ready with seven breakfast sets, purchased from open stock at a local department store. (Note to taxpayers: The woman assigned to do the shopping carefully called up several places, compared prices, and got some real bargains!).

The Government also bought a set of silver and an assortment of fine linen sheets and pillowcases for the visitors. Everything has been thought of, even bathmats. When Mrs. Anderson departed, she left all her handsome furniture behind, so that presents no problem. Senor and Senora de Ruiz Guinazu will share the biggest bedroom, 26 feet by 26, done in pink and blue and with a cavernous fireplace.

Each of the four daughters and a son accompanying them has been assigned a bedroom.

The visitors will arrive May 13 and the servants have been ordered for May 12, to see that everything is in readiness. Percy Blair, custodian of Anderson House, will move out to make way for the family. Besides their children, the Guinazus will have with them several secretaries and possibly a maid or two. Provisions also have been made in case the couple want to do some entertaining there. But we predict their crowded schedule won't leave them time.

WHILE THE Foreign Minister is being feted at several stag luncheons—one to be given by the President—his wife will be taken under the wing of several Washington hostesses. Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins has planned a luncheon for her on Thursday, May 15. The party will take place at the 1925 F Street Club. Mrs. Robbins is an Argentine by birth and says she'll probably discover she used to dance with the present Foreign Minister in her debutante days in Buenos Aires.

On Friday, May 16, while Senor Guinazu lunches at the White House, Mrs. Adolf Berle will entertain for his wife. Mrs. Berle is busy rounding up a group of women for the party, which will take place at her home on Nebraska Avenue.

MORE SOUTH AMERICAN notes: At the tea given by Mrs. Berle the other day for the prize-winning novelists, Enrique Gil Gilbert, of Ecuador, was answering questions about his novel. It's called "Nuestro Pan," ("Our Daily Bread"). "In Ecuador," he said, "our daily bread is rice. We have it for breakfast, lunch and dinner." The Brazilian prize winner, Cecilio J. Carneiro, is also a distinguished surgeon.

Senora de Michels, friendly wife of the Chilean Ambassador, was describing the ordeal of learning English. (She now speaks it well and does all her own social secretarial work, in spite of having been here only a few months.) When she first studied English back in Chile three years ago, her teacher gave her a textbook full of such phrases as "where is the pencil?" and "the cat of my aunt is in the garden." Senora de Michels decided she might just as well make her studies more interesting, so asked the teacher to buy her a real thriller. The latter appeared with a hair-raising novel called "Virginia's Husband," which Senora de Michels translated word for word.

Mrs. Wickard Is Guest of Honor At Luncheon

Mrs. Claude Wickard, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture, was honor guest at a luncheon given yesterday at the Shoreham by Mrs. Mark Thistlethwaite.

Others in the company of 28 were Mrs. Joseph Ball, Mrs. Paul V. McNutt, Mrs. Forest Harness, Mrs. Louis Ludlow, Mrs. John Boehne, Mrs. Wayne Coy, Mrs. Edwin A. Halsey and Mrs. Sherman Minton.

Mitchells Here

Brig. Gen. and Mrs. James Brady Mitchell have arrived in Washington from their winter home at Hobe Sound, Fla., and have taken an apartment at the Mayflower for a month. Early in June they will go to New York for a short time and then to North Hatley, Quebec, where they have a summer home.

Miss Thompson Is Engaged To New Yorker

Mr. and Mrs. C. Stanley Thompson, of New York and Washington, announce the engagement of their daughter, Marya (Molly) Bayard Thompson, to Frederic P. Houston, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Houston, of White Plains, N. Y.

The bride-elect was graduated from the National Cathedral School and is now studying at the Katharine Gibbs School in New York.

Mr. Houston attended Phillips Exeter Academy and was graduated from Williams College. Later, he received his degree from the Harvard Law School, in the class of 1934. He is a member of the New York Bar Association and is practicing law in New York.

Watsons Give Supper Party

With Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth N. Watson as hosts, a gayly informal supper party accented last evening's social calendar. The event, one in a series of buffet fetes that Mr. and Mrs. Watson are giving this season, took place at their home, 2220 Massachusetts Avenue.

The Egyptian Minister and Mme. Hassan were ranking guests in a company that also included Angus Malcom and Mr. and Mrs. Julian Chetwynd, of the British Embassy; the Brazilian Second Secretary and Mme. Gouthier, the Marques de Zahara, of the Spanish Embassy, and Prince Pignatelli.

Still others there were Baron and Baroness Stackelberg, Mrs. Celeste Crosby Miller, Winant Johnston, Maj. Gen. Allen Gullion, Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis, Mrs. Eldridge Jordan, Mrs. Eppes Hawes Moore, Col. and Mrs. M. Robert Guggenheim, Miss Azadia Newman, Arthur Vandenberg, jr., Mrs. Thomas Richard Cowell, James Parkes and several more.

Clagetts Hold Dinner Party For Ensign Biddle

Several dinner parties highlighted the calendar last night. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Clagett entertained at a farewell fete in honor of Sam Biddle. The party was given in the Georgetown home of the former Miss Nancy Leiter and her husband, Mr. Biddle, who is an ensign in the Naval Reserve, has been called to active duty and will leave shortly.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Carroll Glover, jr., entertained at a large dinner party last night at their home, Westover, on Nebraska Avenue.

This is no time for women's organizations to wind up their season's activities, Mrs. Saidie Orr Dunbar, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, told members of the Virginia Federation last night at the opening of their annual convention at the Wardman Park Hotel. Clubs should keep active committees functioning all summer and find uses for their clubhouses, she declared.

Mrs. Dunbar, who has recently returned from an extended tour of the West and Middle West, told the women it would be "a clear picture of selfishness for women's clubs not to use their leadership and resources for service in their communities." She suggested that their programs could include care for the needs of underprivileged children, opening of their clubhouses and grounds to young people in defense work or to the soldiers from nearby camps.

She urged the clubs to do their part in keeping the home and community life at a high level. While the Government is bending every effort toward defense—a program in which the women have not yet been given a definite assignment, it is up to the women to hold fast and safeguard community life—the family the children and the institutions which are important to this country's way of life, she asserted.

She advised the club women to build up as normal a program of activity for the coming season as for any other year but to have it so flexible it could be changed overnight to meet immediately any emergency situation. She emphasized the necessity for women's organizations throughout the country to recognize their responsibility for service in their own communities and urged that they be prepared to give it.

Miss V. Lucille Bland, president of the Virginia Federation, presided at the meeting which opened with a processional of officers department and committee chairmen. More than 1,000 women attended. The auditorium was decorated with a profusion of flowers brought by the women from their Virginia gardens. Mrs. Dunbar was introduced by Mrs. J. L. Blair Buck, treasurer of the General Federation and a member of the Virginia group.

Music was provided by the chorus of the Alexandria Woman's Club under the direction of Mrs. Henry A. Schauffler. There was also a minuet presented by Mrs. Everett A. Hellmuth, Mrs. J. Herbert Knight, Mrs. J. Burchell Leschman and Mrs. George Trayer.

The invocation was to be by the Rev. William E. Basom, pastor of Beverly Hills Church, Alexandria. The Salute to the Flag was led by Mrs. Burton Wadsworth and there were brief welcomes by Mrs. Ernest Humphrey Daniel, president of the District Federation of Women's Clubs, and Mrs. William G. Watt, president of the Fourth District of Virginia. Mrs. B. J. Houge gave the response.

This morning at 7:30 there will be an address by Joseph Harrison, staff correspondent of the Christian Science Monitor at the American citizenship breakfast under the chairmanship of Mrs J. B. Lowell. Also there will be an address on "The American Home," by Dr. Charles Warner, rector of St. Albans, at the American home breakfast with Mrs. Francis Aylor presiding. A program by District presidents will be presented at the Public Welfare breakfast under the chairmanship of Mrs. Fred M. Alexander.

Speakers at the morning session will be Mrs. T. V. Moore, chairman of public safety for the G. F. W. C.; Representative Patrick H. Drewry, of the Naval Affairs Committee, and William N. Nelson, of the Office of Emergency Management.

In the afternoon Dr. Jessie La Salle, assistant superintendent of schools for the District, will talk on "The Public School and National Defense" and Loda Mae Davis, of the consumer division of the Defense Council, on "The Home Maker and Defense." The chief speaker tonight will be Vera Micheles Dean, director of the research department of the Foreign Policy Association.

Dr. Whipple Discusses School Training Household Employes

The Institute of Household Occupation in Philadelphia, one of the foremost institutions in the country for training household employes, was discussed by Dr. Dorothy Whipple, of the Woman's Bureau of the Department of Labor, before the League of Women Shoppers yesterday. She spoke at the second in the series of meetings arranged by the committee on household employment of the league, which are held weekly at the home of Mrs. Gardner Jackson. Also on the program was Mrs. Christopher Granger, of the league, who amplified "The Philadelphia Story."

Dr. Whipple explained that the institute was sponsored by the Y. W. C. A., the Vocational School and interested individuals in Philadelphia. It ran for two and a half years under private direction and then was taken over by the Vocational School in a new setup. The institute began in a large old house, broken up into small apartments where people lived and created an atmosphere of home for trainees seeking education in household employment, she said. It established these standards for its workers:

The worker going home at night was to have a 48-hour week and 8 consecutive hours a day, unless she were close enough to her home to take time off in the middle of the day. She was to have two meals on her own time, was to be furnished uniforms by employer and was to receive a minimum wage of 25 cents an hour, carfare included unless she were outside of the one-token zone. The trainee was to start at $10 a week, said Dr. Whipple.

For the worker who "lived in" there was to be a 54-hour week because she lost no time going back and forth; a room to herself and daily bathing facilities with a schedule to be arranged to meet the social demands of the worker's world. Tentatively, she was to have Sundays and evenings off to be arranged by herself and the employer and two hours time "on call" to answer telephone or be with the children. A minimum wage would be $8 until she had proved she could do the job, when she would be raised to $10 with an overtime of 25 cents, meals eaten on her own time and laundry and cleaning on her own time.

U. S. Moves to Reform Or Ban Prostitutes

Uncle Sam has on his pay roll about every different kind of worker imaginable, but two new types were added yesterday. They will be called "social protection representatives" and "legal protection representatives." The social protection representatives, it seems, will have the very tough chore of convincing prostitutes they should mend their ways and quit hanging around Army camps to lure the soldier boys. In other words, the social representatives will try to make good girls out of bad girls by getting them interested in other lines of work. The representatives will work under the defense offices of health, welfare and related activities in the Federal Security Agency.

Federal Security Administrator Paul McNutt is understood to have tried to borrow Capt. Rhoda Milliken from the District Police Department to set up the organization of social representatives. The Civil Service Commission plans to certify welfare workers for the jobs.

Prostitutes who can't be convinced by the kindly social representatives that other professions are more attractive will run smack into the hard-boiled legal representatives. It'll be the job of the legal representatives to make life miserable for the prostitutes. The representatives will work with local communities to get legislation passed that will drive the prostitutes out of business. Federal Security has named its new antiprostitute division the Legal and Health Protection Unit.

Several hundred additional phone operators have been hired by Federal agencies since the defense emergency arose. The Civil Service Commission has a register of phone operators, but the demand for phone operators has been so pressing that the commission has been permitting defense agencies to hire operators without status.

Mrs. Florence Bankhead, widow of former Speaker Bankhead, who was appointed curator of Arlington Mansion several months ago, has spent very little time on the job since her appointment . . . George G. Wilson, professor of international law at Harvard Law College, has been appointed special counsel at the Maritime Commission. He was a member of the commission that arranged for redelivery of Dutch merchant vessels to their owners after the World War I.

Merit Board Eases Rules

Civil Service Commission has let down the bars on promotions and transfers. It has granted authority to agencies to promote and transfer most low-grade civil service employes without prior approval of the commission. The decision will speed up action on promotion and transfer cases. Departmental actions will be subject only to a commission postaudit. An employe in a defense agency is eligible for promotion, transfer or change in status after only 30 days of service. In nondefense agencies the time is from six months to a year.

Employes who are affected by the order are stenographers and typists, messengers, clerks and machine operators, among others. It's true that the new order will speed up promotions, but few if any agencies can give employes in-grade promotions, even if they have the money. Under the rigid promotion formula laid down by Congress thousands of eligibles in all departments are being denied administrative increases. The formula was supposed to save money, but many defense agencies are getting around the ban by giving their employes grade promotions, which, of course, costs much more money.

Public Buildings Administration has air-conditioned offices for CCC officials in the old building at Eighteenth and H Streets. CCC demanded it when the agency was ordered to move from its comfortable offices in the Postoffice Building . . . U. F. W. A. is starting an organizing drive among Federal workers here. The drive is being conducted by Richard Feise, Arthur Stein, Oscar Witmer, Sidney Kaiz, Joyce Campbell, Helen Miller and Myra Callus . . . WPA announces that it has built 2,120,000 sanitary privies since its inception . . . There are 414 eligibles on the new junior geologist register . . . St. Elizabeths Hospital is losing many of its nurses and attendants and the Civil Service Commission is having a hard time recruiting replacements.

"Bottled in Bond"

Two men yesterday called on Montgomery County police to charge two companions with stealing a quart of whisky. Police investigated and discovered a case of liquor in their auto. Whereupon, the accusers were charged with violating a county law limiting transportation of liquor into the county as one quart per individual. Bond was set at $250.

Faithful Unto Death

The dog of Nathan F. Jackson, of Boyds, Md., companion of 14 years, joined his master in death yesterday.

Jackson was found dead in the yard of his home. The dog stood guard over the body and had to be overpowered so that it could be removed. Chained, the dog went mad. Police had to shoot him.

Concert Series At Watergate Is Assured

Another season of Watergate concerts this summer by the National Symphony Orchestra was assured yesterday.

The executive board of the Musicians' Protective Union voted to approve the same weekly pay scale which members of the orchestra received last season. Similar action was taken Monday by the musicians themselves.

Last year the "sunset symphonies" at the Lincoln Memorial Watergate covered an eight-week season. Irving C. Root, superintendent of National Capital Parks, recently announced that five weeks was the most that would be granted this summer.

Accordingly, the issue was whether members of the orchestra would be willing to play a five-week season at the same rates of pay and, if so, whether the union would concur. A demurrer would have wrecked plans for 1941 by making the "sunset symphony" deficit prohibitive.

As it is, the National Symphony Orchestra Association will go about $6,000 into the red in putting on the concerts, said an announcement yesterday.

L. Corrin Strong, president, praised cooperation of the union and orchestra members in agreeing to accept the five-week season at no increase in pay.

For the first time, the concerts will be given Monday and Thursday evenings, beginning June 30. In former years they were held Sunday and Wednesday.

"The musicians' union appreciates the financial problem of the orchestra association and has generously agreed to let its members play at the same base pay that they received last year," Strong said.

"Consequently, the summer concerts committee, under the chairmanship of Harold A. Brooks, is going ahead with its plans for a five weeks' series of sunset symphonies at the Potomac Water Gate."

Production Held 'Terribly' Inadequate

"In the light of the emergency with which the world is desperately confronted we are doing a terribly inadequate job," William L. Batt, $1 a year production official with the Office of Production Management, told the American Society of Mechanical Engineers last night.

Speaking at the society's annual banquet, in the Lafayette Hotel, Batt declared that Germany and England—"and they are short on everything"—are producing more aircraft today than we are.

"We should," he stated, "be producing twice the 1,400 airplanes that were produced in April."

"The test is coming of whether a democracy can face the production of a totalitarian state and survive. I think it can. I only pray we have time enough to get this program under way and give England the support that will make America safe."

Officers elected to govern the local chapter for the year 1941-42 were announced last night as Willis B. Ensinger, chairman; J. W. Huckert, vice chairman, and Dr. M. A. Mason, secretary-treasurer. Executive committee members elected for the same term are Carl E. Miller, John E. Younger, Thomas R. Tate and G. W. Haskins.

It was also announced that 1-year junior membership awards had been given three engineering students from Washington area colleges. The three students are Leland Stanford Brown, jr., Catholic University; Lawrence L. Wilson, Maryland University, and Guy B. Watson, of George Washington University.

Barber Shop Fire Snarls Downtown Traffic

Rush-hour traffic was snarled for more than 30 minutes yesterday in the vicinity of Fourteenth and I Streets Northwest, while firemen battled a stubborn blaze in a barber shop at 829 Fourteenth Street Northwest.

Smoke was so thick in the interior of the shop that firefighters were forced to wear gas masks.

D. C. Water Not All Safe, Citizens Told

Supply Could Be Contaminated, Says Letter From Sanitary Engineer

Washington's water supply could become contaminated by underground currents of other water and the United States Public Health Service has withheld "unqualified approval" of it, the Columbia Heights Citizens Association learned last night.

This was disclosed in a letter to the association's secretary, Walter I. Swanton, from District Sanitary Engineer J. 3. Gordon.

In reply to a query by Swanton, Gordon stated that "under some extreme and unlikely conditions" cross-connections between the city's water supply and local nonpotable water supplies "might become potentially dangerous."

He said the Public Health Service had barred Washington water from interstate commerce in ships, trains and other conveyances for drinking and cooking.

Legislation, he said, is being drawn up authorizing a survey to determine the source of the nonpotable water. The association, meeting at the Mount Pleasant Congregational Church, voted indorsement of the legislation.

The association elected George H. Brown as president to succeed Col. Luther R. Maddox, who has been called to Army duty. Swanton was reelected secretary.

Other officers named were Dr. A. V. Smith, first vice president; Mrs. Ernest W. Howard, second vice president; E. B. Hoffman, third vice president; Col. G. B. Young, treasurer, and Brown and Mrs Howard, delegates to the Federation of Citizens Associations.

North Cleveland Park

The North Cleveland Park Citizens Association last night came out in strong opposition against the proposed plan now in Congress to close Van Ness Street Northwest, where it separates two Bureau of Standards units.

John B. Dickman, jr., president of the association, declared the closing would lessen property values, reduce fire and police protection and cause a "bottleneck" to traffic.

"We were assured when we bought property here," he said, "that Van Ness Street would never be closed." Residents of more than 500 homes would be affected, according to Dickman. The organization voted to protest to chairmen of the House and Senate District Committees and ask a public hearing, he said.

The group also voted to ask 300 additional policemen for the District and restoration of the "vacant house car" to the Eighth Precinct as well as one additional scout car and two more motorcycle police.

Indorsement of a plan now being advocated by many civic bodies to establish a Federally operated employment placement service for the dependents of men who have been drafted or who have volunteered for Army service also was voted. The move, Dickman declared, would help compensate for the "drastic decrease in income."

WPA Opens Cultural, Technical Exhibit

The exhibit portrays the contributions which unemployed artists, writers, musicians, craftsmen and scientific and technical workers in many fields have made to the WPA.

Booksellers' 'Responsibility'

5 Writers Draw Lessons From Past to Proclaim 'Ideas Are Weapons of Offense and Defense'

NOTABLES ON BOOK AND AUTHOR NIGHT PROGRAM—At left—Carl Sandburg (seated), the poet and biographer of Lincoln, compares notes with Archibald MacLeish, the poet and Librarian of Congress. Right—Mrs. Eugene Meyer, chairman of the sponsoring committee, talks over the program with Marquis James, authority on the life of Jackson

From the past tribulations of free peoples five distinguished writers, including four Pulitzer Prize winners, last night brought messages of faith and courage to followers of the democratic way of life today.

They addressed more than 1,000 persons in the grand ballroom of the Willard Hotel in a Book and Author Night program sponsored by The Washington Post and the American Booksellers Association which is holding its convention here this week.

Carl Sandburg, poet and biographer of Lincoln; Douglas S. Freeman, biographer of Lee; Marquis James, authority on the life of Jackson and Houston, and Isabel de Palencia, Spanish author of "I Must Have Liberty," were introduced by Archibald MacLeish, the poet and Librarian of Congress.

Program's Purpose Stressed

Mrs. Roosevelt was honorary sponsor of the evening. Mrs. Eugene Meyer, wife of the editor and publisher of The Post, was chairman of the sponsoring committee and introduced MacLeish.

The purpose of the program was underlined by Mrs. Meyer when she said it represented "a part of the cultural effort The Washington Post is trying to make on behalf of the city and the Nation. Ideas today are news; they are also weapons of offense and defense."

She declared that the scope of any newspaper's influence must be broadened in times such as these to include the ideas which form the background of the news.

MacLeish challenged the booksellers, who formed a part of the audience, to the "great responsibility" of promoting books which teach the public the importance of maintaining the life of freedom existing under democracies.

"There is not time now in this generation in which we live for people to be educated up through the schools," he said. "Either this democracy must be accepted as it now stands or we fail."

Before introducing Isabel de Palencia he read a previously unpublished poem by himself which answered those who have spilled the blood of the defenseless of Europe with the simple, quietly spoken words, "This will be answered . . ."

In a voice intense with her conviction of restoring and preserving freedom in the world, Isabel de Palencia described the stark realities of the antifascist war in Spain: a child's hand blown off, still clutching a book; illiterate loyalist soldiers risking their lives to save priceless books.

"All of us who do not take the trouble to find the truth (about democracy) are operating along Fascist lines," she declared.

"Civilization is culture—not only material culture, but spiritual culture.

"Fear has laid its hand upon the world. We must make sure that we will help the democracies, and that we will have truth and with truth tolerance."

Stating that ignorance of the meaning of democracy is rife, she said, "It would be a good idea for us to learn what democracy truly is. It would also be a good idea for us to recognize what is not democracy."

Douglas S. Freeman discussed "Lee as a Counselor in National Defense." Citing the Gallup Poll, finding that the Southeastern States are strongest in urging aid to Britain, he said the influence of Gen. Lee still existent in the South is one of the chief reasons for the sentiment.

Lee's counsels to his people in the Civil War might well be followed today, he suggested.

Decisions Unavoidable

"Lee felt that every citizen must make his decision and follow it coldly and calmly," he said.

These counsels of Lee should be employed today, he asserted:

That war should be postponed while preparations are made.

That "out of work alone can victory be assured."

That American youth has endurance and should undergo compulsory military training in time of crisis.

That from his experience in military service man earns "a priceless heritage."

"War, Lee would repeat today," declared Freeman, "is to be shunned by those who prefer their small comforts to their liberties. Out of the discipline and sacrifices of those resolute souls who endure to the end there will come the resolution and the faith to make, please God, a new world."

"In A National Fog"

Speaking on "Lincoln in a National Fog," Carl Sandburg declared that "'America now is in a national fog."

He quoted a casual remark of Lincoln in the Civil War, "It's very difficult to say a sensible thing nowadays," and applied it to the present time.

Sandburg inferred his view of the present through the mirror of Lincoln in a past time of trouble. He warned against prophecies and wrangling.

"One of the most difficult things to bear today are the commentators who make prophecies and forecasts, people who know who's going to win the war and how," he said.

If Jackson Were President . . .

Marquis James said forthrightly, "If Andrew Jackson were in the White House today, I think he'd lick the living tar out of Hitler. Who could doubt what his foreign policy would be?"

Affirming that "will is needed," he pointed out, "We have the resources in men and materials, and we have the skill that's necessary to fabricate the materials into defending our way of life."

Pointing to Jackson's triumph of his "spirit over his flesh," he told of the courage of the soldier-President in an early duel and at the Battle of New Orleans.

"Our will can defeat Hitler now," he declared.

Members of the sponsoring committee for last night's program included Mrs. Thurman Arnold, Mrs. Truxtun Beale, Mrs. Francis Biddle, Mrs. Robert Wooods Bliss, Mrs. Felix Frankfurter, Mrs. Carter Glass, Mrs. George A. Garrett, Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, Mrs. Patrick Hurley, Mrs. Robert H. Jackson, Mrs. Francis P. Keyes, Mrs. Emory Land, Mrs. Walter Lippmann, Mrs. Alice L. R. 3 Agencies Move to New D. C. Center

War Department To Occupy Half Of Offices; 2 City Units to Shift Later

Three of the first five District agencies to take over new quarters in the 5,000,000 Municipal Center Building began moving equipment yesterday. The Commissioners will sign a formal occupancy agreement today with the War Department.

Approximately 1,400 employes of the Quartermaster Corps will occupy half of the building. Part of their equipment also was moved into the new Indiana Avenue structure yesterday.

On Pro Rata Basis

Under the War Department agreement, submitted to the Commissioners by John M. Carmody, Federal Works Administrator, the Federal Government will pay the District on a pro rata basis for such cost of operation and maintenance as its portion of the building requires.

The War Department also agreed to reimburse the city for other actual expenses incident to use of the building "which the District would not otherwise incur."

Operating and maintenance costs of the Municipal Center Building were estimated at about $180,000 a year. The War Department will pay roughly about $40,000.

It also was agreed that the Federal Government would provide its own telephone connections and bear the total cost of installation.

Carmody Explains

Carmody, in his communication to the Commissioners, said the War Department would remain in the building until contemplated temporary quarters are finished—"in any event no later than November 1."

Most of the equipment moved in yesterday consisted of file cases, records and various types of documents which must be handy and ready for use when the personnel arrives.

Workers from both the city government and War Department are not expected to take over until May 19 after telephone facilities have been installed.

In addition to the War Department, movers yesterday were the Traffic Department, Fire Department headquarters offices and the City Refuse Division. Within the next two or three days, it was announced, the Police Department and Health Department laboratories will begin to move.

Former Grid Star Becomes District Attorney's Aide

Charles B. Coffin, chief deputy clerk of the District Court, administered the oath in the office of District Attorney Edward M. Curran, who assigned Miller to criminal prosecutions in the Police Court.

Miller starred for Notre Dame for three years and was a coach there one more year, receiving his arts degree in 1936 and his law degree in 1938. He has been an attorney for the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation for two years.

The new prosecutor lives at 1013 Urell Place Northeast.

Sorority Girl's Initiation Steals Show at Theater

An intermission crowd standing outside the National Theater, where the "Student Prince" operetta was being presented, was several minutes late getting back to its seats last night.

April Visitors Record At Lincoln Memorial

April was a record-smashing visitor month for the Lincoln Memorial, the office of National Capital Parks disclosed yesterday.

During the 30-day period the marble monument and its statue were viewed by 362,995 persons—more than twice as many as visited all the other four major memorials and historic sites under N. C. P. supervision.

District Legion Approves Final Plans to Buy Former Brazilian Embassy for Headquarters

Purchase Price Of Mansion Fixed at $60,000

The executive committee of the District Department, American Legion, at a special session last night, approved final plans for the purchase of the former Brazilian Embassy, at 2437 Fifteenth Street Northwest, for conversion to headquarters and clubrooms.

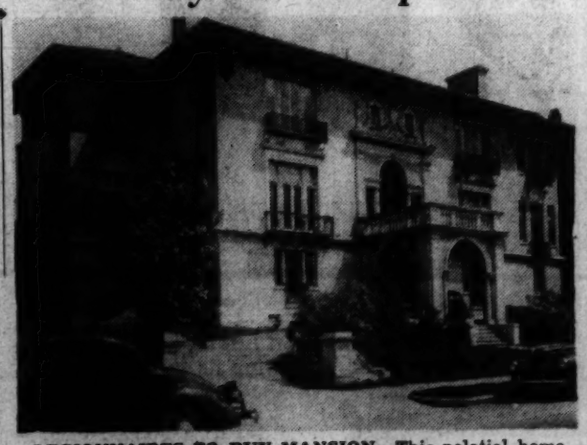
The purchase price, the committee announced, is $60,000.

Fronting the park on Meridian Hill, the mansion is one of three built on that side of the park early in the century by Mrs. John B. Henderson, late society leader, to be used as chancelleries. The residence now houses the Bloomfield School.

Of the other two mansions, one at 2401 Fifteenth Street, served as the Egyptian, Nicaraguan, and Persian Legations and is now a rooming house; the other, at 2535, is still the Netherlands Legation.

All three buildings were designed by George Oakley Totten, Mrs. Henderson's architect, who drew plans for many palatial residences along and bordering Sixteenth Street Northwest.

Department Commander William Hargraves announced that the clubrooms of the new headquarters would be available to selectees as well as members of the department's 39 posts, the auxiliary, 40 and 8, 8 and 40, National Guard of Honor, and Sons of the Legion. Present department headquarters are in the Denrike Building, 1010 Vermont Avenue Northwest.



LEGIONNAIRES TO BUY MANSION—This palatial home, 2437 Fifteenth Street Northwest, former Brazilian Embassy, is to be purchased by the District Department of the American Legion for its headquarters

DIVERSION FOR DRAFTEES. Entertainers you've seen in Washington night spots are making a splendid success of the "National Review" being presented once a week at Fort Meade. There's no money in it, just the satisfaction of adding brightness andd fun to the camp life of Uncle Sam's new soldiers. Among the 17 acts in this week's "National Review" are Gene Archer and Johnny Hartsfield who were at the Neptune Room last winter, Earline King who recently sang at the Anchor Room, Virginia Barry whom we last saw dancing at the Casino Royal. The emcees are Arnie Simon (also an former Casnio Royalist) and Rudy Simpson.

The Chordsmen, star Manhatian musical crew, will open in Mayfair next Monday. They have played in several stage successes as well as innumerable top night spots. Every Chordsman is both a vocalist and musician. Leader Harry Mitchell tenors and plays the vibraphone. Other Chordsmen include Roy Harmon who plays and sings bass; Jimmy Doyle, tenor and violinist, and Charles Peck, tenor and guitarist.

DAISY (DAZEY), TELL ME. Etc. Hero of the next edition of Peter Borras' Gourmet will be that big little fellow, Dazey, who's been checking hats at the Madrillon since 1933. Swiping from the deathless prose of Senor Borras' advance proof, we may say, "Stanley (Daisy) Dazey, the little man who's always there, the daisy who can and will tell. He buys all editions, is first with news of deaths, births, marriages and headline catastrophes. Daisy has no jaundiced eye, no cynicism, no malice, though he's seen all the passing show." The Gorumet piece about Daisy will be illustrated with a cartoon by Artist Lee Miller. We hope it shows Daisy at that big moment when Singer Virginia Sothern placed the scarlet imprint of a kiss on his shining dome.

"SUIVEZ-MOI," which means, "Follow me," is the name of a new summer drink invented for the Pall Mall Room customers by Raleigh's maitre d'hotel, Arthur Marchisio, in a moment of high inspiration. It's tall and jade green, trimmed with sprays of mint.

THE PERFECT DANCING PARTNER. "Gabby," the life-sized rubber Charlie McCarthy who dances and converses with Asta Sven at the Shorham this week, is the answer to Asta's prayer for a perfect dancing partner. "I looked for a dancing pratner for years," says Asta. "If they were pleasant and easy to get along with, they couldn't dance. And if they were good dancers, they had tempers like Gargantua. So I had "Gabby" made. He dances just as I wish, and if he talks back to me—well, I'm the one who puts the words in his mouth."

If there were rafters in Paul Young's, Jerry and Tuck would raise 'em. Standees crowd the rear of the spot during those midnight J. and T. spasms. Turk looks like Buster Keaton. Jerry—she's our ides of an incendiary bomb . . .

Louise Lee, who's had her nose remodeled into the cutest little schnozzeletie, has just returned to Paul Young's. Everyone's admiring her 1941 model profile.

INDOOR SPORTS SECTION. Cosmos Room. Carmen Cavallaro cutting the three-story, rainbow-lighted cake at his twenty-eighth birthday party. As a cake cutter, Carmen's a nifty piano player . . . Neptune Room. Pianist Bob Hellman startling his table companions with that trick involving a glass, dimes and paper napkins. We understand that glass breakage at Neptune has soared like anything since Bob took up magic. . . . Troika. Our discovery of why the blouses of Metia, the ciggie lass, have such beautifully puffy sleeves. She stuffs them with tissue paper. . . . Ciro's Famous Village. Those practical jokers who kept shaking maracas under the table the other night. The mysterious clack-clacking nearly drove the Mayor mad. . . . Plymouth. Just running the Plymouth is the favorite indoor sport of part owner Carl Braden. But he used to be a boxer.

BUSY BILL, Guitarist Bill Gibson is one of the busiest men in Paul Kain's Glen Echo band. He starts radio rehersal with Art Godfrey at 8 a. m., broadcasts at 9:15, makes transcriptions at 10. In the afternoon he teaches guitar. From 9 p. m. until midnight he's on the Glen Echo bandstand.

HELPFUL BILL. A grown-up Boy Scout is Maestro Bill Strickland, of the Lotus. Never a day without a good deed. Most unique of Bill's good deeds occurred after his audience with Pope Pius XI; he met Grace Mueller (spaghetti Muellers) in the Vatican corridor. She was very put out because she didn't have the veil necessary for a Papal audience. So Bill borrowed a veil for her from a lady exiting from the Pope's presence.

If Marvin Henderson, Rainbow Room's new steel guitar star, ever waves his hands, everybody will scream. He wears a pick on every finger and thumb with a net effect of giant vulture's claws.

TUNE TRICKERY. Lounge Riviera. Those dazzlers from "Road to Zanzibar," newest Crosby-Hope celluloid. Maestro Pete Macias says that "Birds of a Feather" and "It's Always You" are the best of the group . . . Anchor Room. Eileen George's lowdown crooning of "I'm Walking by the River." We like it better than the Connie Boswell version . . . Cafe Caprice.

PASS TO PENNSYLVANIA. Hi Hat's Jack Summerville and his Four M's are very happy because their recent visitor, the mayor of Scranton, Pa., has sent them all Pennsylvania courtesy cards. This means that they may have a chance in an argument with a Pennsylvania State cop.

MELLIFLUOUS MELLOPHONE. That strange and unused instrument lying beside the River Bend bandstand is a mellophone. We asked Maestro George Stein what it sounded like and why he didn't play it. He said, "It sounds like a cross between-a. I don't play it because it sounds like that. I keep it here because if I take it home my wife plays it."

The "Hobby Horse Derby" will be off tomorrow night at Kavakos Grill. By actual count the Kavakos hobby horses threw more people for a loss than the worst bronco ever turned loose in a rodeo.

"EVERYTHING HAPPENS TO ME" is the new theme song of Nightingale's singer, Tommy Lawrence. After barely getting over a broken ankle, he's having a lot of wisdom tooth trouble, is singing his highest notes in a dentist's chair.

'It's Worth Defending'

American Way Just, Says Hughes

Defense of the American way of life "is worth while only because it is the pathway of the just," Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes declared yesterday.

He addressed the opening day's session of the annual meeting of the American Law Institute at the Mayflower Hotel, which is discussing clarification of the common law.

President Roosevelt emphasized, in a message to the convention, that "it is particularly vital, in the stress and strain of the world conflict, that orderly development of jurisprudence should not be neglected."

The Chief Justice said: "The lamps of justice are dimmed or wholly gone out in many parts of the earth, but these lights are still shining brightly here.

"We are engaged in harnessing our national power for the defense of our way of life. But that way is worth while only because it is the pathway of the just."

Of the work of the courts Chief Justice Hughes said, "It is our high privilege, although our task may seem prosaic, to strengthen the defenses of democracy by commending to public confidence and esteem the working of the institutions of justice in both State and Nation."

The efficiency of the courts is being improved by the administrative office of the United States courts and the Law Institute, he stated.

"We steadily advance in perfecting the machinery and improving opportunity," he declared. "Still in every department of administration it is the human factor that counts most.

"The community looks to our judges for competency, efficiency and impartiality, without which codes merely add to an accumulation of legal futilities.

"It is the privilege and duty of the judiciary to demonstrate the capacity of democratic government to have the people's laws administered without 'an evil eye and an unequal hand.'

"In this sphere of judicial activity we are not crusaders save as we are zealous in upholding the majesty of the law and are keenly intent upon the hearing and deciding of controversies between man and man, and between government and citizen, according to the law and not with any ulterior policy or purpose.

"Democracy cannot escape its pressure groups. Each interest has its imperious demands. These groups compete in the market place, in the forums of public opinion, in popular elections, and in our legislative halls, but they have no place in the halls of judicial administration."

President Roosevelt's message to the 730 members of the institute said:

"In this critical period, the democracies are engaged in an endeavor to vindicate the reign of law and to sustain the supremacy of popular government.

"It is particularly vital, therefore, in the stress and strain of the world conflict, that orderly development of jurisprudence should not be neglected. The continuous process of adjusting and moulding the law to conform to the social needs of the times must proceed without undue interruption.

Cites Outstanding Advances

"The past few years have marked outstanding advances in several branches of the law, especially in Federal, civil and criminal procedure. Much more, however, still remains to be attained."

A gift of $164,000 from the Carnegie Corporation to carry out the work of the institute during the next three years was announced by William Draper Lewis, of Philadelphia, director of the organization, in his annual report.

Edmund M. Morgan, of Harvard University Law School, presided at an afternoon session devoted to discussion of the code of evidence. Revisions of the code will be considered in the discussions which continue today.

All's Well in Cleveland—but the Crowd

Cleveland, Ohio, May 6.—Cleveland citizens are still slightly distrustful of their league-leading ball club, it seems. They aren't exactly flocking to the Cleveland ballyard to see their pets play. In fact, the attendance thus far smacks of a team that might be in the cellar rather than at the top of the league.

POVICH

The other day, for instance, the circumstances were such as to stir up a crowd of 10,000 payees in any other city in the league, perhaps more and undoubtedly more in such towns as Boston and Detroit. The Indians had won ten straight. They were leading the league. Bob Feller was scheduled to pitch. The day was made for baseball, and the Cleveland newspapers were making front-page heroes of the Indians. But what happened? A mere 2,500 fans were present.

Today presented an even more shameful turnout for a league-leading club. Today the Indians had won 11 straight and were out to equal their 12-game streak of 19 years ago. Well, today, there were only 1,500 persons in the park, including the ball players and the pass list.

Chief reason is, of course, that Cleveland never has been rated as a hot baseball town, but another contributing factor for the sparsity of customers undoubtedly is the dismal record of Cleveland teams in the past. Too many times Cleveland folks have become excited about springtime winning streaks and thronged the local park only to suffer a horrible letdown later in the season when their pets proved to be only a springtime flash in the pan.

One official of a visiting club has expressed his frank disgust with the situation in Cleveland and declares that "This town doesn't deserve a pennant. It's no less than a disgrace and a reflection on all big league baseball when a league-leading team can only pull a few hundred fans into the park."

Detroiters Faithful to the End

In contrast to the dreary reputation of Cleveland is the high fervor of Detroit baseball fans, who, on their record, are certainly the most loyal in the league. In one season, during the regime of Ty Cobb as manager of the Tigers, the Detroit club had encountered a losing streak of 13 straight games. On the afternoon of their fourteenth straight defeat, 19,000 Detroit fans were in the park.

Unlike the fans of other cities, Detroit seemingly has not been spoiled by the free radio show which the big leagues have gone in for. It is no secret that in Washington, Clark Griffith would not have been greatly disappointed this year if negotiations for the radio privileges at Griffith Stadium had collapsed. In New York, where the attendance is up at the home games of both the Yankees and the Giants, club officials are convinced that the absence of radio broadcasts is one of the chief reasons.

The great gnawing fear of the baseball magnates is that their game may become a weekend sport, at least only profitable on the Saturdays, Sundays and holidays. That is the situation now in Cleveland, Chicago, Philadelphia and St. Louis, and in Washington the week-day crowds have been nothing to excite the front office.

With the club owners, any pennant triumph would be preferable to one by Cleveland, which is a ghost park on week days. That preference even extends to St. Louis, which is, admittedly, the worst-drawing town in the league. But for St. Louis there are excuses. The Browns have been the league's doormats for so long that the fans have had little reasons to cheer. Given a club that could attain any place in the first division, St. Louis would be a far more profitable league point than Cleveland. So would Philadelphia.

New York Not Exactly Red Hot

A New York pennant victory in the American League is always profitable for league teams in general, of course. On a per capita basis, New York is not a red hot baseball town, but a winning Yankee team always spills dough into the league's coffers.

If the league's club owners had their choice in the matter, they would be very apt to pass up Detroit this season and elect the Red Sox as the pennant winners. That would seem to be the more astute selection from a financial viewpoint inasmuch as Detroit may be slightly surfeited with pennants while Boston is pennant-starved.

Boston puts Cleveland in a poor light as a baseball town. Like the Cleveland citizens, Boston fans have seen their team take summertime league leads and blow them, and they have been asked to root for the worst pitching the league has seen, but Boston fans continue to turn out in great numbers at Fenway Park. The town would go daffy about a pennant winner and wouldn't wait until the club had clinched the pennant before deciding to go out to the park and watch it play.

Arcaro & Jones: The Perfect Combination

New York, May 6.—Sportin' around.

If Winter comes, can Ace Parker's broken ankle be far behind? . . . Billy Conn and his manager, Johnny Ray, bet and lost a young mint on Ernie Vigh to beat Billy Soose . . . Speaking of Conn, he wants to train close to the bright lights of Broadway for the Louis fight. Can't stand loneliness . . . Buck Newsom thinks the last-place Browns will finish fourth . . . That's a dandy safety cap perfected for Brooklyn ball players by Dr. Walter Dandy, Johns Hopkins brain specialist . . . We wonder if there ever was a smarter combination of jockey and trainer than Eddie Arcaro and Ben Jones. They figured out the scheme of putting one blinker on Whirlaway (on the right eye) to keep him from bearing to the right. Arcaro tried to bet $500 even money that this notorious bearer-outer wouldn't do same in the Derby. Couldn't get it down.

CONSIDINE

Billy Soose is having trouble peeling off enough poundage to get down to the 160-pound mark for Friday night's middleweight championship match. If he wins the championship it won't be long before he starts campaigning in the light heavyweight division, which shouldn't be too tough for him now that Conn has deserted it . . . Wilbur Shaw, gunning for his fourth Indianapolis racing title (which would break the record), is not disturbed by the fact that this will be his thirteenth year of Indianapolis racing.

Did you know that there was a Man o' War running back in 1902, 17 years before Sam Riddle's colt of the same name made history? . . . John McLaughry and Doug Oldershaw, of the New York Giants football team, are driving British ambulances across the United States in a fund-raising stunt . . . Roosevelt Raceway trotting promoters, though they lost a few thousand during last season's initial attempt to put night trotting into New York, spent $100,000 in improvements during the off-season . . . The Overlin-Soose fight will be televised on a full-sized movie screen, for the edification of a select audience invited by R. C. A. It's the shape of things to come.

Gene Sarazen told a moving story about a caddy, at the advertising Club luncheon the other day: "I was on the way to England for the 1928 British Open," he said, "and on the boat I mentioned to Walter Hagen that the trip was going to cost me 12 grand, but that it would be money invested if I won the tournament. Haig said he could help me by giving me his favorite old English caddy. His name was Dan. He said Dan would cost me $200, but that seemed cheap to me. So I got Dan and pretty soon I was playing in the tournament. And I came to a tricky par five hole and I said to Dan, 'Give me my brassie,' on my second shot. He told me that I'd better play it safe, or I'd land in the water, but I wouldn't listen to him. I said, 'Give it to me; I want to lead this field tonight.' Old Dan said, 'Ah, sir, you should want to lead the field at the end, not tonight.' But I took the brassie anyway, and sure enough, I went into the creek. I took seven on the hole, and I lost the tournament by one stroke to—guess who—Walter Hagen.

"Four years later I went back to England," Gene continued. "I got hot one day in practice and hired my young caddy there-with to caddy for me in the Open, even though I remembered that back in '28, old Dan had cried a little when I lost, and had said he wanted to live long enough to 'win the Open for me.' Well, a few days before the tournament I began arguing with my young caddy, and more than one member of the nobility came to me and told me that old Dan's heart was breaking because I had passed him by. Well, finally I hired Dan—high starched collar and all. He was so grateful that he went out the morning of the tournament, early, and measured the distances between the cup on each green and the edges of each green. I led the field from start to finish. The final day was a great day for old Dan. He disappeared as soon as I sank my last putt and I wondered out loud, to Lady Astor, if he had gone off with them. But just before I was about to receive the trophy from the Prince of Wales, old Dan showed up. He had bicycled into town, to pick up his two kids. He wanted them to be present at the ceremony . . . Old Dan died two weeks later. He was 82. He died happy, I think, because he had promised me that he'd win the Open for me. And he did."

5 Preakness Eligibles Are Beaten

Bold Irishman Runs A Tired Last; Place Honors to Alaking; Choppy Sea Is Third

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Pimlico, May 6.—Preakness hopes rose and fell here today. Crispin Oglebay's Ocean Blue stamped himself as real Preakness timber with an easy victory over five other eligibles for the big test on Saturday. Ocean Blue's stock went up as abruptly as that of the Wheatley Stable's Bold Irishman came down. The latter finished a dog-tired last in the race, the $2,500 added Survivor Stakes. Hal Price Headley's Alaking, a little-regarded candidate, became a possible starter by finishing second, three lengths behind the winner. Two lengths farther back came the Millsdale Stable's Kansas, the only member of the field with an excuse.

Asked to go more than six furlongs for the first time, Ocean Blue just jogged along in front under the guiding of Jockey Ira Hanford, who won the Kentucky Derby with Bold Venture. After the race, Hanford said, "I did not have to ask this colt for real speed. I let out a notch here and there but he was well within himself through the stretch."

Odds-On Favorite

The crowd of 8,000, probably recalling Bold Irishman's victory over Our Boots and Whirlaway when the latter ran out in the Pimlico Futurity last fall, installed the colt and Choppy Sea, his running mate, as an odds-on favorite. Ocean Blue, winner of two other races, was a $10.50 shot.

A son of Blue Larkspur and Anchors Ahead, Ocean Blue turned in fine time. He ran the mile and one-sixteenth in 1:45 1-5, the best since the stake was inaugurated in 1938. He put in a good mile in 1:38 2-5.

The only excuse for Bold Irishman could be that he was making his first start of the year. However, he has worked as if fit. Today he had clear sailing and good speed for a half but began to fade at that point and finished eight lengths behind Ocean Blue.

Hanford lost no time in taking Ocean Blue to the front. He had a clear lead over Choppy Sea, Kansas and Bold Irishman as the field banked the clubhouse turn. Kansas was jammed in between the two Wheatley Stable horses and Mora had to pull up. On the backstretch, Bold Irishman was closest to Ocean Blue's pace and the crowd expected him to make his move.

As the field left the backstretch, Bold Irishman began to weaken. Ocean Blue drew out, Alaking and Kansas rallied mildly, but there was no catching the pacemaker.

Jockey Conn McCreary, regular rider of Our Boots, showed the crowd some skill by boosting home the winners of the seventh and eighth races. In the seventh he won with Lante, bringing the filly from behind to down Brooklandville and Our Florence. Lante was a $15.60 shot.

In the eighth McCreary rode along in front on Challante and scored over Misrule and Candle Ends. The winner paid $12.40.

Tiger Star Off to Army; Refuses League Flag-Raising Ceremony; Yankees Beaten, 7-4

By the Associated Press

Detroit, May 6.—Big Hank Greenberg closed out a baseball season and perhaps a career by belting two home runs, his first of the year, as the Detroit Tigers today defeated the New York Yankees, 7 to 4, for a sweep of the three-game series.

Greenberg, one of the game's great power hitters, exploded with the precision of a time bomb at his farewell party and before he checked in his uniform to Manager Del Baker the Tigers were lodged in second place in the American League standings four games behind the Cleveland Indians.

Notified in the dressing room that his local draft board had authorized his appearance at the American League pennant raising ceremonies tomorrow, Greenberg said he would report on schedule at 8:30 a. m. tomorrow for induction into the Army.

"I've asked no favors and I'll accept none now," Hankus Pankus said flatly. "I'll do the best I can to become a good soldier."

The American League's most valuable player will be a buck private at Fort Custer, Mich., by nightfall tomorrow, draft officials said. He automatically goes off the Detroit pay roll at a reported $50,000 a year and starts his Army life at $21 a month.

Big Hank's home run feat was matched by Bruce Campbell in the 11-hit attack that gave Detroit its fifth consecutive victory. Greenberg connected for a 350-foot drive off Starting Pitcher Ernie Bonham in the second inning, hitting high into the upper left-field deck. Campbell followed with a circuit clout to right.

In the third inning the Tiger one-two punch operated again, Greenberg driving home Rudy York with his clout. That gave Sophomore Johnny Gorsica a five-run lead that was adequate for victory despite Gerald Priddy's three-run homer in the seventh.

Greenberg's two hits raised his season batting mark to .289, far below his lifetime mark of .326. Tomorrow his leftfield job will be filled by Ned Harris, left-handed rookie up from Beaumont of the Texas League.

Chapman Obtains Marriage License; Silent on Plans

By the Associated Press

Montgomery, Ala., May 6.—Richard D. Chapman, national amateur golf champion, and Eloise Geist Scheaffer, of Philadelphia, Pa., obtained a marriage license today at the office of the Montgomery County probate judge.

Chapman, assistant physical director at Maxwell Field, gave his age as 30 and said in the license application it would be his third marriage. Mrs. Scheaffer, 34, said it would be her second.

A resident of Greenwich, Conn., Chapman was called back by his draft board after beginning his civilian duties at Maxwell Field recently. He returned last week, subject to recall.

Neither Chapman nor his bride-to-be was reached for comment on wedding plans, but an acquaintance said "it will not be today."

Mrs. Scheaffer reported in the license application she was divorced in Florida in January. Mrs. Marjorie Logan Chapman's divorce from the golfer was announced in Miami yesterday.

Reds Lose 2d Straight Game To Phils, 4-2

Philadelphia, May 6.—Little Bobby Bragan and the veteran Cy Blanton teamed up today to pull the Phillies out of the National League cellar with a 4-to-2 victory over Cincinnati, the Phils' second straight over the World Champion Reds.

Shortstop Bragan, who seems to hit better against the Reds than any other team, doubled Ben Warren home in the second inning and then homered off Johnny Van Dermeer in the sixth for what proved to be the winning run.

Blanton pitched five-hit ball in hanging up his third triumph of the season. Two of the hits were homers by Ernie Lombardi and Harry Craft that accounted for the Reds' tallies. Blanton did not issue a base on balls.

Vander Meer showed a blazing fast ball, striking out 11 and giving up only six hits. All of them, however, went for extra bases.

Vernon's Bat Big Factor In Victory

First Sacker Hits Homer for Two Runs In First; Singles One Home in Ninth

By Shirley Povich

Post Staff Writer

Cleveland, May 6.—From an overdose of Dutch Leonard's knuckle ball, the Cleveland Indians' 11-game winning streak expired this afternoon coincident with a 5-3 victory by the Nats. Washington's big righthander, magnificent in the pinches—he struck out six—outpitched Jim Bagby and John Heving.

Leonard had the help of Mickey Vernon in no small measure this afternoon. Vernon hoisted a first-inning homer over the rightfield wall that was loaded with two runs, and in the ninth he drove a third Washington run across the plate with a single to right.

Vernon Hits Home Run

Leonard had the help also of Third Baseman Ken Keltner in the Cleveland infield in the eighth inning with the score tied at 2-2, the bases filled and two out. In this crisis, Keltner botched a ground ball off Ben Chapman's bat and two important Washington runs filtered home.

In the late innings, Leonard had to battle hard for his victory. The Indians touched him up for eight of their ten hits in the last four innings, and the big knuckle baller was constantly in trouble, but he crowded three of his strikeouts into that period. On each occasion he got a called third strike over the plate.

Bagby, the only regular Cleveland pitcher who has not contributed a victory to the Indians' 11-game streak, encountered trouble in the first inning—2-run trouble. George Case, hitless in 27 consecutive times at bat, when he returned to the Nats' line-up today crashed a line drive toward left field only to see Third Baseman Ken Keltner spear it with one hand. But Roger Cramer bashed a clean single to center and then it was that Vernon checked in with his home-run loft over the right-field screen.

Leonard made that lead stand up until the sixth, to which point he was pitching two-hit ball. Bagby was getting sensational fielding support to hold the Nats scoreless for six innings after the first. Lou Boudreau scampered all over the shortstop territory to deprive Buddy Myer, Buddy Lewis and Cramer of hits in different innings, and in the third, Ray Mack made a sensational pick-up far back on the grass to keep a hit from Jim Vernon.

Wild Pitch to Rescue

Leonard, who gave up a useless hit to the Indians in each of the first two innings, threw hitless ball at them during the third, fourth and fifth, but they caught up with him in the sixth.

Bagby, himself, launched the tying rally when he opened the sixth with a two-bagger against the center-field wall and Roy Weatherly promptly scored him with a single to left. Leonard fanned Keltner, but Boudreau singled to center and Trosky drew a walk. With the bases full, Heath banged a long fly to Chapman for the second out. Weatherly scoring the tying run after the catch, but the side was out when Boudreau attempted to take third on the play and was cut down by Chapman's throw to Lewis.

In the seventh, Leonard was in deep trouble, but, paradoxically, a

Mioland Tops Handicap Stars In Dixie Today

By a Staff Correspondent

Pimlico, Md., May 6.—Eleven distance-loving thoroughbreds compose the overnight field for the thirty-seventh running of the famous Dixie Handicap, headlining tomorrow afternoon's card at Pimlico. With no withdrawals, the $20,000 added event will gross $36,875 and net the winner 20,350.

Making his first first Eastern appearance of the season, and likely to rule the favorite, is the top weighted Mioland, principal member of the gold-garnering Charles S. Howard Stable. The Oregon-bred colt, by virtue of his splendid form last season and sensational victory in the mile and a half San Juan Capistrano Handicap after dropping a touch decision to Bay View in the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap, must carry 129 pounds. He will be ridden by Leon Haas. Trainer Tom Smith has brought the colt up to his engagement in splendid condition and has no excuses to offer, mud or dry.

Among Mioland's opponents are three invaders from Kentucky—Valdina Farm's Viscounty, with 112 pounds; Milky Way Farm's 1940 Kentucky Derby winner, Gallahadion, with 113, and Woodvale Farm's Haltal, 110 pounds. The latter was third in the Widener Cup and will be ridden by the sensational Conn McCreary.

Shot Put, triumphant in the New York Handicap, at 2¼ miles, last fall, will represent Mrs. Marie Evans, of Chicago, in the 1 3-16-mile special under an impost of 115 pounds.

Going into the Dixie without benefit of a seasoning race is George D. Widener's Your Chance, one of the better 3-year-olds of last year. He is the second high weight of the overnight line-up with 120 pounds. Others in the field are Mrs. A. J. Abel's Honey Cloud, 110, last year's Dixie winner; Arnold Hagner's Dit, 110; R. S. Clark's Saguenay II, 101, and Mrs. E. K. Bryson's Cis Marion, 100 pounds, including a 3-pound penalty for winning the Pimlico Oaks.

Sox Get College Star

Hubbell Hurls, Giants Whip Cubs by 5-3

By the Associated Press

New York, May 6.—King Carl Hubbell had one of his good days today and held the Chicago Cubs to four hits as the New York Giants pounded out a 5-to-3 victory and dropped the Bruins into the National League cellar.

Hank Leiber hit a homer with two on the first inning, but after that the Cubs were helpless as Hub fanned seven and received brilliant fielding support.

The Giants made 13 hits off Claude Passeau, including Babe Young's fifth homer of the season with two on in the third and Mel Ott's sixth with none on in the seventh.

The Cubs, who earlier today sold the veteran Billy Herman to Brooklyn, had Rookie Lou Stringer at second base. He went hitless, while across town Herman batted four for four for the Dodgers.

Slender Doswell Olson, Washington-Lee High mound star, kept his record for the season intact yesterday when he set down Eastern, 6-1, for his third straight triumph at the Arlington Park.

Leonard Halts Cleveland For Nats, 5-3

wild pitch rescued him. Beau Bell rapped a three-bagger against the right-center wall to start the inning and the Indians had the potential winning run on third with none out. Leonard cut loose with a wild pitch into the dirt past Ferrell and Bell, to his grief, attempted to score. Ferrell scurried after the ball and Leonard tagged Bell out at the plate.

All of a sudden with two out in the eighth, the Nats came up with the winning runs. The two roommates, Lewis and Travis hit identical singles into right field, and Myer walked to fill the bases. In that crisis, Bagby was removed and Righthander John Heving got the Cleveland pitching job. He appeared to be out of his trouble when Chapman banged a grounder at Keltner, but Keltner fumbled the ball and Lewis and Travis galloped home.

That session netted Leonard a 4-2 lead, but the Indians promptly got a run back when Weatherly opened the eighth with a two-bagger. Lewis made a superb play on Keltner's grounder behind third for the first putout, but Boudreau drew a walk and Trosky singled to right to fetch Weatherly home and move Boudreau to third with the tying run. Then Leonard bore down magnificently. He held Heath to a short fly to Case that kept the runners on base and then he slipped a side-retiring third strike past Bell.

George Case and Mickey Vernon teamed to give Leonard a comforting ninth-inning run. Case's speed manifested itself when he beat out a push bunt to Mack and then stole second—his first theft of the season—on the next pitch. A bit later, Vernon brought him home with a single to right.

There was mild trouble for Leonard in the ninth. He shoved a third strike past Pinch Hitter Campbell, but Hemsley singled. Leonard had a 3-0 count on Pinch Hitter Myer Howell, and then cleverly got him on strikes. He was out of the woods when Weatherly hit into a force play to end the competition.

Miller Wants Feather Title Picture Cleared

Firm as ever in his conviction that Petey Scalzo is the one and only featherweight champion of the world, Heinie turned up yesterday at Turner's Arena, where Joey Archibald is working out for his Monday night fight in Griffith Stadium with Harry Jeffra.

Scalzo Still Tops

They're billing the third chapter of the Archibald-Jeffra series as a world's title affair—Maryland-New York-Pennsylvania-California version—but Heinie's still not convinced.

"In any true sense of sportsmanship there should be but one champion, and I think Scalzo is that champion," Col. Miller said. "They should match Scalzo with the winner of this fight and settle this argument for all time.

"The Jeffra-Archibald thing should be a hell of a fight, but I still stick to my convictions: Scalzo is the champion."

Both Appear Today

Scalzo, recognized as champion in the 43 N. B. A. States, has been ordered to meet the Jeffra-Archibald winner.

Meanwhile, Archibald yesterday said he planned to train down to 124 pounds for the 15-round battle coming up Monday night. Both Archibald and Jeffra will appear for public view today at 1 p. m. in Turner's Fourteenth and T Streets arena.

Miller Gains Semifinals In Net Event

Bob Miller, Coolidge High's surprising young netman, was the first to gain the semifinal round of the second annual Sidwell-Friends School Interscholastic Tennis Tournament yesterday as action continued at a hot clip.

Miller eliminated St. Alban's Lee from further competition with an 8—6, 6—3 victory.

The most closely contested battle however, saw Dave Smith, of Western, nose out Ervin, of Gonzaga, in a head-and-head match, 6—4, 5—7, 8—6.

The host school and Tech remained in a deadlock for the coveted team trophy when Alvin Dulcan and Furniss, respectively, gained the quarter-final round. The first defeated Tech's Kientz, and Furniss took the measure of Wilson's Stewart.

Representatives of three schools gained the semifinals in the Prep School Invitational portion of the tourney. Smith came through for the home school, Harrison and Hodge for Episcopal, and Garlock for Landon.

INTERSCHOLASTIC RESULTS

Quarterfinal—Miller (Coolidge) defeated Lee (St. Alban's), 8—6, 6—3.

Second round—Smith (Western) defeated Ervin (Gonzaga), 6—4, 5—7, 8—6; Dulcan (Friends) defeated Kientz (Tech), 6—4, 6—2; Furniss (Tech) defeated Stewart (Wilson), 8—6, 6—0.

Baer Unimpressive in Workout For Title Fight With Joe Louis

Ancil Hoffman (rear), manager of Max and Buddy Baer, lends his approval as Buddy (right) puts a strangle hold on Harry Mendel. Harry, manager of Tony Galento, has been the main cog in trying to eliminate the Baers but yesterday joined Buddy's camp as an ally. Mike Jacobs assigned Mendel to Buddy's camp to turn on the high-pressure publicity for Buddy's May 23 fight with Joe Louis. Could it be they're thinking that $15 top price will scare off the ringsiders?

Buddy Looks Like Easy Target for Left Hook; Harry Mendel Joins Camp as Ballyhoo Agent

Appearing a slight bit overweight and highly susceptible to left hooks flung aimlessly by his sparring partners, Buddy Baer brushed through a brief workout yesterday at Olney, Md., that didn't do much toward convincing the skeptics he'll get anywhere with Joe Louis May 23 in Griffith Stadium.

Baer worked two rounds with bulbous Elza Thompson, the colored heavyweight whom Louis discharged as a sparring partner because he was too dangerous, according to the publicists, and three more with Willie (Babe) Ritchie.

The strangest sight of the day, however, was that of Harry Mendel arriving to take over the job of ballyhooing the Baer stock for the forthcoming world's heavyweight champion.

Mendel, manager of Tony Galento, is the gentleman who has tried hardest to have the brothers Max and Buddy Baer removed from the fight picture by Tony, without much success. Mike Jacobs assigned Mendel to the job despite this fact, however.

Although Baer appeared to be as easy to hit as Steve Mamakos, and with a punch that is Louis' specialty, he showed a bit of style in slapping around Thompson and Ritchie. He displayed a nice left hook that may trouble Louis for a while, but it was at close quarters that he looked best.

As one observer put it, Baer is either a good actor or he has all the confidence in the world he'll be the one to knock out Louis. Buddy now weighs 247 and is going to shave down to 238 for the title fight, his manager, Ancil Hoffman, said. If you're ambitious you can get up at 6 o'clock this morning and see Buddy doing his daily stint of roadwork at Steve Cochran's farm. He'll work out there again today at 2:30 p. m. Louis will arrive tomorrow to pitch camp at Riverside Stadium.

Georgetown Crushes V. P. I., 15-0, Behind 1-Hit Pitching

Dieckelman And Powers Check Tech

Former Is Pulled After 6 Innings of Hitless Ball; V. P. I. Uses Three Pitchers

By Jack Munhall

Burley Dick Dieckelman and slim Vinnie Powers combined yesterday to pitch a one-hitter against V. P. I. while Georgetown's power-laden nine crashed out 18 hits for a 15-0 shutout victory on the Hilltop Medical School field.

Dieckelman hurled hitless ball the first six innings, then turned over the job to Powers, who allowed the Gobblers' lone hit with one out in the eighth. Jules Rubin, third batter in the V. P. I. line-up, ruined the no-hitter with a clean single into right field.

Dieckelman, a 200-pound junior lefthander, gave one of the finest mound performances of recent years here, his six hitless innings being rivaled of late years only by the five-inning no-hit shutout Lefty Earl Springer turned in for Maryland two seasons ago.

Powers Shines

Against Dieckelman the Gobblers were a feeble lot at the plate, and only Dick's wildness marred what would have been an exceptional pitching record. Dieckelman walked four, hit one batsman and saw two other visitors reach first on errors. However, by inserting seven timely strikeouts the Georgetown ace prevented anyone from getting as far as third base, and only a pair of runners violated second.

Powers, making his first appearance since fully recovering from a shoulder injury, also was impressive. Save for the hit he surrendered to Rubin, he was even more effective than Dieckelman. The lanky, gum-chewing senior right-hander faced only 13 men in the three innings he worked, and four times he sent Gobblers back to the bench mumbling over a third strike. Sometimes wild, Powers was not yesterday, and he passed only one batter.

But pitching was only half of the story of yesterday's ball game which produced the Hoyas' eighth victory in ten starts, for they enjoyed one of their best hitting days of the season. They clubbed three V. P. I. pitchers for 18 hits, including lusty homers by Jim Castiglia and George Pajak and doubles by Jules Koshlap and Lou Ghecas.

Center Market Tops D. G. S., 3-1

Center Market's DeVers and D. G. S.'s Kimmel locked in a pitchers' battle in the Department Baseball League yesterday on the Ellipse, the former winning by a 3-1 count after a hectic eight-inning game.

Kimmel's five-hit performance was one bit better than DeVers', but he allowed a pair of walks and D. G. S. players kicked in with five errors to hurt his chances.

Fishing with JACK BELL

Catches of hard heads were reported early this week from Benedict. Anglers fishing just below Benedict caught from 5 to 11 fish per boat. One party of anglers headed by Harry Brody, Gilbert Arnold and Frank DelVecchio fishing out of Benedict caught 16 big hard heads after a few hours.

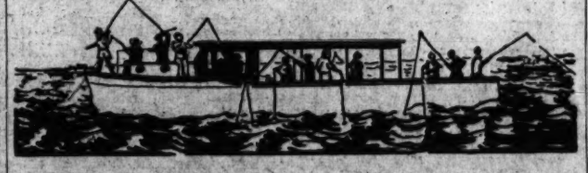
JACK BELL

By this coming weekend, hard heads should be running in greater numbers to make fishing more interesting.

Reports still are coming in of big catches on the other side of the bay on the Honga River.

Drum or channel bass are running at Oregon Inlet. Sam Tillett, of Wanchese, who led an Ohio party of anglers, caught 38 fish, the largest of which weighed 55 pounds.

Capt. H. C. Smith, of Manteo, took out a party of five Philadelphia anglers who caught 22 channel bass.



Fishing for trout on Big Hunting Creek in Catoctin near Thurmont Sunday was carried on in a dust storm . . . a dirt road that lies along side the stream was so dry that dust raised by the heavy auto travel in the area made trouting a poor sport. Dust could not only be seen floating on the surface of the water, but you could almost see it floating in the anglers' eyes.

Neither could the beauty of the countryside be appreciated due to the dust covering everything in the surrounding area. While looking up the valley toward the setting sun, the air seemed to be entirely filled with dust. It seems that some road surface treatment would help conditions tremendously.

What is wrong with the right-hand fork of Big Hunting Creek above Cunningham Falls? Expressions of disappointment were heard from many hikers and anglers visiting the falls because of the dirty gray water coming over it. The stream bottom and rocks for some distance below the falls are covered with a gray, oozy silt. Silt settled on rocks during high water is dried, cracked and flaky. The falls and stream have lost a great deal of their beauty, not to mention the silt ruining the fishing.

At the Jungle Cocks meeting in Catoctin, on Big Hunting Creek, May 2, 3 and 4, it was voted to place two bronze plaques on the large rocks of Cunningham Falls in memory of Paul Townsend and Ozark Ripley, deceased members.

New officers elected at the second campfire meeting of Jungle Cocks are J. Hammond Brown, ohtdoor writer for the Baltimore News Post, president; Dave Roberts, of the Cincinnati Enquirer, and Lawrence Ritchie, secretary to former President Herbert Hoover, vice presidents; Joe E. Brooks, jr., director of the Maryland Fish and Game Association and Wildlife artist, secretary and treasurer.

National directors are Charles E. Jackson, assistant chief of the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service; Talbot Denmead, chief of U. S. Game Law Enforcement; Dan Holland, of Field and Stream; Ray Camp, outdoor writer, New York Times; John Alden Knight, inventor of the Solunar fish tables and writer; James A. Stuber, secretary of the Outdoors Writers Association, Columbus, Ohio; Tommy Aitken, director of Miami Fishing Tournament; Arnold Stewart, outdoor writer, Wilmington News Journal; John Mock, of the Pittsburg Press; Bill Ackerman, of the Washington Evening Star; Clark Venable, of Potomac Beach, Va., outdoor writer; Frank Bentz, Maryland Conservation Commission; Jack Bell, The Washington Post.

Jed Johnson, member of Congress from Oklahoma, arrived barely in time for dinner Saturday night. He was lost somewhere in Otter valley for a while, until a rescue party was sent out to find him. After the dinner he kept the boys in laughter with his funny stories.

Big game sportsmen had believed the Pacific white-tailed deer to be an extinct species for many years, but last year Victor B. Scheffer, a naturalist of Fish and Wild Life Service, discovered about 600 of these long-lost animals in southern Washington and northern Oregon.

St. Alban's Wins Prep Net Title

Competing in the Prep School League for the first time in four years, St. Alban's netmen yesterday unseated the defending champion, Georgetown Prep, on the latter's court. The score was 4½-½.

St. Alban's won every match but one, which was divided. Doyle and Sacks, of St. Alban's, defeated Baldwin and Cremins, 6—4 and then lost, 4—6, but before the deciding set could be played, darkness set in.

Cooper (A.) defeated Baldwin, 6—1, 6—0; Chewning (A.) defeated R. Barrett, 62, 6—2; Doyle (A.) defeated Cremins, 6—2, 6—1.

Doyle and Sacks (A.) divided with Baldwin and Cremins, 6—4, 4—6 (darkness); Geissle and Block (A.) defeated Scott and Barrett, 6—3, 6—4.

They are the only club in the league which is not asked to play at least one series against a Detroit line-up containing Hank Greenberg. . . . Sidney Hudson goes to the pitching mound tomorrow against Schoolboy Rowe. . . . George Case had fire in his eye after Manager Bucky Harris restored him to the line-up today . . . hitless in 28 consecutive times at bat before today's game. Case murdered the first pitch of the game, only to see it rocket into Ken Keltner's glove. . . . Later in the game, he hit a vicious two-bagger to left, beat out a bunt, stole his first base of the season, and hit one more line drive into Keltner's glove. . . . Roy Weatherly, who spilled Cecil Travis roughly on a play at second base yesterday, tried the same trick on Buddy Myer this afternoon, and ended up with his head between the legs of Myer, who was giving the Weatherly thatch a vigorous once-over with his knees. . . . The Nats' bench, led by Manager Bucky Harris, was giving Keltner a merciless riding all afternoon. . . . Cecil Travis' lone hit in five times at bat today brought his average down to a mere .467, but his chief challenger for the batting lead, Jeff Heath, went hitless in four times at bat. . . . Dutch Leonard saved himself some grief in the eighth inning by his alertness . . . with the bases full, Heath lifted a short fly to Case who threw to the plate. . . . Cleveland runners were holding their bags, but Case's throw took a freak hop over Ferrell's head and at least a couple of Cleveland runs appeared in the making, but Leonard was backing up the play and no harm was done. . . . Ben Chapman had a horrible day of it in front of the Cleveland fans. . . . The only ball he knocked out of the infield was his grounder that Keltner muffed in the eighth. . . . Only two of the ten hits Leonard allowed were made against knuckleball pitching. . . . Jim Vernon hit a 3-and-2 pitch for his first-inning home run. . . . Leonard slipped third strikes over against two Cleveland pinch hitters in the ninth.—POVICH.

May Hardware Ten Beats Carr-Boswell

Aided by a home run inside the park, May Hardware softballers romped over Carr-Boswell ten last night, 12-7, in the feature of a double bill at the recently built Washington Softball Stadium. Second Baseman Brown slammed the four-bagger deep into center field.

In losing its first game in the Capital City League, Carr-Boswell also was credited with a homer, Ingram hitting the only ball out of the park all night.

The second game went to Mount Rainier Business Men, 6-3, at the end of a pitchers' battle between the winners' Ronchi and two Pepco hurlers. Callow, Mount first baseman, had the only extra-base hit of the game, a double.

Eagles Meet Colonials Today, Seeking to Avenge First Loss

Only college baseball scheduled here today will bring together George Washington and American University for the second time this season. The game will be played at A. U. starting at 3 and it will give the Eagles opportunity to avenge their weird 16-15 loss to George Washington April 21 on the Ellipse.

In that long-remembered contest the Colonials won by scoring two runs in the seventh, three in the eighth and five in the ninth after dissipating several healthy leads. Hero of the victory was a G. W. substitute, Joe Gallaher, whose pinch-hit triple drove in two runs and tied the score. Then Gallagher stole home and when "Dutch" Schulze, A. U. catcher, dropped the ball.

Pitching rivals today may be the same two who opened the first meeting between the teams, Frank McGinnis for G. W. and Rudy Zimpel for A. U.

Cardinals, Eagles Vie at Ashland

The track teams of Catholic and American Universities will be at Ashland, Va., today for a triangular meet with Randolph-Macon College.

For Catholic UUniversity the meet will wind up a three-day invasion of the South. Monday the Cardinals scored an impressive victory over Wake Forest in a duel meet in which Charley O'Keefe and Don Hutton gave surprisingly good performances. O'Keefe, who won the 440 Monday in the fast time of 51.7, will be shooting for an Ashland field record.

Colonial Golfers Beat Hoyas, 4-2

Led by George Vass' 78 round, George Washington golfers yesterday defeated Georgetown at Capital, 4 and 2.

The Colonials took best ball in both matches.

Vass (G. W.) defeated Phelan, 3 and 2; Andrews (G. U.) defeated Stockell, 6 and 5. Best ball—G. W., 2 up.

Kitchings (G. W.) defeated Sullivan, 9 and 8; Stewart (G. U.) defeated McAlear, 5 and 3. Best ball—G. W., 5 and 3.

Braves Bunch Runs, Beat Cards, 5-4

By International News Service

Boston, May 6.—Boston's Braves took advantage of a crumbling St. Louis defense today, pushed over all their runs in the fifth inning and defeated the Cardinals, 5 to 4. The loss snapped the Cards' 10-game winning streak.

Four St. Louis pitchers held the Braves to six hits while the Cardinals collected 11 safeties off Ferrell, Sullivan and Lamanna.

Sullivan, who replaced Ferrell in the second after the Cards had piled up a two-run lead in the opening inning, was credited with the victory.

Grodzicki was the losing twirler. He checked the Braves in the first four stanzas, but in the fifth he surrendered two costly walks. St. Louis committed three errors and the Braves had four runs when Nahem replaced Grodzicki. Eddie Miller then singled, driving West home with the winning run.

The Cards rallied for two more tallies in the eighth.

Walker's Hits Help Dodgers Beat Bucs, 7-3

By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, May 6.—After ten years as a Chicago Cub, Billy Herman put on Dodger uniform No. 19 today and helped himself to a perfect day at bat as Brooklyn beat the Pittsburgh Pirates, 7 to 3.

His feat of a double, three singles and a walk in five trips to the plate was dwarfed somewhat by the spectacular slugging of Fred (Dixie) Walker, however. The blond bomber hit two home runs over the right field wall, the second coming with the score tied 3-3 and the bases loaded in the seventh inning. His other came with the bases empty in the fourth and together the blows gave him a total of five for the season.

Joe Medwick swatted a liner into the second tier of the left field stands with Herman aboard in the first. Behind this powerful attack Whitlow Wyatt was able to coast to a fifth victory although giving up 11 hits, including a homer by Bob Elliott.

Whirlaway Arrives at Pimlico All Set for the Preakness

Trainer Ben Jones Confident His Ace Will Repeat Race That Took Derby

Pimlico, May 6.—Whirlaway, the Derby winner and the choice in Saturday's Preakness, stepped off his private car in Baltimore this morning, posed perfectly with Trainer Ben Jones and then ambled slowly over to a grass plot and started to nibble on Maryland's own blue grass.

The Calumet Farm star, center now of the sporting world, shipped perfectly according to Jones. "He's a hard horse to get into racing condition at first but he was dead fit last Saturday and I know he'll stay that way right through this season now. I'll probably breeze him on Friday and on Saturday he's going to run the same kind of race he ran in the Derby."

Fans Cheer Whirlaway

Whirlaway seemed to take his new position of national prominence most calmly and was totally indifferent to the score of flashing bulbs set off by the photographers. The only member of the Whirlaway entourage not in perfect condition was the stable pet Boogie Woogie. The first one to unload, Boogie Woogie immediately went to the van in which Whirlaway was to be placed and sniffed out all foreigners, but he walked with a noticeable limp the result of an injury suffered last week.

Maryland fans got a sneak preview of Whirlaway after today's program. Trainer Ben Jones decided to familiarize the colt with the plant here and took Whirlaway for a tour of the paddock and later let him gallop around the track under a strong grip by "Pinky" Brown, his exercise boy. The announcement over the public address system that Whirlaway would gallop around the track brought cheers from some 3,000 customers who stayed to look over the stretch express train. He was applauded as he came through the stretch with his head bent under Brown reins.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—OCEAN BLUE, $10.50, $6.80, $5.40; ALAKING, $8.40, $5.90; KANSAS, $6.70.

OCEAN BLUE forged to the front at once, drew clear, was not threatened at any stage and closed under a mild hand ride. ALAKING was caught between CHOPPY SEA and BOLD IRISHMAN and was pulled up sharply approaching the backstretch, rallied gamely and then weakened. CHOPPY SEA had speed for a half while racing on the inside and tired. BOLD IRISHMAN raced close up on the outside for three-quarters and weakened badly through the stretch.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LANTE, $15.60, $6.30, $3.80; BROOKLANDVILLE, $3.90, $2.80; OUR FLORENCE, $2.90.

LANTE came to the inside when placed to a drive, gained gradually, responded to intermittent punishment and won going away. BROOKLANDVILLE lacked early speed, came wide for racing room while improving his position and closed gamely, but was no match for the winner. OUR FLORENCE set a good pace, saved ground, but weakened in the closing stages. WIRE ME was well placed early and dropped back.

CHALLANTE saved ground to take command at the first turn, drew out and was shaken up to hold MISRULE safe. MISRULE moved up menacingly, but hung in the final test. CANDLE ENDS was shut off by the winner going to the first turn and weakened after being hard used. NAREBELL was not a serious factor.

Dear Al:

Of course that prominent trainer I referred to ten days ago was mixed up in a stimulating case was Guy Bedwell. Well, he was given a 60-day suspension last Monday night, but few, if any, of the racing writers know that the Maryland Racing Commission had made the ruling until yesterday morning. After hemming and hawing for more than a week about Brother Bedwell and Magic, the commissioners finally gave the suspensions out in the middle of the night without as much as telling, other than some favorites, that there was to be an announcement. Just why they held back on Bedwell is not known. In the case of Trainer George Hamilton, some time back, he was suspended within two days of a positive saliva test. Furthermore, Bedwell runs a horse today and his son, Buster, is listed as the trainer. Bedwell is not denied the privileges of the clubhouse and grandstand which, in my book, makes the ruling about as effective as suspending a schoolboy for the Christmas holidays. "He doesn't care to do any more than he has to," James FitzSimmons commented after King Cole required 1:55 2-5 to negotiate a mile and one furlong at Pimpico yesterday, "but he's fit and ready for the Preakness." Ogden Phipps' colt, victorious in the Paumonok Handicap in his first start of the season and third in the Wood Memorial Stakes in his only other outing, was sent through his trial by Jockey Johnny Gilbert, who will be his pilot Saturday in the Maryland Jockey Club's great spring special. Equipped with blinkers, the son of Pharamond II and Golden Melody began his workout at the eighth pole and stepped the opening quarter in :23 3-5. He was timed the half in :49 and the three-quarters in 1:15. While making the turn out of the backstretch, he began easing himself up and Gilbert whanged him with the whip. Kong Cole then went to the mile in 1:41 3-5 and the full route in 1:55 2-5. He was eased up the mile and a quarter in 2:11. This was the only trial of a Preakness candidate noted during the training hours. BILL.

First race—PRETTY LADY should have won her last. She has the speed and will make no mistakes here. HORN has been threatening and is a threat. SHE DAST for the show end.

Second race—TANTRUM turned in an encouraging race here on Monday and is good as anything. MISS IDENTIFY will draw plenty of play and is dangerous. BIG JACK should go well.

Third race—DUNDRILLIN likes this jumping course and should turn back a field of this sort. FATTY earned his way last year and belongs close. TAM O' SHANTER is due to improve.

Fourth race—I'm going to try to put over a long one in this field. WAR SHADOW closed with a bold rush in a recent race and looks the best of these maidens. SILVER ROCKET ran well last out. JACOTTE for the show.

Fifth race—CAPE COD appears best of these sprinters. He is capable of carrying top weight of 116 pounds to victory. The Christiana Stable's SKY LANE and ESCOLAR are formidable and belong close. BARRYMORE should be third.

Sixth race—MIOLAND, despite the 129-pound assignment, seems best in the Dixie. He worked a mile in 1:39 2-5 yesterday. DIT has speed and may be the one to catch. HALTAL to take care of the show end.

Seventh race—BURNER has won two this year and is fit as hands make horses. Needs only to get off the reserve list. ROCKY MEADOW and SEALOCH to battle it out for the place and show.

Eighth race—SAY JUDGE gets the call in the day's finale. Needs only the right handling. MONEY MUDDLE and HOWARD to fill out the money bracket.

Best bet—PRETTY LADY.

Chrysler Head Predicts Rise In Auto Prices

By the Associated Press

New York, May 6.—K. T. Keller, president of Chrysler Corporation, predicted today a rise in the price of the company's cars, higher taxes and lower profits while the big automobile-making company directs all possible energies toward the United States' defense program.

Addressing stockholders, in connection with the report for the first three months of this year, Keller described Chrysler's intention to employ 38,000 men in turning out Government contracts now aggregating $196,000,000, and added:

"Under conditions prevailing today and in immediate prospect, it appears the activities of your corporation are destined to become increasingly diverted to the needs of the defense program.

Defense Work Cited

"Your management from the very beginning has recognized the paramount importance of defense work and is cooperating in every way with the Government authorities in the furthering of their program.

"The necessary diversion of so large a part of our efforts from the production of motor vehicles for civilian use to the production of various munitions calls for many adjustments which all of us must prepare to meet in the interest of national defense.

"It is certain to involve more or less inconvenience to the public and our dealers. Higher prices to the public on our products, restricted volume of business for the dealers, higher taxes and lower profits for stockholders, are among the consequences naturally to be anticipated."

Quarter Net Slumps

Chrysler Corporation reported net earnings in the March quarter amounted to $9,561,962, equal to $2.20 a share on the common stock, compared with $15,742,388, or $3.61 a share, in the first three months of 1940.

The drop in net was accounted for principally by increased taxes, higher costs of sales and exclusion of operations from foreign subsidiaries from the report.

In the latest quarter the corporation set aside $8,600,000 for income and excess profits taxes, compared with a tax bill of $4,750,000 last year. Cost of sales increased ot $322,197,-953 from $198,831,555 a year ago. Depreciation and amortization of $3,994,347 were charged to the cost of sales this year, compared with $10,-102,838 in the like period of 1940.

The corporation's sales in the first quarter aggregated $252,78,166, compared with $333,640,323 a year ago.

Directors declared a dividend of $1.50 a share on the common stock, payable June 14, to stock of record May 17. A similar amount was paid in the preceding quarter and $1.25 a share at this time last year.

W. A. Brown is Named U. S. Steel Official

New York, May 6.—The retirement of George K. Leet as secretary of the United States Steel Corporation and the appointment of William Averell Brown to the post was announced today.

The new secretary has been a member of the corporation's law department since 1917 and assistant general solicitor since 1918.

Leet was hired by the late Judge Elbert Henry Gary, chairman of the board, to be his secretary in 1911. He was secretary of the organization for more than 19 years.

Emil Schram, RFC Chairman, Accepts Big Board Presidency

Closer Cooperation Between Wall Street And Capital Seen

By the Associated Press

Emil Schram, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, last night accepted the presidency of the New York Stock Exchange.

Schram said he would continue, temporarily, to act also as chairman of the RFC and as special aide of E. R. Stettinius, of the Office of Production Management.

Schram said in a statement:

"The governors of the New York Stock Exchange have tendered me the presidency of that institution, and I have agreed to accept it, subject to certain conditions having to do with steps that are now being taken in connection with improving the administration of the organization."

Schram said the exchange committee had assured him "ample time" for continuing his Government work until successors are appointed.

Jesse Jones, Federal Loan administrator, who made Schram RFC chairman, two years ago, also issued a statement congratulating Schram and the exchange, and saying "all of us in Government will miss Emil."

Choice of Special Committee

New York, May 6 (AP).—Emil Schram, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, has been approved by the board of governors of the New York Stock Exchange as the next president of that institution.

Schram would take the post vacated by William McC. Martin, jr., who left the Exchange last month for a year's service under the Selective Service Act.

Schram was said to be the unanimous choice of the special committee assigned to the task of choosing a successor to Martin and to consider the proposals for sweeping reorganization of the administration of the Exchange.

Formal approval of Schram cannot be given until the first meeting of the new board of governors, which is expected to be held May 19, but the special committee, it was learned, presented its findings to an informal meeting of governors yesterday and all those present signified their approval of Schram.

Schram was born in Peru, Ind., 47 years ago and has been with the

EMIL SCHRAM

Reconstruction Finance Corporation since 1933. He was first chief of the drainage levee and irrigation division. He became chairman in 1939 when Jesse Jones became Federal loan administrator and later Secretary of Commerce.

On leaving high school Schram went to work for a coal and lumber dealer who a few years later gave him a job of draining 5,000 acres of swamp land along the Illinois River. Out of this experience he eventually became chairman of the National Drainage Association, which brought him into the RFC as an expert on irrigation projects.

Sources close to the Stock Exchange described the selection of Schram as likely to usher in a "new era" of cooperation between Wall Street and Washington.

With the volume of trading recently shrunk to the lowest levels since the Spanish-American War, Wall Streeters said that important changes must be forthcoming in Stock Exchange operations of the market place is to continue its previous function in the Nation's financial structure.

The Schram choice, therefore, was said to represent a revolutionary move in an effort to remove any spots of friction between the financial district and the Securities and Exchange Commission that may be hampering the securities business.

Bawl St. Journal To Be Perpetrated Again This Year

Special Dispatch to The Post

New York, May 6.—Plans are being rushed in Wall Street for the publication of another "Bawl Street Journal," the hardy annual which appears every spring, on the date selected by the Bond Club of New York for the outing of that organization.

In the not-too-formal "release for publication" issued today by the publication committee, hints were conveyed on what the editors fondly hope will be the laughing material of the bond men at the outing.

"Do men bite dogs? Did not a student at college recently send his father in Wall Street a check to pay the father's expenses for the current month?"

"Will Stock Exchange business pick up, now that the Securities and Exchange Commission has ordered competitive bidding for seats? Is it true that brokers have offered the old Share Mart to New York City to replace the Aquarium? Will Private Martin again head the Exchange, able because of reduced volume to run it from camp on his Saturday afternoons off?

"What (or who) are the prospects for the Reconstruction Finance Corporation's newly formed nation-wide retail sales organizations? Will President Roosevelt and the LAMB (Labor Mediation Board) settle the long-standing investors' strike and bring prosperity back to the Street?"

R. C. A. Defense Work Reported On Schedule

By the Associated Press

New York, May 6.—David Sarnoff, president of Radio Corporation of America, told stockholders today the company's construction of defense equipment—radio and electronic apparatus for the Army, Navy and Air Force—is "on schedule" and, in some cases, likely to be ahead of the expected delivery time.

"The total defense orders and commitments received by the RCA Manufacturing Co. to date," said Sarnoff, "amount to approximately $36,500,000.

Sarnoff reported March quarter net profit of $2,734,572, or 14 cents a common share, compared with $2,312,893, or 11 cents a share, in the like 1940 period.

Sarnoff said that "every measure will be taken to help safeguard the public services and the lawful rights of the company" under the new regulations issued by the Federal Communications Commission on network broadcasting.

The policy to be adopted and the action taken, he said, could be determined only after study of the commission's 150-page printed report, which, in effect, ordered the National Broadcasting Co., wholly owned by RCA, to dispose of one of its networks within 90 days, and told NBC and the Columbia Broadcasting System to alter contract arrangements with associated stations.

A resolution offered from the floor which would have asked Congress for an investigation of the commission and approve any steps officers of the corporation took, was withdrawn at the request of Mr. Sarnoff. He said that because the situation affected the entire broadcasting industry, a general study of the commission's report and careful decision on any action taken first would be necessary.

Niles Trammel, president of NBC, said in answer to a question from the floor that NBC was negotiating for a return of A. S. C. A. P. music.

Trammel said NBC paid A. S. C. A. P. slightly less than $500,000 in 1940 and, when the agreement expired at the end of the year, A. S. C. A. P. demanded $2,500,000 for 1941. This amount, Trammel said, would have "disrupted the industry."

Rails, Oils, Steels Lead Lively Advance In Second Largest Turnover of Year

New York, May 6.—The stock market today took its cue from soaring commodities and stepped into one of the broadest and fastest rallies of the year.

Rails, oils, steels and specialties were in the forefront, many at new 1941 tops, with gains of 1 to more than 2 points. Leaders were under the best in some instances at the close but many emerged around the peaks of the day.

The list tilted forward from the start as the idea began to grow that selling pessimism had been overdone, notwithstanding bad war news, tax fears and labor worries. Hopeful business inspiration included mounting retail spending, predictions freight loadings soon would touch the largest weekly totals since 1939 and indications steel mill operations would push up briskly in the near future.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was up .6 of a point at 40, duplicating a recovery of April 3. Individual issues changing hands numbered 789, against 654 Monday. Transfers of 907,940 shares compared with 415,130 yesterday and were the second highest for 1941 to date.

Oils responded to the belief the British would have to come to America for much of their supplies if the Iraq conflict excluded them from the important Near East fields. Recently rising domestic crude and gasoline quotations were also stimulating.

Wall Street was cheerful over word Emil Schram, chairman of the R. F. C., had been approved by stock exchange governors as the next president of that institution. The thought here was that this move might inaugurate an era of friendlier relations between the financial sector and Washington and remove the pronounced "defeatism" that has clouded markets in past months.

Savage Arms got into new high ground with an advance of 1¾ on announcement stockholders would be asked to vote on a 4-for-1 split-up. General Motors was up a point in the wake of the $1 dividend declared after Monday's close. Chrysler tacked on ¾ and the board later voted a dividend of 1.50 a share. The same amount was paid in March and $1.25 in June a year ago.

Among stocks in the "new high" category were Santa Fe, Southern Pacific, Atlantic Coast Line, Standard Oils of California, Indiana and New Jersey, Phillips Petroleum, Ohio Oil, Pure Oil, Socony-Vacuum, Skelly Oil, Panhandle Producing and preferred of Pere Marquette and Nickel Plate. In front also were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Sears Roebuck, Douglas Aircraft, Du Pont, Allied Chemical, Phelps Dodge and Westinghouse.

North American was an exception, slipping to a new year's low. Other utilities did little or nothing.

Upward sprinters in the Curb were Humble Oil, Gulf Oil, Aluminum of America, Jones & Laughlin and American Cyanimid "B." Volume here was around 129,000 shares vs. 56,000 yesterday.

Railroad bonds found the lights green all along the line in today's market and moved swiftly on to the highest prices of the year on average. The turnover mounted to $14,590,800, par value, the best since April 3, when the carriers likewise established the former 1941 peak and trading swelled to $19,531,400. The volume yesterday was $9,079,-100.

Expending freight and passenger traffic, with prospects of better income and improved credit with which to buy equipment ot handle the still larger volume expected to devolop from the national defense program, stimulated bullish enthusiasm for the rails, brokers said.

Urgent Buying Whips Staples To New Highs

By the Associated Press

The new wave of buying in essential commodity futures took on the color of urgency and some notable advances were recorded yesterday in the New York exchanges and in the Chicago Board of Trade.

Wheat soared up to seasonal highs, closing 2 to 2¼ cents a bushel higher. Corn was ⅛ to ⅜ of a cent up.

The advance in the premier grain at Chicago had this association with a rise of $1.60 to $1.95 in cotton futures at New York:

Both staples, according to trading sources, were avidly bought in the belief Congress would approve a pending measure to provide 85 per cent of parity loan rates to growers.

Other striking advances in Eastern markets included: Cottonseed oil, up .39 to .44 of a cent a pound; cocoa up .21 to .24 of a cent; rubber up .40 to .55 of a cent; hides up .14 to .25 of a cent.

Rises in the import staples in this group were given impetus by growing fears of interruption of shipments due to diversion of bottoms to war supplies transportation.

Broad Buying in Grains

Chicago, May 6 (AP).—Broad general buying stemming from the anticipated Senate passage of the bill providing crop loans at 85 per cent of parity pulled all grain values higher today with wheat and soybeans shattering previous high marks of the year.

Wheat opened strong when word was passed that the Senate would consider the 85 per cent bill today in lieu of the House passed Fulmer bill which would provide loans at 75 per cent of parity. Adding to the enthusiasm of buyers was word that plentiful moisture in winter wheat territory Southwest might result in black stem rust damage and also delay Northwestern spring wheat seeding.

With grain prices advancing generally, soy beans started a solo upward sprint which carried quotations 4 cents a bushel higher to the best levels since December, 1939, when the May delivery sold at $1.31½ a bushel.

WHY ON EARTH DO THEY DO IT?

. . . take it for granted that their insurance is just right

It's easy to be sort of lax about insurance, particularly if you've never had a loss. "Guessing" that it is all in order can be awfully costly guesswork. You may have too much, or you may have too little. It's bad business either way.

Moral: Don't risk leaving it to disaster to show where you stand . . . Let us go over your insurance situation BEFORE a loss comes.

2 Lose Lives In Fairfax Auto Accident

In Fairfax County, Va., motor accidents claimed two lives yesterday.

R. D. Heckler, 51-year-old contractor of Highland Springs, Va., was killed when a truck backed into him and fractured his skull near Centerville, Va., police reported.

Walter Bickford, 17, of Cheverley, Md., died in Emergency Hospital of injuries suffered Saturday when his automobile overturned in Fairfax. He was brought to the hospital by the Fairfax rescue squad.

Yesterday's accident occurred about 4 p. m. while Heckler was at work on a road-widening job on the Lee Highway, 2 miles east of Centerville, police said. Police said the truck, employed on the road job, pulled into the highway, then backed up. A steel brace on the rear of the truck struck Heckler, and knocked him to the ground. His body was taken to Groff's funeral home in Fairfax.

Police said a preliminary investigation showed the death was accidental, and added that the driver of the truck, Henry C. Wells, 23, of Clifton Station, Va., would not be held.

Ralph L. Axselle, 27-year-old Greyhound bus driver, of Richmond, was absolved of responsibility in connection with the death of Gene L. Baker, 23, of 3901 Ingomar Street Northwest, at an inquest conducted in Alexandria police court yesterday. Dr. J. A. Sims, coroner, issued a verdict of accidental death.

Baker died at Alexandria Hospital Sunday night, about an hour after his auto collided with the bus on Route 1 about 3 miles south of Alexandria. A companion, Miss Jane Simon, 18, of the 5200 block of Thirty-ninth Street Northwest, suffered a broken arm and lacerations in the crash, and is still a patient in Emergency Hospital.

Several witnesses, corroborated the testimony of Axselle, who told Fairfax County police that Baker apparently attempted to make a U-turn as the bus swung out to pass his auto, and the heavy vehicle crashed head-on into the side of the light sedan. Among witnesses who testified in the bus driver's behalf was Meade Palmer, of 103 East Cary Street, Richmond, who was a passenger on the bus.

Leon Dunie, 38, of Lancaster, Pa., suffered possible pelvic and leg fractures when he was pinned in his car yesterday after striking a tree at Bladensburg, Md. Rescue squad members and a garageman extricated the injured man. He was taken to Casualty Hospital.

Lumber Firms Cited by U. S. In Trust Suit

The Department of Justice yesterday asked the District Court to smash an alleged near-monopoly which fixed the price of 90 per cent of the nation's $2,000,000,000 a year commercial lumber industry.

Named defendant in a civil suit filed under provisions of the Sherman Antitrust Act was the National Lumber Manufacturers Association, which was described as a federated association which included the Southern Pine Association, the Western Pine Association, the West Coast Lumbermen's Association, the California Redwood Association and 110 smaller groups. Members of the groups were alleged to produce 90 per cent of America's commercial lumber.

The Government complaint asserted that since October 1, 1935, the lumbermen have conspired to restrain interstate trade by curtailing production, fixing noncompetitive prices, having their trade marks made a requirement of city building codes and by other measures.

The court was asked to declare that the acts of the national association violate the antitrust laws and to issue an injunction permanently forbidding the practices complained of.

The national, Western pine and West Coast groups have been under indictment since last September on charges of limiting production and fixing prices.

The complaint was filed by Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold, chief of the antitrust division; Assistant Attorneys General Tom C. Clark and Harold F. Collins and District Attorney Edward M. Curran.

"The blue army objective will be to attach the Detroit area —if you capture it you can save us freight charges by driving home some tanks from the factories there!"

Listen!

with Glynn

As if he didn't have enough to do being the orchestra leader for three of CBS's most important shows—the "Hit Parade," "Helen Hayes' Theater" and "We, the People"—Mark Warnow is planning on giving a Carnegie Hall concert late this month.

Mr. Warnow is reversing the usual tradition that leads popular musicians to these sacred precincts of music. Most of them, like Paul Whiteman and Benny Goodman, achieve a great reputation first and then risk a Carnegie Hall concert. But while Mark has made scads of money—it's about $50,000 a year—his programs have been of the type that have kept him in comparative anonymity. And when he assembles his symphonic orchestra, chorus and soloists for the concert, it will be in advance of his personal fame.

As you can see, radio has done pretty well by Mr. Warnow since he started out with CBS as a staff violinist in 1928. Directors early found out that when music just didn't sound right somehow, Warnow could make a few suggestions that would set it right. And soon the network gave him a free hand at directing his own musical shows in which he tried all sorts of experiments which since have led to his commercial success.

It's a funny thing about musicians and Carnegie Hall concerts. What with rehearsals, special arrangements and other fees that he has to pay, the concert stands to cost Warnow about $11,000. The best that he can gross from the thing is $6,500.

Here are the cards of a Kansas City banditry; we are told that North and South reached a contract of four hearts, but Ken Dickey doesn't say how they got there. Three no trump requires no effort. Both sides were vulnerable, and South was dealer.

♠ Q107 ♡ 73 ◇ A8653 ♣ J82	NORTH WEST EAST SOUTH	♠ J983 ♡ QJ9 ◇ 97 ♣ Q1097
	♠ AK4 ♡ AK852 ◇ KJ10 ♣ 54

West committed high treason against the bridge books and opened his fourth-best diamond, leaving low from five including the ace. It later proved to be a happy crime. Declarer won in his hand and played the king of hearts; the queen fell from East. This worried declarer, who had believed his contract certain. He had to lose a spade and the ace of diamonds. It was therefore imperative that he give up no more than one trump trick. If East's play were true, West was placed with four trumps, including the jack, nine, originally. With this holding, declarer would have to lose two heart tricks unless he led a low trump toward dummy's ten at once.

No sooner planned than played, declarer's disillusionment came as swiftly. East won the heart ten with his jack, led a diamond to his partner's ace and trumped the third round with his heart nine. With still no place to put his spade loser, declarer was set one trick, losing two trumps, a spade and a diamond. The false card worked again.
